Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 12; Agra, Calcutta, and Madras, December 8.

A Calcutta telegram of December 10 asserts on official authority that up to the evening of the 26th November no collision had taken place between the troops of the Ameer Shere Ali and his nephew, Abdurrahman Khan. What is the truth of the matter? Stories from Cabul are notoriously untrustworthy, but the account of the great battle of November 13 was so circumstantially given, and wore so likely a countenance, that to doubt it would have seemed a stretch of scepticism. There were 40,000 men on each side: Abdurrahman Khan was badly beaten, all his generals except Surwur Khan were said to have fallen on the field, his troops had gone over to the enemy, who of course had seized all his warlike stores, and he himself had fled to Turkistan. And all this seemed to have accounted for Shere Ali's non-appearance at Peshawar. And now we are officially informed that up to the latest date no such battle had occurred. Are we to suppose that the story grew out of the conjectures started by Shere Ali's inability to meet the Viceroy at Peshawar?

THERE is little news of interest from any part of India. In Bombay people were speculating on Sir S. Northcote's successor at the India-office, on the chances of Lord Mayo's recall, and looking out for that nobleman's arrival. Great preparations were making for this last event, Lord Napier coming in by the way for some small share of the honours mainly reserved for the incoming Viceroy. The latter was to open the Broach Exhibition on the 22nd December. The Times of India rather regrets that Mr. Bright was not after all to preside at the India-office, though it had "ceased to expect his appointment after his very strong denunciation of the East India Company at Edinburgh."

At Aden Lord Mayo for the first time touched the limits of his new realm. His reception there both by Europeans and Asiatics left nothing to desire. A body of wild-looking Arabs in their native costume offered a picturesque contrast to the uniforms of our own troops. Two triumphal arches and a long avenue with bands of music made up the rest of the entertainment, which was half in honour of Lord Napier. Both noblemen made appropriate speeches.

FROM the famine districts we have no fresh news of importance. The chiefs of Meywar, Bhurtpore, Tonk, Kerowlie, Ulwar, and Kishenghur, have abolished for varying periods the transit duties on grain passing through their dominions. Large quantities of grain were being sent from Delhi to Bikaner, Jeypore, and Jodhpore, although even at Delhi wheat was from 9½ to 10 seers a rupee, and would soon be yet dearer if no rain fell. In Central India the prospects of the crops were not improving. Rajpootana is past praying for. The scarcity of water in that dry region seems to have been aggravated by a want of wells of sufficient depth. Suffering has begotten lawlessness. Troops have already been sent out by the Indore durbar to guard the frontier against bands of famished outlaws. In some parts of Bombay the rubbee crops were withering for want of rain.

It seems that after all General Wilde's appointment to the post of Military Secretary at Madras, now held by General Marshall, is still an unborn event. At any rate the present holder of the post is said to have no intention of leaving it just yet.

THE Friend of India again takes up the topic of a Wahabee plot in Bengal. It declares that the Bengal Government is "alive to its duty," and making good use of its detective police. One Mussulman, "said to be an idiot"—a mild way of stating a self-evident fact—lately posted a traitorous proclamation on the gate of the Chittagong Collectorate. On the other hand, even the Friend can find comfort in the fact that many Mohammedans, however impatient of our rule, are wise enough to bow to destiny. One of these gentlemen, Moolvie Abbas Ali by name, has been publicly denouncing the preachers of a crescentade against the English.

ELSEWHERE we have commented on Sindiah's apt remarks about our rule in India. One little phrase of his, thrown in by the way, might serve as a key to the main difference between native and English rule. "They will bear more from me than from you," he said, in answer to his interrogator. A native will bear more from his own countrymen than from strangers, just as a son will bear more from his own father than from an outsider claiming rule over him. The thing is inevitable, and only by keeping it well in mind can we hope to make our rule tolerable as well as righteous.

ON what foundations rest not a few of the incidents that go to make up history, has once more been curiously illustrated by certain documents bearing on the defence of Azimghur during the Mutiny. That transaction has hitherto been connected with the name of Mr. Venables, the indigo-planter, who is generally supposed to have held single-handed, with the aid of his own ryots, a position abandoned by its official protectors. We can still remember how Lord Derby enlarged in the Upper House on Mr. Venables' heroic defence of Azimghur for six weeks against an overwhelming array of rebels. The author of the Red Pamphlet told a pretty tale of the same hero returning by himself to his own estates, when the civil authorities feared to go with him, assembling his ryots, and marching at their head to rescue the indigo planters and poor Christians who had been left behind in great peril at Azimghur. Other historians have followed the same lead, and so Mr. Venables had historical greatness thrust on his memory without having really done much to deserve it. Such at least is the impression left on us by the new documents in question. According to these the true hero after all was not Mr. Venables, but Mr. Dunne, who was requested by Mr. Ross, the Judge of Ghazepore, to take charge of a small force of native volunteers destined to hold Azimghur. Mr. Dunne, accompanied by Mr. Venables, whom he had at length persuaded to share his movements, set off on the 15th of June for Azimghur, where he stayed, doing good service with his sixty-five men until the civil authorities could return to the station. Thus it seems, that Mr. Venables, instead of setting forth alone on his bold venture, would not have gone at all but for Mr. Dunne's entreaties, and really placed himself under the latter's orders. This new version of the story is confirmed in part by the statements of other witnesses than Mr. Dunne alone. The documents before us are not very clear or full in respect of the Azimghur doings. We are not told for instance that Mr. Venables did not arm his ryots or do good service at a time of great peril. Nor do we find that the civil authorities did all they might reasonably have been expected to do. Certain however it is that Mr. Dunne was a regular fire-eater, always ready to fight or to go on some perilous enterprise. Sir H. Havelock, as Adjutant-general of the Shahabad Field Force, described him in 1858 as "a volunteer whose sheer love of fight has kept him in the field, whenever there have been hard knocks, for the last eighteen months." His "courage and modesty," says Mr. A. Money, "won for him the esteem and respect of every man in the force." If he has not yet been duly rewarded, it is not too late to repair the oversight.

FROM the first day of this year Switzerland has been brought into closer relations with England by means of a common money-order system. Henceforth any money order procurable at any office in the United Kingdom can be made payable at any place in Switzerland. The same thing holds of orders payable in this country from places in Switzerland. The commission chargeable on these orders will be the same as on orders issued and paid within the United Kingdom. Ten pounds is the limit of value for any single money-order. Here is an arrangement which commends itself at sight to every observer. We are not aware of the exact degree in which it is likely to benefit either country; but the benefit, we may presume, is not small. At any rate it is found to be worth our while to make such a bargain with so small a country as Switzerland, our trade with which cannot be very large. If this be so, how is it that our greatest dependency still remains without any link of this sort to bind it to the mother country? The money-order system has for some time been at work between England and her Australian colonies. It is now extended to a foreign country whose name hardly figures in our commercial returns. Why is India still left out in the cold? Certainly not because she would fail to repay us for the courtesy. The difference of exchange between the two countries forms, we suppose, the great stumbling-block to such an arrangement. The argument may have some force if it be a law of nature that the relative values of English and Indian money should be perpetually fluctuating, so that any interference with the working of that law would tell against the interests of our trade. But being sceptical on that point, we cannot see why the principle on which Government pays certain demands on it at a fixed rate of exchange for the rupee should not be extended to money-orders also. Is there any sound economical reason why the rupee should not stand for all ordinary purposes as the exact equivalent of two shillings English? A good many people in the public services have to make remittances to their friends in this country, a process under present conditions often effected at a serious loss. The modest savings from an officer's pay, for instance, are apt to get largely docked on their way home for the benefit of his family. A humble railway official may have to pay more than a pound for the privilege of sending home ten. In all such cases the money-order system would prove an undoubted boon. The banking interest ought not to complain if one hundred rupees might henceforth be remitted home as ten pounds, for payment of one shilling to the post-office; so long as no single order were to be issued for more than a hundred rupees.

THOSE who, like ourselves, are slow to magnify distant dangers in the presence of others at least as great and much nearer at hand, will be glad to find their views upheld by so wise and calm a student as Mr. Grant Duff. In his "Political Survey," which we hope to discuss ere long at greater length, he looks on Russian progress in Central Asia as a thing at once natural and justifiable, on which we for our part must keep quiet watch, neither dreading it too much nor seeking rashly to arrest it by force of arms:—

When we have taken every possible precaution the situation will still be a perilous one. But when has our situation in India been other than a perilous one? India is a barrel of gunpowder, round which sparks are perpetually flying. The neighbourhood of Russia adds at the worst a few sparks more. Society in our Eastern Empire is stirred by forces as little understood as those which produce the earthquakes of the material world. I suppose no month passes in which, to say nothing of other alarming intelligence, tidings do not come to the Indian Viceroy of some new religious movement, which may be as harmless as possible, but which may blow everything into fragments. I wonder how many people have ever reflected how much trouble might at any moment be caused by a personage whose name is so little known out of Indian circles as the Akhoond of Swat? But there is another way of looking at the whole matter. Is it quite so sure that Russia must be always hostile to this country? Is it not possible that there may come a time when we shall understand each other in Asia, and strengthen each other's hands? Many a day must pass before Bokhara becomes a bed of roses for any Christian ruler; and if Russia can trouble us, we can assuredly return the compliment. It would be very premature to do anything at present; but I cannot help thinking that the day may come when we may hear of a co-operative policy in Central Asia, as we have heard already of a co-operative policy at Peking.

A NATIVE CRITIC ON BRITISH RULE IN INDIA.

WHEN Sir John Lawrence was gathering opinions from various quarters on the comparative merits of English and native rule in India, a good many people were naturally curious to hear what leading natives had to say on the subject—to see, in short, how the man would be painted by the lion. For the time their curiosity came to nought. It was the man who always painted both, often quite dispassionately, with a due regard for the shortcomings of his own kind. Still, it seemed to many that the series of portraits lacked completeness for want of a few contributions from the other side. An attempt however has at length been made to supply the missing chapters of the report. No less an authority than the Maharajah of Gwalior has been allowed to speak through Colonel Daly on a subject which probably few natives could have discussed with greater fairness and wider intelligence. And what way after all tends his summing up? Just to confirm the conclusions at which every fair-minded Englishman who has thought out the matter for himself must have already arrived. Fortunati nimium sua si bona norint is the moral of his tale, as it was that of the picture previously painted to the Viceroy's order. The lion, in fact, has painted the man in colours even more taking than the man himself had ventured to use.

The value of the British Government to the Chiefs and people of India is warmly acknowledged, to begin with. "The feeling of order and security which pervades all classes is a substance—a silent working power never attained under any previous rule; and as nations of India still are, it would be impossible for any native Government to attain it." Our prestige fills men's minds to an incredible extent. Less than fifty years ago travellers from Gwalior to the Deccan had to encounter all kinds of danger and annoyance from Thugs, robbers, and the black-mail levied on them by the States they passed through. "Now all pass through without danger or hindrance—the poorest traveller feels as safe as the richest," for both are protected alike. "I never," says Sindiah, "put myself on the mail-cart, unattended and perhaps unknown, without appreciating the strength of your rule. It is a substance—I leave Gwalior without apprehension, and my absence occasions no distrust." What more telling witness could be borne to the merits of our rule in this important respect as compared with any native rule recorded in history?

Again, there is a general faith, he admits, in our justice. Our Government, "though often hard, curt, and even inconsiderate in its treatment of the prejudices, or, if you like, the weaknesses of chiefs; yet, on the whole, treats them with a liberality which they never show one another. And now that annexation is at an end, we breathe freely, even when our failings are probed and shortcomings discussed." And in the same way Sindiah contrasts the "unity of feeling and loyalty one to another" which prevail among our officials with the disjointed and irregular working of native governments. He is specially struck with the careful way in which we "husband our experience," our records being so preserved that the "current of business" is seldom much affected by the acts of our officials. The servants, on the other hand, of a native government, "pay no deference to the records of their predecessors, if such can be said to exist." Each new official strives to undo what has been done by those before him, and the links of responsibility that bind all parts of our government together are hardly ever found under native rule.

Our subjects, too, are "perhaps richer and more prosperous than the same classes in native States." And yet, for all this, we "are not popular." Was it ever otherwise, could it ever be otherwise, in the case of any civilised country brought under foreign rule? If every Englishman in India were a model of perfection, if our government in India were absolutely faultless, should we not still hear the same complaint from natives of all classes? Is not the difference of race between Celt and Saxon the one predominant cause of Irish discontent? Was it mis-government or national hatred that kept Venetia restless under Austrian rule? Of course we are unpopular, and incidental reasons for our unpopularity are not far to seek. "The people," says Sindiah, "are bewildered by your legislation; you coil Act upon Act, code upon code, with sections innumerable. You never leave them alone. I am told that your district officers have less intercourse with the ryots than formerly; there is more of system and less sympathy nowadays. In your desire to press on improvements you overlook the vast difference between us and you."

What could be truer than all this? And yet the princely critic tells us nothing new. We have seen it all before in reports from our own countrymen. Sindiah's name, however, serves to impress the fact on many minds. We do certainly legislate too fast in many things for the popular Indian sentiment. We should hardly be true to our national instincts if on this question we were always or mostly in harmony with native requirements. Our very sense of duty, our Roman tendency to train others in our own ways, tempt us frequently too far ahead of our subjects, if we look at the matter from their point of view. And sometimes it really seems our bounden duty to shock native prejudice for its own ultimate good. Sindiah himself allows that some of our reforms have been "excellent," such as the abolition of suttee, child-murder, and so on. Others however seem purely "meddlesome." Our attempts, for instance, to curtail marriage expenses have been really evaded and misunderstood by the Sikhs, many of whom ascribe them to a set purpose of "upsetting caste and custom." "Why not leave them," asks Sindiah, "to spend money as they please?" Again, we are asking the chiefs to join us in putting down pilgrimages and fairs at shrines during the hot season on the plea of course that such things breed and disseminate cholera. The motive is good, but our way of rendering it into action is regarded askance both by Chiefs and people. They cannot believe that we have honestly set forth the whole plea. As for the pilgrims, they will "throng more and more, thinking that the end is at hand." "Why raise the question?" asks Sindiah. "You might have contented yourselves with adopting on the spot every measure which seemed requisite for sanitation. This would have been gradually understood."

The same experienced critic pays us a high compliment in protesting against our abandonment of native princes to their own guidance so soon as we have prepared the country for their rule. He hears, for instance, that the Chief of Bhurtপুর being of age, the Political Agent is to be withdrawn. This sudden withdrawal "puzzles" him. Knowing nothing of the young Chief himself, he "knows enough of Hindustani Courts and those who frequent them to be sure of the result. His treasury will be dissipated, the vultures will be everywhere, and eventually, to save him, there will ensue the necessity of inquiry and intervention." These remarks are specially worth considering, in view of the tendency of our rule to remove existing checks on the tyranny of native governments, and of the many occasions in the future when our true interests may be found clashing with the claims of native princes to do as they will with their own subjects. Sindiah, at any rate, is not for enabling his brother princes to govern unchecked by any supervision from the Paramount Power.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE TRIBES ON THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.

The Delhi Gazette holds that these tribes are far more useful to us, and may be made far more useful to us as friends than they are dangerous as enemies. We have seen what they can effect in the latter capacity. It is troublesome to have our frontier posts attacked, the districts harried, the villages molested and robbed, and kafilas interfered with. But, after all, these are matters of minor importance. It is not likely such practices will ever be wholly put down. Suppressed they should be of course and retribution exacted, but they cannot become matters of national or Imperial interest. As for an invasion of the plain country by these tribes in force, we know that alone they would never attempt it. They might, in the wake of an invading host, swoop down upon a prey, already deprived of the power of resistance; but of themselves, or backed by an Asiatic host, however numerous, they would not stand five minutes on the plain country against our disciplined troops. On the plains they are as helpless as a shark upon the shore, but on their native hills they are formidable. As a bulwark to British India, a key to lock the gates, and bar all ingress, these tribes are absolutely invaluable to us. As long as they will hold the passes for us, we need be under no apprehension of invasion. And that they might be so managed as to become most serviceable allies we are persuaded. It is for this reason that we deprecate any very severe measures, and it is for this reason that we heartily endorse the recent policy which has disappointed so many of our readers. We gain nothing by carrying fire and sword in among these people. We only sow the seeds of a blood feud which no time can obliterate, give rise to deep-seated feelings of revenge and enmity, which will for ever prevent a reconciliation. By showing these people that our troops can with comparative ease scale their heights and seize their fastnesses, by a little well-timed severity, but no excessive measures, we show them we are strong enough to punish and too powerful to be afraid of them. . . . It should be our policy to establish such a connection with them that we can, when it suits our purpose to do so, get them to close the passes, and when we have done that our position from Hazara to the sea coast of Sind will be simply impregnable.

MISRULE IN BARODA.

The Times of India remarks that the Gaicowar of Baroda, under the shadow and protection of the English rule, and under Sir Seymour Fitzgerald's very eyes, is, if we may place any trust in the concurrent testimony which reaches us upon the subject, miserably misruling the wretched people over whom he exercises immediate sovereignty. Now what are our relations with the Gaicowar, that we permit this misrule and these oppressions? He is maintained on his musnud by British forces, which protect him alike from the rebellion of his subjects, and from foreign aggression. Whatever treaty rights therefore may exist between this Prince and ourselves, it is certain that we have incurred grave responsibilities towards his people; for while we permit him to misrule, we do not permit them to rebel. The position is fraught with so much dishonour, that it ought not to last another day. The truth is we are always going to extremes in this country; but the other day our only true policy was to annex the native States, now it is to let native princes alone, to rule just as they please; instead of a political system of the Empire, strictly defining the rights and responsibilities of the paramount Power on the one hand, and the duties of the native princes on the other, the Empire is without law or code of any kind whatever. We are responsible before God and man for the misrule which we know prevails in some of the native States, while we take no steps to suppress it, but passively look on as though we had no interest therein whatever. Now, whatever may have been the case before the Mutiny, we became by that event the paramount Power in India, and as surely as we have become so should we insist upon honest rule in the Gaicowar's, and every other State, or make the present rulers give place to others. Our present inaction is not to be tolerated for a moment. From the Nizam down to the smallest princeling of the country we are bound to exact honest and just rule; and if one Nizam or Gaicowar refuse so to rule, he must give place to another prince who will. No secret lust of territory or hankering after native treasuries any longer embarrasses our arm. We have simply a duty to do. Of territory we have already got too much, and are ready to give some of it back to any native ruler who promises to rule it more wisely than ourselves. But we must and will have what in theory the Mogul Government ever claimed, and what we are strong enough to enforce—wise and just rule in the country. Oppression shall not be practised under the shadow of the English Throne by the native princes of India. Let them rule their territories justly, and they have nothing to fear from us. Let them rule otherwise, and as surely as we are the paramount Power shall they be swept from the musnud. As the determined opponents of the policy of annexation, and the chief instrument that wrung the adoption despatches from the Government of the country, we can afford to speak in terms that admit of no misconception. We would give back the Berars to his Highness the Nizam to-morrow; but we would make him clearly understand, at the same time, that we will tolerate no misrule therein. The sooner we come to a complete understanding upon this subject with every native Court in the country the better. There is no option left us but to do so while we maintain these Princes upon their thrones by English arms. If the Gaicowar cannot, or will not, rule his territories justly, we would give him twelve months' warning that we mean to depose him in favour of some other Prince of his family, or, failing in that, of some other dynasty altogether. A peremptory policy of this order to back up the remonstrances of our residents, who themselves should sometimes be native gentlemen, would not endanger, but would consolidate the Queen's Empire of India beyond all present belief.

EXTENT OF CULTIVATION IN ACRES.
Year.	Exotic Cotton.	Native Cotton.	Total.
1867-68 ... ..	761,757 6	1,114,708 29	1,876,465	35½
1868-69 ... ..	756,578 32	1,203,451 4	1,960,029	36½
Less than 1867-68	8,178 14
More than 1867-68	—	88,742 15	80,564	1

CROPS IN CANDIES AND POUNDS (784 lbs. per Candy).
Year.	Exotic Cotton.	Native Cotton.	Total.
1867-68 ... ..	66,749 172½	59,592 536½	126,341	759½
1868-69 ... ..	53,337 92½	55,830 683 9-16	109,167	756 5-16
Less than 67-8	13,412 79½	3,761 687 1-16	17,174	2 13-16

The total amount of arable land in 1867-68 was 14,244,591 acres 7½ gts.; and of land capable of producing cotton, 5,577,876 acres 28 gts. In 1868-69, the arable land amounted to 14,613,463 acres 19 gts., and that capable of producing cotton to 5,266,292 acres, 10½ gts. The area capable of producing cotton has thus decreased by 311,584 acres 18½ gts., although the area of cultivated land has increased by 368,872 acres 11½ gts., showing that other crops have supplanted the staple to some considerable extent. The following remarks are appended to the return by Dr. Forbes, Cotton Commissioner, under date the 1st instant:—"This return, which is published in accordance with the resolution of Government dated 16th January, 1867, is intended only to exhibit 'the extent of ground under cotton cultivation, as contrasted with the quantity cultivated during the preceding year,' without reference to the prospects of the yield, which will be given in the subsequent return due from the collectors by the 15th of next month. I may however mention, from information otherwise obtained, that I think there is reason to expect that the general outturn from this presidency will be equal to a tolerably fair average cotton crop, both as regards quantity and quality. In Goozerat cotton suffered considerably from the floods, more especially some of the finest districts near Broach; but I believe it is now seen that the damage so inflicted will prove much less serious than was at one time apprehended. The Kandesh crop may be recorded as somewhat more than a partial failure. The impression amongst the cultivators was that they could not realise more than half an average return, and my own observation of the district led me to believe that their estimate would prove correct. This deficiency will, however, I trust, be partly met by the better state of affairs in the South. The information reaching me weekly through departmental sources describes the prospect of the cotton crop in Dharwar as highly promising this season, more so than it has been for years back, judging from the strong and healthy appearance of the plants. Examination of the figures published in the return will show, with respect to the larger cotton-growing districts, that in Dharwar, including Belgaum and Kulludghee, there has been an increase in the total area of cotton cultivation as compared with the preceding year, amounting in round numbers to a hundred and thirty-three thousand and thirty-six acres. Guzerat cannot be correctly estimated, as I have not yet been furnished with the Collector of Ahmedabad's return, but in as far as Surat and Broach are concerned, there has been a decrease in cultivation of thirty-six thousand six hundred and three acres, and Kandesh likewise exhibits a decrease in cultivation as contrasted with the preceding year, amounting to twenty-five thousand two hundred and eighty-three acres."

Bengal.

LEGISLATIVE.—The Council of his Excellency the Governor-General met at Government House, Calcutta, on the 4th Dec., when the Bill to define and amend the law of evidence was referred to a select committee, with instructions to report in two months.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—We regret to hear from Rangoon that the state of Captain Sladen's health is very unsatisfactory, and that it is expected he will be obliged to go to England to recruit.

COLONEL BEADLE.—The Pioneer hears that Colonel Beadle has been upheld by the directors at home in his suspension of Mr. Wilson, late Chief Engineer of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway.

INDORE.—The Central India Times understands that it is the intention of the Maharajah Holkar to work the iron mines at Burwei, which were lately purchased by him from Government.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—Captain Greig, formerly of her Majesty's 93rd Highlanders, has obtained an appointment in the Forest Department, and will, in all probability, be appointed Assistant Conservator in the Dhoon.

BENGAL JAILS.—It appears from the Indian Daily News that a proposal to place the executive charge of all Bengal jails in the hands of the civil medical officers of stations has been sanctioned by the Government of India, and will come into effect on Jan. 1 next.

A PLOT AGAINST THE KING OF BURMAH.—In consequence of the discovery of a new plot against his life, the King of Burmah, it is stated, has ordered all persons entering the Palace to be searched three times, and finally by the Shang or Superintendent of the Royal residence.

GOSSIP ABOUT LORD MAYO.—We have received (says the Friend of India) from a very high Indian authority, who is of no party, the following account of his first impression of Lord Mayo, which is most hopeful for the future:—"Lord Mayo is a sensible-looking gentlemanly man, and gives me this impression, that he will do well and be a favourite in India. All those who have seen anything of him at the India-office are very favourably impressed, and Gladstone entirely approved the selection, with the remark that he never expected the present Government would make so good an appointment."

THE NEW SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTS.—The Indian Daily News mentions that a circular has lately been issued by the Government of India to all subordinate Governments and local administrations, desiring them to request all Treasury and account officers serving under them to submit a report on the operation of the new system of accounts introduced by Messrs. Foster and Whiffin, the English Commissioners, and a statement showing the amount of saving, both of labour and money, effected since its introduction in 1865. It appears that prior to the introduction of the system, the accounts of Treasury offices in certain parts of the country were kept in the Vernacular languages of the districts, but after it came into operation those accounts were ordered to be translated. The Treasury officers have therefore been directed to report on the success of the translation system also.

THE TROOPS AT THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.—We are glad to learn (says the Mofussilite) that the regiments to which we recently alluded as being under orders to stand fast in the Peshawur Division were not halted because another frontier expedition was thought likely to be necessary, but because Government are opposed to the moving of troops through districts where the scarcity of grain is so much felt. We are told, for instance, that at Jullundur atta is selling at eight seers per rupee, with every probability of it rising still higher. We also hear that it is in contemplation to reduce the garrison of Peshawur considerably, as we hear that not more than one British regiment will be left there; and to form two new stations to be garrisoned by troops, which the cession of Saugor to the Madras Presidency places at Sir William Mansfield's disposal. Jhelum is to be one of these stations, which will form a support alike to Peshawur and Hazara, while at Jalatur, in the salt range or in that neighbourhood, the other, forming a support to Bunnoo.

GOVERNMENT STUDS.—It may, we imagine, be taken for granted that the present commission, appointed to consider the working of Government studs, is the necessary prelude to their dissolution as such. The fact is, for artillery purposes the studs fail at any price to produce the stamp of animals required, and the attempt leads to a much higher expenditure than if for such purposes "Walers" were purchased in Australia by Government agents. For cavalry, by distributing stallions over the country and making them thoroughly pay the expense of their purchase and keep, together with an encouragement of the Bombay horse trade, there would in time be an ample supply, and Government would only need to depend on a longer purse than others to procure the best animals in the market. It would, however, be a great pity that the studs should cease altogether to exist, and if it is possible to start a sound company on "limited" principles in India, the studs separately or en masse would form a very favourable opportunity for an attempt. They do not pay Government, but would pay a company well.—Indian Public Opinion.

A CESS ON SALT-LANDS.—We learn from the Englishman that a Hakimee cess on salt-producing lands in the Punjab is to be introduced. The system to be followed will be the same as in other provinces, and as that now in force in the villages confiscated from the Nawab of Jhujur.

THE JUMMA MUSJID.—The Agra correspondent of the Delhi Gazette informs us that this splendid Mahomedan temple is at last undergoing thorough renewal:—"I was glad to observe that the Moslems of Agra are putting the Jumma Musjid into thorough repair, the outer entrance and the tumble-down turrets being rebuilt, the inlaid marble work replaced on the outer walls of the main building, where it had almost disappeared through the action of the atmosphere. I say I was glad to see the building restored, not because of its character as a place of worship of the false prophet, but for the sake of the edifice itself, which is one of the few remaining witnesses that bear a silent testimony to the pride and glory of that dynasty whose last scion is now wandering an outlaw amongst the wild mountaineers of the Hindoo Koosh and the Indian Caucasus. Some repairs are also done to the Motee Musjid in the fort, in which one of the corner turrets threatened to dissolve partnership with the remainder of the building. This work, of course, is carried out by Government. Would that a little more of the money squandered yearly to no purpose was applied to the repair of the magnificent monuments of the defunct Mogul dynasty and other buildings of historical interest and architectural beauty still remaining!"

MILITARY.—The Mofussilite of the 5th December states that a detachment of the 93rd Highlanders, from the Kussowlie Convalescent Depot, were to have left by train for Agra last evening (December 4). A battery of artillery marched in yesterday morning from the Umballa direction, and is at present encamped outside the Cabul Gate. We believe that the 10th and 12th Bengal Cavalry are daily expected from Allahabad by railway. We understand that the 2nd Goorkah Regiment have at last been ordered to March for Deyrah Dhoon, and will leave Rawul Pindee in the course of a few days.—The 26th Punjab Native Infantry marched from Mehidpore, en route for Umballah, on the 21st November.—The 2nd Punjab Infantry, from Abbottabad, relieved the 3rd Regiment at Kohat, and the 3rd Punjab Infantry commenced its march from Kohat, en route to Abbottabad, on the 1st December.—The Englishman states that Colonel H. E. Longden, C.B., Adjutant-general of the Bengal army, has asked permission to resign his post from the end of March next, on the score of broken health.—The Mofussilite has heard that Colonel Wyatt, of the 11th Regiment at Fyzabad, is to succeed to the command of the Rawul Pindee Brigade, in succession to Brigadier-general E. V. Maxwell, C.B., who vacates at the expiration of his five years' tenor of office.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY THROUGH RAJPOOTANA.—The very difficult question of the route for the projected railway through Rajpootana, connecting the East Indian, Punjab, and Bombay and Baroda systems, seems to be still undecided. Colonel Keatinge, we believe, prefers the Deesa and Pallee line to Ajmere, because he thinks the Euphrates Valley Railway is merely a matter of a few years, and that Kurrachee will become the port of embarkation of passengers and mails from and to India. Kurrachee and Deesa would then be connected, and be in direct communication with Upper India. Besides this, a line from Ajmere to Ahmedabad would cost nearly £1,500,000 less than one from Ajmere by Neemuch to Baroda, which is the rival route. The Bombay and Baroda engineers prefer the latter, because it would bring Bombay nearer the North-Western Provinces than the Ahmedabad line would do, and, doubtless, because they have actually surveyed their section from Baroda to Neemuch, and are committed to it in consequence. We believe there is room for both lines, and that they would scarcely interfere with one another. Commercially, the Neemuch route would seem to be the better because it will tap Malwa with its opium, and other resources; but, politically, the advantages are greater on the other route. The Euphrates Valley Railway is an undertaking that must be commenced, and our railway through Rajpootana should be made to meet it. There is one other advantage for the Pallee route; it would run along the foot of Abboo, and thus render available that fine hill for the Nusseerabad garrison in sickly seasons.—Friend of India.

THE FAMINE.—We (Mofussilite) regret to find that the scarcity of grain, and the consequent increasing prices, are effecting much distress throughout the Punjab, and that there is very little prospect of any diminution at present. Rain would appear to be as far off as ever.—The pressure of famine in Rajpootana has, says the Englishman, already had its effect on the lawless characters who infest the frontier of the numerous States of that country. The Indore Durbar has felt itself called upon to detach a military force to protect the borders of Holkar's territories from the depredations of a band of outlaws whom want has rendered exceptionally daring. Should the famine deepen, we may expect to hear of numerous outrages perpetrated by gangs of starving Bheels and Meenars.—The prospects of the crops are not improving in the Central Provinces; indeed, the wonder is that they are not more gloomy than they actually are. Rain is sorely needed, and no wonder, seeing that only .05 inches fell during the week ending the 14th ult.—a bad look-out for the rubbee.

The agricultural prospects of the country are not, however, as we have indicated, extremely unfavourable. Crops have failed in some localities, in others they are suffering from want of moisture; but in three out of four divisions they may be estimated as a fair average. Fever was prevalent during the week under report in Belaspore, and small-pox had appeared in Saugor, but otherwise the country was healthy. An earthquake was felt on the 14th ultimo at Sumbulpore and Burgurh.

OUTRAGE IN BURMAH.—We learn from a correspondent at Mandalay that a man of the name of Walker, an American subject, had been imprisoned and nearly murdered by some of the Burmese officials there. Captain Sladen, our informant states, said that he should be happy to give British protection to Walker if such was claimed for him by the American Consul. Since writing the above, we hear that Walker has arrived in Rangoon covered with wounds, and formally complained to the American Consul who has reported the circumstance to the American Consul-General in Calcutta. Walker states that he was told he must take the oath of allegiance to the king, as all other Europeans in the king's service were about to do the same; that the oath was that those taking it were to be Burman in every sense of the word, in dress and manners, and to be prepared to fight against the English or any other foreign Power, or the king's enemies, wherever they might be. This Walker refused to do, and the same evening was called upon by a Burman official with sixty or seventy armed followers, beaten till he was insensible, and carried away to the common jail. He was released the next morning by the kalawoon, and made his exit from Mandalay shortly afterwards. It remains to be seen whether the American Government will allow one of their subjects to be thus treated by a petty sovereign like the King of Burmah, and we trust that its action in the matter will be such as to cause our own Government to assume a more dignified position with reference to a nominally friendly power which is now openly enlisting men, and administering an oath to foreigners by which they bind themselves to assist the king against the English.—Rangoon Gazette.

DESTRUCTION OF FORESTS IN INDIA.—The necessity not only of preventing the further destruction of the forests in India, but also of taking steps to restore them by new plantations having been once decided upon, Sir Richard Temple, with the natural energy of his character, at once encouraged the formation of nurseries, and the planting of avenues and topes in the Central Provinces. The result of his encouragement appears in the Officiating Chief Commissioner's review of the arboricultural operations for the past year, of which, although he only remarks "that progress has been effected, and that the importance of the subject of arboriculture has been realised by the district officers," he might have spoken in more favourable terms. There are at present no less than 131 nurseries in use, the number having been added to considerably during the year, the Nagpore Division alone having made eighteen new nurseries. From these nurseries 35,705 seedlings had been planted out during the year either in avenues or groves by the department and local landholders, whilst 142,544 seedlings remained in stock. Whilst on the subject of nurseries we may remark that the review, after stating both in its body and in the tabular statement attached, the total number of nurseries as only 131, inserts a paragraph that—"In Bhundara the number of nurseries is 160," whilst in the statement only two are mentioned. This is by no means the first report that we have met with in which discrepancies of this nature occur. They seem to show a want of care, either in the preparation of the report or in the examination of the tabular statements. No less than 303 miles of road side were planted with avenues and 84 miles more re-planted, where the old trees had died out. The mortality amongst the trees thus planted in some parts amounted to 27 per cent., and although the Commissioner attributes this to the trees having been planted out when too young, or to too great an extent having been covered, we think that the want of care of the young plants is more likely to have been the cause. Some plantings, such as those on the southern road in Chanda, have entirely failed, and this would seem to show a want of knowledge of the soil and treatment required for the species of trees attempted to be grown. The same remarks apply to the trees which were planted for groves near encamping grounds, and the Deputy Commissioner of Mundla admits that the groves died for want of proper looking after. The local landholders, both at their own expense or assisted by the local funds, have fully contributed their quota to the increase of plantations. The Department of Public Works has also expended Rs. 19,239 on a similar purpose. The Commissioner very rightly directs the attention of the district officers to the fact that it is of as much importance to preserve work that has already been completed as it is to extend their operations by new plantations, and by attending to this advice not only will labour be economised, but the useless sacrifice of young trees be avoided.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

HYDERABAD (DECCAN), Nov.—Accounts from the interior of the Nizam's country represent the out-turn of the rubbee crops at about 25 per cent. of the average, and the cotton crop at 50 per cent. The country is said to be quiet, few or no dacoities or other serious crimes having been reported. Thefts are, however, on the increase. Reports on the administration of the Nizam's dominions are not published, as in the case of some other States. Sir Salar Jung did, indeed, prepare a report for Sir George Yule, but Sir George recommended that it should not be forwarded to the Government of India, for reasons which it is not difficult to understand. The officers of the contingent are in dismay at a rumour that the Viceroy is about to confer the vacant post of 2nd-in-command of the 4th Cavalry on an intruder. Vacancies in the contingent are few and far between, like angels' visits, and hence, when promotion is given out of the force considerable discontent is created. The contingent troops are all in relief. It is to be hoped the villagers will receive batta for the use of their carts, &c., more especially, as by supplying the military they lose the chance of accommodating the grain and cotton trade. The cotton traffic in Berar has set in; the resident, Mr. Saunders, ought to advise the Minister to obtain the sanction of the Nizam to the construction of metalled roads, as feeders to the railway. Cotton from the vicinity of Hingoli, grown on the banks of the Godavary, at Nundwar and Bussunt, is conveyed by carts and bullocks of Barsee. The town is twenty miles from the station of the same name on the G.I.P. Railway. The distance travelled is full 180 miles, and what with bad roads, and the ascent of the Ghats to the Berar table land, the cotton deteriorates fearfully. The military station of Mominabad, situated at the head of a dense jungly valley, should be connected with the railway by rest-houses for European troops. Three houses, which would probably cost Rs. 3,000 each, would suffice for the distance of seventy miles between the railway and the station. "The natives are very anxious that the new resident should make a tour of the military stations, and introduce some definite rules for renting houses from the natives."—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE HORSE FEVER AT NAGPORE.—We observe that the officer commanding the Nagpore Forces has intimated to the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army that the fever epidemic amongst the horses at that station was gradually subsiding. The latest returns received showed a total of twenty-six horses as under treatment.

Too BAD.—The old local European regiments, or the hundred and first to the hundred and ninth, have always been a puzzle to describe without a long and awkward phrase. The term "Briareans" or "hundred (h)ands," which we have several times heard used lately, seems likely to come into common use—and save much trouble.—Madras Times.

BAD ACCIDENT.—The Madras Times of the 4th Dec. says:—"A rather serious accident occurred to Mr. E. Barclay, a member of the firm of Barclay, Pritchard, and Barclay, solicitors, on Wednesday evening last. It appears that while Mr. Barclay was driving across the island his horse became unmanageable and ran away. Fearing the results of a collision with the bullock-carts and stray heaps of laterite, Mr. Barclay jumped from his buggy into the road, and in doing so dislocated his knee, and received injuries in the back. He was at once conveyed to the General Hospital."

COTTON AND INDIGO IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—The area of cotton cultivation has, for some inscrutable reason, decreased. Last year it was estimated at 899,207 acres; this year it is only 743,919. As some compensation for this falling off, we may state that the cultivation of indigo appears to be on the increase. The acreage last year of this staple was 87,415. This year it is given at 94,418. The assessment last year on this production was two hundred rupees over two lacs. This year it is nearly two and a quarter lacs. We leave the moral to be deduced from these dry facts to our captains of industry.—Madras Athenæum.

MILITARY CHANGES IN MADRAS.—We (Madras Athenæum) hear that General Marshall has no intention of vacating the post of Military Secretary to Government for some time. Colonel Richard Hamilton (now Brigadier-General), the Deputy Secretary, is, we hear, to have command of the Northern district; so we conclude Major Scott Elliott will be confirmed in the Secretariat. Should General Marshall, after so many years of service, resolve upon retiring, it appears uncertain who is to succeed him. General Wilde, it is understood, has the offer of the appointment; but he may be wanted on the frontier, notwithstanding that at present matters appear tranquil.

FATAL ATTACK ON A CAPTAIN BY A SEAMAN AT MADRAS.—We learn from the Madras papers of the death, on Friday, the 4th Dec., at the General Hospital, of Thomas Page, master of the British ship Lena. The deceased was stabbed below the left arm with a sailor's knife by an able seaman of the vessel on the morning of Friday, the 27th Nov. The ships in the roadstead hoisted their flags half-mast high as a tribute of respect to the deceased. The coroner held an inquest on the body in the evening, and adjourned the inquiry until Monday, the 7th Dec. The seaman who is stated to have struck the fatal blow, and two other sailors who were in his company at the time of the commission of the offence, have been taken into custody.

Bombay.

KURRACHEE FAIR.—The Exhibition and Fair proposed to be held at Kurrachee are postponed till the 15th March.

SIR W. MEREWETHER.—We learn from the Sindian that Sir William Merewether was to return to Kurrachee, from the districts, in time to proceed to Bombay by the steamer of the 16th Nov., to meet Lord Mayo.

MR. C. W. BELL.—According to the Poona Observer Mr. C. W. Bell, the First Assistant Collector and Magistrate of Poona, has been appointed on special duty, to inquire into the Abkaree system of this Presidency.

THE ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.—The Sindian has been informed that the steamers of the Oriental Inland Steam Company, in liquidation, will be sold at Kotree, at the suit of Government, early in January next.

BHOTAN.—The Bhootas are beginning to give up their old coinage in favour of British rupees. Several of the chiefs have made applications to have their stock of old coins exchanged for the Indian rupees.—Englishman.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.—We understand that the post of Educational Inspector, vacant by the absence of Mr. Curtis, on sick certificate, has been filled by the promotion of Professor Bühler to the Acting Inspectorship, and that Mr. Ramchrisna G. Bhandarkar, Head Master of Rutnagherry High School, will succeed Mr. Bühler as Acting Professor of Sanskrit at the Elphinstone College. Mr. Bhandarkar obtained the degree of M.A. in Sanscrit, and has written two useful Anglo-Sanscrit Primers. He has also shown himself a zealous and able master, whose pupils have always held the first place in matriculation examination.—Bombay Gazette.

THE CROPS.—During the fortnight ending Nov. 15, little or no rain fell in the Sattara collectorate, and the kharree crops have consequently suffered. Rubbee crops were also withering from want of rain, and they, too, would, it was feared, suffer irretrievable damage should the drought continue. Public health was good except in a few talookas, where cholera and cattle disease prevailed. During the same period, the majority of the Poona collectorate suffered from want of rain. There was a slight fall in the Joonere talooka and part of the Kheir talooka, and in these only. The majority of the rubbee crops were withering in consequence. Public health was good, except in Indapoor and Poorundnur, where cholera had broken out to a slight extent. Neither had Belgaum rain during the fortnight; and while the rice and jowaree crops were being reaped, the rubbee crops were drooping. Health was good, except in two talookas, where fever prevailed, along with a few cases of cholera. Cattle disease continued to appear in Belgaum and Beedee. Kulladgee had no rain, yet the crops were vigorous. Neither in Rutnagherry had the crops suffered much, though there was no rain. But, in the words of the clerk of the weather in that collectorate, "had rain fallen, it would have been useful." It is also stated that the "districts are healthy, but fever and cattle disease are, in general, prevalent." To this it is difficult to attach a meaning.

A TIGER NEAR POONA.—We (Poona Observer) hear that a tiger has made its appearance at the village called Nivke, twenty-four miles from Poona, on the new Sattara-road. This brute has, it is said, visited the village and the fields every night during this last fortnight, but he has not attempted as yet to injure any person. Here is a chance for Poona shikarees.

BARODA, Nov. 30.—Colonel Oldershaw's battery passed by Baroda a few days ago, by the ordinary cart road, en route to Nassick. Another battery from the opposite direction passed yesterday en route to Kurrachee, via Deesa. Great preparations are being made for the forthcoming Exhibition at Broach. The Guicowar intends to exhibit his state jewellery, of which the necklace or kuntie will be the principal and richest item; the celebrated "chudder" also will be sent for exhibition. His Highness does not intend to stay away from Baroda more than a day or two at the most, returning thence to make preparations for the reception of H. E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald.

MILITARY.—Major E. A. Green, Staff Corps, Brigade Major at Ahmednuggur, has returned to duty from England, and will shortly relieve Captain Thoyts, Staff Corps, who has been acting brigade major at Ahmednuggur during Major Green's absence. Captain Thoyts will, we understand, probably succeed Major Plomer at Belgaum, on that officer's departure to England under the new furlough rules.—Deccan Herald.—A troop of the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to proceed to Bombay at short notice, under the command of a European officer. This troop is required at Bombay as an escort for Lord Mayo.—Poona Observer.—The left wing of her Majesty's 9th Regiment arrived at Poona on Friday, the 4th December, from Dhoolia, under the command of Major G. W. Hanson.

EXPERIMENTS IN CINCHONA PLANTING IN DHARWAR.—In November last year a number of cinchona plants were forwarded to Dharwar with the view to experiments being made as to the suitability of that district for the growth of the plant. With the exception of a few plants which were put into the gardens of private individuals, and which did not thrive well, the whole of the young shrubs were transplanted into the cotton experimental field, and put under the personal care of Mr. Shearer, cotton gardener. These were apparently thriving, and had grown considerably when, Mr. Shearer being called on duty to Guzerat, they were put under the care of a Forest Department mules, and soon all died. Mr. Walton, Assistant Superintendent in charge of the Dharwar Factory, recommends in a report to Government that, if the experiment should be repeated, the plants should be placed in cool, moist, selected situations along the western edge of the Dharwar district, and under the superintendence of a responsible and trustworthy person. Government however, has resolved that "It does not seem advisable at present to continue experiments in cinchona cultivation in the Dharwar collectorate."

THE PERSIAN GULF.—Things still remain pretty much the same at Muscat. Quietness still prevails, and Azan-bin-Ghes is taking steps to consolidate his power. By a letter received from Muscat we learn that it is reported that the Bahraini Sheikh, who fled into the interior when the Vigilant bombarded the place, had again returned and had driven out the Sheikh who had been set up in his place. This report is probably correct, for the Bahraini Sheikh came to Bombay last Saturday by the s.s. Comorin, it is presumed to request help from the British Government. We also learn that the French Consul has arrived at Muscat. The Sindian of the 2nd December writes:—"We are informed that Azan-bin-Ghes returned to Muscat from the interior of Oman on Sunday, the 25th ultimo, when a salute of artillery from the forts announced his arrival. We have the best authority for saying that he had been recognised by all the tribes of the country, and he has initiated his reign by changing the colour of the national flag from red to white. The export trade of Muscat is brisk enough, but imports are checked, the merchants declining to enter into large transactions before some definite understanding has been arrived at between the British Government and the new Imaum."

INDIA AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—The Indian accounts of the Paris Exhibition have at last been brought to a close, and although a large loss has been incurred by the Bombay exhibitors, much of which was owing to unpreventable causes, the greatest credit is given to Baron Dowleas, special agent for the Government of India, for the ability with which he has discharged the heavy and responsible duties thrown upon him. Whilst the special Commissioners for Bengal (Baron Dowleas), Bombay, and Madras were not allowed to have an authoritative word regarding the exhibition of the articles sent from their respective presidencies, the sale of the whole was wholly entrusted to Baron Dowleas, and under most unfavourable circumstances he has discharged this duty in the most thorough manner, having given complete satisfaction to his brother Commissioners and her Majesty's Secretary of State in Council. Baron Dowleas was also invaluable to the Indian exhibitors from his knowledge of so many Continental languages. Probably he is better known to the exhibiting world than any other man in the world, except Mr. Phillip Owen, of South Kensington Museum. Baron Dowleas would be the very man to superintend an international exhibition in Bombay, if we are to have one here.—Times of India.

THE TRIBES OF THE N.-W. FRONTIER.—Our letter from the North-West Frontier reports all quiet. The trifling misunderstanding with the Salarzaies, a tribe on the Eusufzaie Frontier, is not likely to come to anything. Our troops maintain the blockade established some months ago, and one-half of the tribe is already penitent and desirous of renewing friendly relations with us; while the other half holds aloof, fearing the Akhoond's anger if it sues for peace with us. The Bazaotee tribe in the Afreedie country opposite Kohat, who gave offence some time back, have not yet made the amende for their misconduct, but as it would be useless to attempt a campaign there with less than 20,000 men, our Government remain quiet, under the impression that in the present instance "discretion is the better part of valour."—Mofussilite.

Chemistry.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT:

SCORPIONS RENEWED.—Any indolent ulcer or chronic sore should immediately have this excellent unguent applied to it in the accompanying directions. For thoroughly cleansing a diseased or broken skin, and for rousing its poisoned vessels or depressed nerves to healthy action, nothing can surpass Holloway's well-known Ointment. It strongly shows its power when applied to the old man's ulcer, which settles in the leg, and oftentimes becomes most intractable under the ordinary treatment, though no case has yet withstood this cooling and healing salve. The troublesome swellings preparatory to most ulcerations of the legs are likewise reduced by the diligent application of Holloway's Ointment, by giving strength to the weakened circulation through the capillaries.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and acts to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 19; Agra, December 15; Calcutta, December 15; Madras, December 14.

Bombay was still looking out for the arrival of the new Viceroy, who, as the telegraph has told us, did not show himself there until the 20th December. According to the Malabar's news the Feroze left Aden on the 10th. All the arrangements for Lord Mayo's reception had been carefully mapped out, and it was generally expected that Bombay would greet her visitor with all the enthusiasm of a genuine belief in his fitness for the post of Viceroy.

A LATER telegram from India informs us of his lordship's arrival at Madras on the 5th of this month.

THE Gazette of India contains some further correspondence on the Hazara campaign. Major Pollock, the Commissioner, who had to clench the good work begun by General Wilde's artillery, thus delivers himself on the best mode of dealing with the frontier tribes:—

In dealing with the Pathan tribes of the border, on an occasion like the present, our object should be rather to effect what is called in Oriental phraseology "lifting up their purdahs" than to kill numbers of them, or unceremoniously to impose fines, or to uproot or burn villages, or destroy crops; such punishments, cruel even when rightly directed, fall with the greatest severity on the least guilty members of an offending community, and our best officers, civil and military, have always held similar language.

The Indian Government approves of these ideas, and counsels the civil officers on the frontier to make friends of the tribes around them so far as circumstances may allow. At the same time it preaches the duty of combining the fortiter in re with the suaviter in modo. Officers must be firm and prompt in dealing with the first symptoms of unfriendly movements. The Government regrets the escape of the Hindustani fanatics, but blames nobody. It has also formally thanked the Maharajah of Cashmere for the aid he rendered in the late campaign.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE is said to have done two things which, at first sight, neutralise each other. He has sanctioned the appointment of a native agent to the Court of Yakoob Khoosh Beghi, the ruler of Yarkand, and has yielded to the prayers of the Maharajah of Cashmere that he should withdraw his agent, Dr. Cayley, from Ladakh. As neither of these statements seems to rest on sure foundations, we may hope that one of them at least will prove altogether baseless. Dr. Cayley can ill be spared from Ladakh, especially if we are to cultivate friendly relations with Kashgar. The ruler of Cashmere may have proved his friendliness on more than one occasion; but we doubt whether his promises with regard to trade would be worth much if our agent were not at hand to encourage him. Besides, it was generally understood that a British agent was to become a yearly visitor at Leh, and on the faith of this understanding not a few traders have started for Ladakh. Without indulging in the strong language wherewith the Friend of India deprecates a move that will "bring disgrace on our name throughout Turkistan," and make the Foreign-office "a laughing-stock in every feudatory State," we should like to hear Sir John's reasons for such a step, if he has really taken it.

AMONG other measures inspired or sanctioned by Colonel Keatinge for the relief of famine-stricken Rajpootana is the formation of a Charitable Grain Club at Ajmere, for the purpose of supplying the poor with grain at the lowest possible rate. Weekly sales are to be held of grain procured from a distance, which will be put up in lots of not more than a maund each. There will be separate sales, if need be, for women. No subscriber is to buy grain for his own use or that of his family. Whatever balance of profit may be left on closing the accounts will be laid out on "some work of charity," as the subscribers may see fit. The sum of Rs. 24,500 has already been contributed by eighteen subscribers alone, Colonel Keatinge heading the list with Rs. 2,000. Several other Englishmen contribute from Rs. 400 to Rs. 1,000 each. But the largest sums are placed against native names; one gentleman, Seth Sumeer Mull Oomrid Mull, having put down the handsome figure of Rs. 5,000, four more being down for Rs. 3,000 each, and a sixth for Rs. 1,000.

THE Chiefs of Jowrah and Oodipore have followed the example of their neighbours in the famine-stricken provinces. The former has removed for eight months, from the 28th October, all restrictions on the free passage of grain through his dominions. In addition to a like boon for a period not specified, the latter has directed the construction of relief works and advised the raising of subscriptions in aid of other means for meeting the distress. All accounts from Rajpootana prepare us for the development in a few weeks of suffering as severe as that which wasted Orissa in 1860-61. Sindh, too, has nearly emptied her own granaries already in aid of the Punjab. Another centre of distress seems to have disclosed itself in Khandeish, which is feeling the evil effects of three bad seasons in succession. Food is still there, but not easy of attainment by the Bheels and other poor people, and the public works of the province are quite inadequate to the popular needs. New works however are to be started at once, which include the clearing of old tanks and wells and the making of a road from Challisgaum to Koonoor. Half the revenue will of course be remitted in all villages where the crops have entirely failed.

On the 10th December no news of a collision between Shere Ali and Abdurrahman Khan had reached Peshawar. It seemed however as if a collision was imminent, for the rival armies lay confronting each other, that of Shere Ali being entrenched across the road to Kabul. The game apparently was in his hands, if he waited long enough, for his enemies could neither turn his position nor bring up fresh troops to overwhelm him, the expected reinforcements from Turkistan having been routed by the tribes on the way. Deserters, too, were daily flocking into the Ameer's camp. The fight however, so circumstantially reported some weeks ago, has really come off at last, with the result so long foreshadowed. A telegram received yesterday at the India Office from Major Pollock announces the complete defeat of Abdurrahman Khan, and the consequent firing of Royal salutes at Kabul and Jellalabad. No date nor any particulars are given, but the fact at any rate of a victory for the Ameer seems finally established. The Bombay Gazette still insists that a battle, however indecisive, was fought at Bamian about the 12th or 13th November, and is positive that a salute of forty guns was fired at Kabul on the 14th. Be that as it may, the battle of December may be accepted as historical.

WHILE the people at Bombay are considering how to do honour to the new Viceroy, their contemporaries at Calcutta seem unusually sparing of like demonstrations in honour of Sir John Lawrence. The Friend of India bewails the immobility of the Bengal Civil Service, which had once "rallied to a man round Sir C. Beadon," and the Englishman flatly denies the Friend's assertion that the Trades Association meant to console Sir John with a farewell address. There remains then nothing but the doubtful honour of an address from the Missionary Conference, whose testimony in Sir John's favour, however comforting personally to himself, will hardly make up in the public eye for the silence of so many other classes. One would think that some part of the Calcutta community might have paid its farewell homage to a ruler of Sir John's recorded worth and glorious services in days not so very distant. Has he done nothing for the natives even if he has offended his own countrymen? Had he made a farewell progress through the Punjab we might have heard a rather different tale.

ONE of Sir John's last appointments has been the promotion of his private secretary, Mr. J. D. Gordon, C.S.I., to the post of Judicial Commissioner in Mysore—a berth which will have to be kept warm for him during his impending absence on sick leave. Another of Sir John's staff, Capt. Randall, has been appointed Agent with the ex-King of Oudh.

THE sudden death at Srinuggur of Mr. R. Thorp, a bitter exponent of royal and official misdeeds in Cashmere, looked so suspicious, that the Punjab Government sent off two doctors to inquire into the matter. He died on the 22nd November, a week after Dr. Cayley had left him in full health, and an hour after he had come in well from his morning walk. Dr. Cayley however went back to examine the body, and found that death had evidently ensued from rupture of the heart.

MEER HAJJI has been convicted at Delhi of murdering Captain Douglas, Commandant of the Palace Guards, on the too memorable 11th May, 1857. Another native is now in arrest charged with the murder of Mr. Simon Fraser and two young ladies on the same occasion.

MR. NOBLE TAYLOR, of the Supreme Council, takes six months' leave of absence on account of ill-health.

WE are glad to see that the India-office proposes to mark its sense of the late Sir H. Edwards's remarkable services by a suitable monument to his memory.

THE questions connected with the retention of a strong frontier post at Peshawar seem to have been set at rest by the scale on which public works at that station are being pushed forward. The barracks and fortifications of Peshawar are estimated to cost £535,000, and as estimates are always below the mark, it is not unlikely that the whole cost will not fall short of three-quarters of a million. On the European barracks and other works which are nearing completion more than £100,000 had been spent up to last March. Besides the old fort which commands the city, there will be a fortified enclosure for the bulk of the English troops and public offices, and a second enclosure for the sepoy and the bazaars. The latter will be commanded by the former, and the two will be made strong enough for all purposes of defence against an Afghan or a Russian assailant. An inner line of smaller forts will be built at Rawal Pindi, Mooltan, and Hyderabad. It is still a question whether the great arsenal shall remain at Ferozepore or be shifted to Mooltan. To our minds the arsenal had better remain where it is, in the greater likelihood of an invading army taking the direction of the North-West Provinces than that of Sindh. But why not have a second arsenal at Mooltan? The new works at Peshawar will enable us to reduce the present European garrison to about a thousand men in time of peace, and thus to lessen the sickness and mortality for which that station has long been too famous. The sickness caused by overwork in a wide straggling cantonment will at any rate be largely averted by the new arrangement.

THE people in the Central Provinces seem wonderfully alive to the advantages of education. Nearly two-thirds of the expenditure in those provinces for that purpose is defrayed from local sources, and the average cost to the State for each pupil is no more than Rs. 2-2, which is lower than in any other province except the Punjab; Sumbulpore has specially distinguished itself by its zeal in the pursuit of knowledge. Two hundred and forty-nine schools with 13,276 pupils now exist where six years ago there was hardly one school. The school-rooms are overcrowded; the open-air examinations are attended by every adult in the village; girls are learning their lessons side by side with boys. In the last official year the total increase throughout the province consists of 75 schools, 9,353 scholars, and 5,878 daily present. Seven boys matriculated in the Calcutta University. In all the Government schools but two no boy is allowed to begin English until he has reached the Fourth Vernacular Class, and a boy in that class is "expected to be able to read the fourth book fluently, to write correctly from dictation, to work sums to Vulgar Fractions, including Proportion and the Compound Rules, to have a knowledge of the History of India, of the Geography of India, and to be acquainted with the rules of Syntax."

A CONTEMPORARY asks, not without reason, what particular services have won for Mr. J. C. Marshman the Companionship of the Star of India. For want of any sure clue to the answer, we must content ourselves with supposing that the appointment has something to do in some recondite way with Mr. Marshman's services as an Anglo-Indian journalist. For what particular services in that sphere he has thus been rewarded, we leave others to guess. Honours of the same kind are continually bestowed for deserts equally obscure to the world at large. We must accept them in a spirit of humble faith, as happening "all for the best in this best of possible worlds." Mr. Marshman may be the most deserving of men, if we did but know it. In our ignorance we decline to speculate on the exact direction in which the sometime editor of the Friend of India proved himself worthy of his present reward; whether he gave timely help to an anxious Government, or spread the light of Christianity among the natives of India, or preached up political doctrines offensive to this or that large section of her Majesty's Indian lieges. Our contemporary is not quite right in quoting this as the "first instance" of an Englishman being thus decorated outside the Indian services. Mr. Fleming, of Bombay, for example, was a merchant when he entered the Legislative Council.

THE Commander in Chief has just issued an order to the effect that officers in the army who become bankrupt through any dishonourable transaction or wilful extravagance will no longer be allowed to hold her Majesty's commission. We imagine that no one except a few possible sufferers will object to this order as superfluous or too severe. Officers and gentlemen cannot complain of being held liable to punishment for dishonourable acts, and the extravagance that is not "wilful" will still be able to show cause for the less rigorous treatment due to mere folly.

BRITISH BURMAH.

COLONEL FYTCHE'S Report on British Burmah for 1867-68 serves to illustrate the truth of Sindiah's saying about the way in which we English "husband our experience." These yearly reports form excellent landmarks in the domestic history of the provinces subject to our rule. In the case of British Burmah the progress thus registered year by year is specially remarkable. There is no part of our Indian Empire where the people take so kindly to their present masters, or where the development of their material resources can be helped on so easily under proper management. It tells not a little also in our favour that the Peguers have plenty of opportunity for contrasting the advantages of our rule with the misrule prevailing alongside in the dominions of the King of Burmah. Immigrants from the latter keep swelling the yearly increase of people in British Burmah.

In 1867 the population in our own provinces numbered 2,392,311, a gain of nearly 70,000, or 3 per cent. on the previous year. Since 1862 the whole increase has been nearly 400,000. Bassein alone shows a small decrease. In all the other districts the relative increase had been steadily maintained. Nearly 12,000 new houses had been built during the year, an increase fairly corresponding to that of the population. An increase of 8,000 carts and 5,000 cattle speaks well for the prospects of agriculture. Compared with the size of the whole country, the population is small enough, but tested by the amount of cultivated land, the number of people to the square mile is not much below the average of the North-West Provinces. British Burmah now boasts of sixteen towns with more than five thousand people in each. Of the four chief seaport towns Akyab, the smallest, contains 15,536 inhabitants, while in Rangoon, the largest, the numbers amount to 71,189. The increase in the latter during the year was 1,323, whereas Moulmain, the next largest town, shows an increase of 4,137 in the same time. At this rate the capital of the Tenasserim Provinces will have outstripped its rival on the Irrawaddy in two years more.

The trade returns for the year record a marked improvement on those for 1866, the total amounting to nearly ten crores of rupees, or ten millions sterling. This is a gain of two crores on the previous year, but it still lags by three-quarters of a million behind the total for 1865. No small part of the year's increase is due to the imports, which exceed the exports by nearly eighty-five lakhs of rupees. Of the increase on imports more than twenty lakhs of rupees are set down to cotton piece goods, and nearly ten lakhs to cotton twist, besides seven lakhs and a-quarter to silk fabrics. The whole sum of sixty-seven lakhs on the import of made cotton shows an increase of fifteen lakhs on the average of the last five years. Of cotton twist Burmah imports to the value of thirty-nine lakhs in the year. For woollen piece goods Burmah bids to the amount of nearly thirteen lakhs. In all these articles she deals in proportion far more largely than British India.

Some part of this commercial progress must be traced to the removal of the frontier duties in 1863. In the last five official years the inland export trade of British Burmah has risen from Rs. 63,27,788 to Rs. 1,47,81,178, while nearly the same proportion is discernible in the advance of the import trade for the same time from Rs. 49,61,549 to Rs. 1,06,70,312. The year 1866-7 was a bad year for trade, owing to the rebellion in Upper Burmah, and the returns for that year include only eleven months, but the mere difference between the value of exports in 1865-6 and last year exceeds the whole sum laid out in 1863-4.

Nine-tenths of the cultivated land in Burmah is devoted to rice, the area of rice-land having increased during the year by 43,000 acres. The prevalence of cattle-murrain checked agricultural progress in Akyab. On the other hand, tea was grown successfully in the northern part of that district; Dr. Mountjoy has turned out 14,000 pounds of tea from a plantation of 150 acres. Shirazi tobacco seems to thrive well in Cheduba and Sandoway. European potatoes have been introduced with success into Akyab. Coffee, indigo, and sugar-cane are all found to answer well, but for various reasons, including perhaps the dearness of labour, the cultivation of these staples progresses slowly, and the waste lands remain unsold or untitled. The area of cotton culture has fallen off from 5,420 acres in 1866-7 to 3,433 in the following year. This is mainly owing to the fall in prices, for cotton is evidently indigenous in British Burmah, and has at any rate been grown from time immemorial in the hills of North Arracan. The plant thus grown is an annual, yielding a good crop, and reaching the height of three or four feet. It is sown by the hill tribes along with the paddy early in May, and the picking of it begins in November and December, just after the ripening of the paddy. The picked cotton is neatly packed in drum-shaped baskets of bamboo, each holding about thirty seers, worth in the hills from Rs. 2-8 to Rs. 3. Most of it however is bought at Akyab at three to five rupees a basket, for the purpose of being made into wearing apparel for the Arracanese.

There is an agricultural garden at Rangoon, to which Government contributes the large allowance of Rs. 100 a month. Under the care however of the Agri-Horticultural Society, already a hundred strong, various experiments in growing tobacco, Carolina and Java rice, coffee, and potatoes, have turned out remarkably well. Both the rice and the tobacco were found to be far superior to any thing of the kind hitherto grown in the province. The attempts at growing a better kind of cotton seem however to have been unsuccessful.

In the department of revenue we find the land-revenue lower by a lakh than in 1866 and by half a lakh than in 1865. On the other hand, the income from forests shows a slight increase, while that from excise and customs is steadily rising. British Burmah is still waiting for an Insolvent Law. The criminal returns show an increase in crimes of violence, due perhaps to the disturbances on the frontier. The schools, in many of which boys and girls are taught together, have increased in number from 151 to 181. There are seven normal and five purely female schools, the latter containing 403 pupils. Of the 182,057 rupees spent on education not more than Rs. 74,321 were defrayed from the Imperial Funds. Altogether Burmah is steadily advancing, but the pace could be quickened by a good system of railways. In this respect we trust that British Burmah will not long be left behind the rest of our Indian Empire.

THE REVISED MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

THE new Military Furlough Rules of 1868 are again issued in a revised form, and extended to Royal Artillery and Engineer officers, late of the Indian army, holding staff appointments not of a regimental nature. The question of the application of the rules to the officers generally of H.M.'s British forces serving in India remains still under consideration. The term "Furlough Pay," having now a changed and two-fold signification, will be understood as the half-Indian salary converted at the exchange of 2s. for the rupee, whilst "English Furlough Pay" will represent the rates heretofore allowed. The other changes in the rules, although of a secondary nature, may require some elucidation, which we therefore propose to give.

From time to time, since the promulgation of the first revised rules, they have had to endure a large amount of criticism from many fault-finders. The game however was hardly, we think, worth the candle. Hardly has a leading feature of the code been touched. The only important additional concession is that stipulating that officers may come to England for a month or two, if they so elect, without interference with their status or their pay and allowances in the service.

With these preliminary remarks we may proceed to point out what the various emendations are in the New Military Furlough Rules, now sent home for the confirmation of the India-office. The questions that have been raised regarding the Civil rules may be laid aside for the present, their consideration remaining in abeyance, and we confine ourselves to the changes in the military rules. But let us first give a brief resumé of the leading features of the original rules. They stipulated as follows:—

The distinction between furlough on sick certificate and on private affairs is nearly abolished. Officers may obtain leave on an allowance of fifty per cent. of their pay and allowances, up to a maximum of £1,200 per annum, the minimum being £250 per annum. Furlough for two years will be allowed without forfeiture of appointment. Officers will be eligible for two years' furlough after eight years' service; a third year after fourteen years' service; and a fourth after twenty years' service. The aggregate amount of furlough, with pay and retention of appointment, is limited to eight years. Sick leave in India, not exceeding one year, will be granted on half staff salary. Privilege leave will be allowed for sixty days in each year without deduction of pay, and the officer will be allowed to proceed where he pleases. All general leave granted in India is to count against service.

Sir John Lawrence, with the most considerate regard for the individual as well as general interests of the services, has allowed the above clear-sighted provisions to be modified by emendations of a minor character, the value of which is only appreciable in detail. Sir John has done great service, and conferred a noble boon on the services by the rare penetration and clear-sightedness with which he has planned the Furlough code; and he deserves the thanks of every Indian officer, from the writer and cadet to the magistrate and general officer, for the infinite trouble his Excellency has taken in the matter.

The liberal concessions that have been made however do not appear to have been enough. No sooner had the new system of furlough grants been propounded than, although no objections were taken to the leading features of it, there were those who asked to be heard with regard to minor reforms. Thus, for instance, a party arose to ask why the allowances of officers on leave preparatory to furlough were not defined. The claim was no sooner made than allowed, and the Government of India ruled "that an officer was entitled, during such leave, to the staff corps pay of his rank and a moiety of his staff salary." Another officer urges exceptions to Paragraph XIV., which was construed to mean a refusal to give more than three years with pay to an officer with medical certificate. "So then," exclaim the critics, "an officer having lost his health must, after the expiration of the three years, if not declared sufficiently recovered to return to India, either have an extension without pay or retire." The answer is embodied in the revised code as follows:—"Whenever the aggregate of two years' leave is exceeded the officer will, after that date, come under Rule 11, which provides that an officer not entitled to furlough, whose health may necessitate his taking it within three years from the date of last return, may, under the usual medical certificate, obtain such amount of leave as may be duly certified to be necessary for the restoration of his health, but will only receive English furlough pay, and must vacate any appointment he may be holding."

So far well. But now and again come more correspondents with additional emendations: "Can you solve the following puzzle, which to me appears far more difficult than any Chinese one ever invented? Why is it that an officer with a military staff appointment should be allowed to take his furlough whenever he likes, and still draw fifty per cent. of his pay and staff allowances, whilst in England; whereas the unfortunate officer in civil employ must have held his appointment for three years in India (and drawn the pay too) before he can get fifty per cent. of his salary?"

"2ndly. With reference to the second portion of the said clause—what possible advantage can an officer in civil employ derive by being permitted to draw his 'average salary for the three years prior to his proceeding on furlough,' when his pay in the Civil Department happens to be the same from one year's end to another? And lastly, Why should not the clause in question have been worded as follows (if the meaning I take be correct)?—'But if an officer in civil employ or drawing consolidated salary shall not have held his appointment for three years at the time of his quitting India on furlough, he will be allowed 50 per cent. of the average salary drawn by him for three years prior to his proceeding on furlough.'"

An answer to these inquiries has been given by us in the Mail. It is that, "An officer drawing a civil consolidated salary receives while on furlough the half of his average receipts for the three years preceding furlough, whatever those receipts may have been." We notice that Clause V. has been amended, although not to the extent of meeting our correspondents' views.

The further changes are as follow:—Officers not in staff employ will receive half the Indian pay of their rank, provided that in no case will an officer entitled to furlough receive less than the minimum of £250 per annum. It is stipulated with regard to this provision that officers who may be entitled to income allowance from the Military Fund during absence in Europe shall draw their half-salary or minimum absence allowance, subject to a deduction equivalent to the amount of such income allowance.

An officer eligible for furlough need not take the whole amount to which his service entitles him, but may ask for a portion of the furlough as an instalment, and in that case the balance will remain at his credit in any future computation of the amount of furlough to which he may be entitled.

An addition has been made to the subsidiary rule which closes the original notification of July 1, 1868. It is this:—"If an officer under the Furlough Rules of 1796 elects the present rules, his service for pension will be reckoned under the former rules up to July 1, 1868, and thenceforward under the rules of 1868."

The final condition is "that officers who have vacated appointments which have since been permanently filled up can have no claim to be restored to them." The above emendations embody the purport of some further suggestions which have been pressed on the attention of the Indian Government. We repeat our hope that the Military Furlough draft is at last settled.

We cannot conclude without remarking on one manifestation of the interest which has been excited by the regulations; namely, that so great has been the rush of our official countrymen homewards, consequent on the grand opportunity presented them, that the Government has had to suspend privilege leave among civilians. As regards the military, great has been the outcry against the limiting of the boon to twenty per cent. of the whole Madras Army, which includes so large a number of unemployed officers and invalids. These last should not have been objected to certainly.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The undermentioned engineers are promoted to fill existing vacancies, from the dates attached to their names:—Mr. James Thomson, 2nd class, to be 1st class engineer, v. Callaway, pensioned, April 26; Mr. Thomas Anderson, 3rd class, to be 2nd class engineer, to fill an existing vacancy, Nov. 1.

A QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I see in your number of the 14th October the following "promotions in prospect" mentioned, viz.:—Majors T. Rattray, 64th N.I.; C. Reay, 32nd N.I.; W. Fullerton, 14th N.I.; P. H. P. Gill, 37th N.I.; J. Wedderburn, 69th N.I.; C. J. G. Hinde, 65th N.I.; A. Fytche, 70th N.I.; and J. C. Dickson, 33rd N.I., to the ranks of lieutenant-colonel, consequent on the approaching retirement from the service of Lieutenant-colonel W. C. Green. In the Bengal Army List of the 1st October, 1868, none of these names appear on their respective cadres, or in the list of regimental field officers, with the exception of J. C. Dickson, who is already on the list of lieutenant-colonels. The paragraph goes on to say, that by the next step forty-five majors will be promoted, including Major Lees, who is not in the Staff Corps. Now, I want to know the rule by which these forty-five majors are promoted, and why the same step does not affect the whole list of majors, or, rather, why is the step made after a local officer. In the case of there being no local officers on the list of majors, will each step going amongst the lieutenant-colonels promote eighty majors? Am I right in making this calculation that on four vacancies occurring amongst the lieutenant-colonels, the whole of the majors on the present list will be promoted; whereby four officers on the General List will become captains and fourteen cadres will be cleared of lieutenants; that the next step will promote eighty majors and fourteen General List officers, leaving thirty cadres, without lieutenants, and the next step again promoting eighty majors and thirty General List officers—that is, should the eighty majors happen to be Staff Corps men? Does the death of a supernumerary lieutenant-colonel give a step? If any of your readers will kindly enlighten me on these points, they will greatly oblige, yours faithfully,

Jan. 6, 1869.

ONE WAITING FOR PROMOTION.

A RAILWAY FOR BURMAH.

The Indian Daily News holds that there are abundant facts to indicate that a railway, although not absolutely needed, is very desirable. Last year's trade between British and Upper Burmah doubled that of the preceding year, and this is the inland trade—the one which a railway will most concern. When the prospect of revived traffic with Western China was spoken of, a line to Bhamo was proposed. The proposal was absurd; even in its modified form—steamers up the Irrawaddy to Bhamo and a railway thence to Western China—the scheme was fifteen or twenty years too early. British territory is quite broad and rich enough for the experiment, for experiment it will be so far as regards its influence on the native governed country. It cannot achieve more for British territory than has been achieved, except as it relates to the trade of the interior. From Rangoon to Prome has been the route recommended, as passing through the most fertile districts of Burmah; from Rangoon to Thyetmyo, our military frontier station, is another route. But this may be safely left for secondary consideration. The primary object is to establish a claim to railway communication. Col. Sir Arthur Phayre has been in favour of it, so is Colonel Fytche, and so is all the intelligence of the country. We will not venture so far as the author of a letter to the Secretary of State advocating a line from Rangoon to Prome, and say that the eyes of three millions of our Burmese fellow-subjects are turned to him, and that thousands of cartmen also, with their suffering oxen, address him and pray for this relief. The hyperbole, or whatever figure of speech Dr. Dawson, M.D., M.R.C.S., may term it, is ridiculous in his otherwise well-written and elaborate pamphlet, for our Burmese fellow-subjects have not the slightest comprehension of railway communication, and as for the cartmen, they are certainly not so enlightened as to long for a mode of locomotion against which all labouring men of their class very naturally protest. But if latent wealth is to be developed, if energy is to be utilised, if a long coast of ports are to be aided into prosperity, and if we are concerned in increasing supplies of grain for export to India where they are so frequently needed, and otherwise rendering Burmah a useful auxiliary province, we believe it is modern practice and principle to accomplish this by the introduction of railways and steamers. And, above all, if we are to fight against native Burmah without arms, fight the old king to helplessness and submission to trade, without moving one man from our military station at Thyetmyo, it will be by means of railways and steam flotillas.

THE PALUMPORE FAIR.

The Friend of India thinks that for the present the fair at Palumpore may be looked upon as an established fact; the question is, are the anticipated results likely to be realised? This question can only be answered by facts, and these are not wanting. In Yarkund the news of the establishment of the fair is not twelve months old, for those Yarkundeers who appeared last year at the fair were stray pilgrims to Mecca, who, on arriving at Leh, hearing that the English Sirkar protected traders, had opened out roads for them and exacted no duty from them. Their report has not yet reached their native country, for they have not yet returned. No Yarkund trader can have set out with his merchandise with the intention of coming to the Palumpore fair of 1868. Yet we find that nineteen merchants were present from Yarkund and Kashgar, of whom only one or two were pilgrims, having brought goods to the amount of Rs. 40,000, and hard cash to buy tea. A meeting of these merchants was held under a Shumiana, and the tea planters of the valley sent specimens of tea for their inspection, and attended in person. It must have been a sight encouraging to the well-wishers of Central Asian trade, that well-filled Shumiana, with the Moghuls handling and testing the different specimens, and screwing up little samples in paper to discuss at leisure. It is not a matter of great moment whether these men are principals or agents, whether they come to trade on their own account or to spy out the land for others. The stone has been set rolling; if there is such a force as gravity it must go down the North side. We look at the gradual increase of traders from the North at the Palumpore fairs of future years as a positive certainty; but, as we have said before, there must be no suffocation. The present prospect is due to our care of the traders' interest for the last two years—we must not relax our watchfulness or think the task already accomplished. The Changchenmoo route remains to be thoroughly opened; if the Maharajah is honest in his professions, no obstruction to this will be offered by the Ladakh authorities. Already a few persons have traversed the route, and there can be no doubt of its vast superiority over the Karakorum. From the point where it enters Ladakh the road is sufficiently level for camels to the Tso Moriri Lake, and thence it is probable than an easy gradient can be found to the Longsee plain in the north of Lahoul. But there is one point which renders the opening out of this route antagonistic to Cashmere interests. It does not pass through Leh. For this reason we maintain that until traffic is established along it we must not relax our efforts. It is possible that no obstruction may be offered, but to prevent the possibility of it, Dr. Cayley must remain at Leh for the present. Then, assistance must be afforded to our own traders. At present they go to Yarkund as protégés of the Cashmere Akskal. When the Vakeel Mahomed Nazar came last year from the Court of the Koosh-begee of Yarkund to visit the Maharajah of Cashmere, he was accredited to the ruler of Jummoo and Delhi! He only discovered by his visit to Lahore that the British were not tributaries of that potentate. The truth will out in Yarkund; but the presence of a British agent there is essential to the interests of our traders.

THE OPIUM REVENUE INSECURE.

The Times of India points out the startling fact that under the present system a very few years at the outside will close the China market to our drug, and leave us without the important revenue we at present gain therefrom. It used to be the custom of the Mandarins, as Governors of the different provinces in China, to begin the new year by fulminating edicts through all the official channels against the use of opium, although most of these high officials and nearly all subordinate to them make use of the drug privately as their greatest luxury. The late Emperor Hsien Fung himself is supposed not to have scorned the subtle delights of the poison. Be this as it may, the official interdict had the effect of making opium expensive, and of giving to its use all the charms of prohibition. It prevented the natives from using their fertile and immense fields for the cultivation of the poppy, and compelled dealers in the much-desired narcotic to go to the Treaty Ports for it. During our last war the celebrated Tartar general Sankolinsin was known to have exerted all his personal influence to the entire suppression of poppy planting. His conscience in this matter must have been satisfied, for except in the Far West, where Imperial influence has ever been very small, none of the pernicious flowers were grown except under hedges and in unobserved corners. But the last war put an end to this state of things. The sale of opium was legalised at the ports, and the exigencies of the confederate provinces which make up the Chinese Empire induced the high Mandarins to look on opium as a sure and lucrative source of revenue. So opium was admitted by treaty, but from the time it left foreign hands, it was so taxed as to render it as dear as ever. One result of this was a vast amount of smuggling; another, that although very expensive, the use of opium increased everywhere, and its devotees and dealers began to consider whether its cultivation could not be increased in China itself, and consequently its price be very much reduced. On the death of Sankolinsin the irresolute Government removed the interdict concerning the growth of opium, and as a result, some three years ago, the native drug appeared in the market at Tientsin at a price varying from 800 to 900 taels per chest, or about 200 to 300 per chest below the prices then ruling for Malwa; this was about three years ago, but it was in fertile, industrious, and mercantile China. The dealers saw that the more they produced, the lower would be the price, and the officials saw a way, distant but sure, of shutting out the hated foreigner from the trade by producing enough opium in China for the consumption of the Chinese. The result is one of so startling a character that unless the Indian Government at once change its policy with regard to the drug, not a chest of Indian opium will by-and-by find its way to China. The native opium is now openly sold in large quantities, and in many places at half the price of Malwa. We need hardly point out that although at present the flavour and strength of Indian opium gives it a temporary advantage in the market, it will take but a short time for the substitution of the cheaper drug, which is now mostly employed for mixing with its antagonist. The coming generation will be gradually and easily drawn to relish the flavour of their own produce, and national vanity, prejudice, or interest will do the rest. Chinese opium will exclude Indian. If we would prevent this undesirable end, we cannot begin a reform too soon. We must increase the production and reduce the tax. Let two or three chests be put down in China where only one is now sent, and we shall keep our market. The production in India is capable of great extension if the tax were reduced, for it is fortunately the fact, that the heavy tax imposed on our import by the Chinese Government will prove its best friend; for so great is the revenue collected at the Chinese treaty ports from opium, and so certain its payment under the foreign inspectorate of Customs, that the officials—who are incapable of guarding against smuggling in the interior on the native article—will use every endeavour to foster the use of the foreign drug against the less profitable Chinese produce. The attention of the Government cannot be too early directed to the facts we have pointed out; and we commend them very earnestly to Sir Richard Temple's notice.

THE MATRICULATION EXAMINATION.—The Government Gazette, published on Dec. 17, contains the names and places of education of the 250 candidates who, out of the 639 who sent in applications, have successfully passed the entrance examination of the University this year. The following is a list of the places of education, with the number passed by each:—Elphinstone High School, 58; Poona High School, 28; Rutnagherry High School, 22; Surat High School, 19; Ahmedabad High School, 13; Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy's Benevolent Institution, 11; Free General Assembly's Institution, 10; Baba Gokulay's School, Poona, 10; Bombay Proprietary School, 8; Dhoolia High School, 6; Rajkote High School, 6; St. Mary's Institution, Bombay, 6; Belgaum High School, 5; Kolapore High School, 4; General Assembly Institution, 4; Robert Money Institution, 4; Kurrachee High School, 3; Indore Madressa, 3; Hyderabad High School, 2; Akola High School, 2; Hyderabad Mission School, 2; Sholapur English School, 2; Poona Free Church Mission, 2; Irish Mission School, Surat, 2; Ahmednugger English School, 1; Fort High School, 1; Mhagarkar English School, 1; Private Tuition, 15; total, 250. The list is on the whole decidedly satisfactory. Most of the schools have done better than in any previous year. The Elphinstone High School maintains its easy lead, but the other Government High Schools are also more successful than last year. The sudden rise of Rutnagherry High School to its present honourable place is most creditable to Mr. Ramkrishna Gopal, the head master. The non-Government Schools take creditable places, and the appearance of several new names in the list gives gratifying evidence of activity in hitherto silent districts. The one exception to the general progress is the Belgaum Sirdars High School, which is thirteenth on the list, and appears to be in a state of stagnation. Though this school has enjoyed for three or four years the superintendence of Mr. Bellairs, one of the European High Schoolmasters of the Educational Department, it has stood still and been surpassed by the so-called second-grade High Schools of Rutnagherry, Dhoolia, and others. It is time that this important High School was entrusted to some one of the workers of the Educational Department, say, for instance, the present able Vice-Principal of the Elphinstone High School.

THE LATE CYCLONE.—Colonel Stevenson, in his report on the cyclone which passed over Akyab on the 13th November, records, we learn from the Indian Daily News, two "unscientific observations" worthy of attention. One was that the barometers gave no indication of the approach of the storm, animals being more susceptible to the impending influence, and that in Burmah these instruments are positively deceptive; they appear to have been of no use for practical purposes. The other was, that a very creditable spirit of cheerfulness was maintained during the cyclone, especially where people were persuaded to try the effect of refreshment! And we trust abundant refreshment could be had, for the following shows it must have been needed:—"Short as the duration of the storm was, the scenes of distress and danger to be seen everywhere were very striking. Ladies left their falling houses at the height of the storm and struggled barefooted, drenched by the torrents of hail-like rain, often obliged to crouch on the ground to avoid being swept away by the wind, and braving the risk of destruction from the incessantly falling trees. The best houses were full of refugees, who had found their way there partly on their hands and partly on feet. Many passed the night in wet clothes, some were without food or light; I believe no one had a bed."

THE FAMINE.

THE PUNJAB.—The Sindian regrets to say that the prospects of the harvest throughout the Punjab continue to be very discouraging. The returns for the week ending Nov. 22 report that they are "bad" in the districts of Delhi, Simla, Hoshiarpore, Sealkote, Goordaspore, and Shahpore; "very bad" in Loodianah and Goojranwallah, and everywhere in Kurnal, except the canal villages; "unfavourable" in Lahore, Rawulpindee, Goojrat, Jhung, and Montgomery; "indifferent" in Dhera Gazee Khan; and "average" in Dhera Ismail Khan and Moozufferghur. The rubbee sowings are going on in Goorgaon wherever practicable; there is no prospect of rubbee in Hissar; in Rhotuk the crops are "dried up"; in Sirsa the rubbee is much in need of rain, and a considerable area sown with wheat, which is now sprouting up, will be dried up if the rain keeps off; in Umballa, where there is no prospect of rain, the crops are favourable in sailadi lands only; wheat is germinating in Jullundur, but turning yellow for want of rain; rain is wanted in Umritsur, and the rubbee sowings are going on in Mooltan, but the people are emigrating from the Bar with their cattle to the bank of the river. Peshawur continues to be the only district in which the prospects are "good." The price of wheat ranges from 10 to 15 seers per rupee, but averages about 12 seers only, and other grains in proportion.

GWALIOR.—Prices, according to the Delhi Gazette, are rising at Gwalior, but not so high as was at one time anticipated. The railway feeds Etawah and Etawah supplies Gwalior and the neighbouring districts. The great difficulty appears to be the continuation of the transit dues. Despite all proclamations about free trade, dealers in a native State cannot sell, whatever they may do in the way of purchasing, without special authority. Of course commerce is hampered in consequence. The artillery battery has been moved from Gwalior to be located throughout the cold season at Sepree. Grass can be had there; and, for the matter of that, even in a military point of view, Sepree is in a better position than Morar.

AJMER.—The Sindian says:—"A private letter informs us that the famine in Ajmere must be severe, for the Meerpoor Talooka of the Roree districts is swarming with immigrants from that territory. Blind old people are among the fugitives soliciting alms, whilst the able-bodied men are seeking for labour. The women and children must be suffering sadly, for the weather, especially during the night, is very trying. The poor creatures are so hard pressed that in some localities children are offered for sale, but of course no buyers can be found. The opportunity of securing plenty of labour at reasonable rates should be seized without delay. The province will benefit by it, and the sufferers find a means of livelihood. In some places where our population is sparse it will invite a useful class of people to settle down. Grain dealers from Jessulmere usually buy up supplies in the Roree districts, but this year the demand is very great, and hundreds of camels may be seen carrying away produce daily out of our territory, where, if the drain continue much longer, famine prices must soon set in."

THE OUDH AND ROHILCUND RAILWAY.

The main direction of the railway lines for Rohilcund, Oude, and Benares, after having been under discussion for twelve years, was finally settled before the Viceroy left Simla. The tendency of the trade of these provinces is south; they seek exchange with those south of the Ganges, and their sea-borne trade might find outlet either by Bombay or Calcutta, Benares only being nearer to Calcutta than to the western port. Instead, therefore, of one through line traversing them from south-east to north-west, a system of lines tributary to the East Indian Railway was proposed, to which the former was superadded as an additional convenience, and with the view of bringing all parts of the provinces within a moderate distance of the railway. And under the decision of the Government of India, now recorded, the first parts of the Oude and Rohilcund Railway Company's system to be undertaken are the loopline from Lucknow via Fyzabad and Jounpore to Benares, including, if desired by the Chief Commissioner, a branch to Byramghat, and the line from Allypore to Chundowsee, with branches to Moradabad, and to Bareilly and Shahjehanpore. With regard to Rohilcund, the Governor-General desires that a survey should be set in hand at once, and operations so arranged as to open telescopically between Allypore and Chundowsee, the object being to connect Rohilcund with the East Indian Railway in a direction suitable for the ultimate connection with Rajpootana, so as to exchange the salt of the Sambhur Lake for the sugar of Rohilcund. From Chundowsee the line may be taken eastward to Bareilly, and on to Shahjehanpore, and westward to Moradabad, ultimately crossing the Ramgunga there. Further extension from Moradabad to Ramnugger or elsewhere at the foot of the Himalayas may not pay; but this branch forms part of the contract scheme, and Government has in some degree pledged itself to railway communication with the Kumaon iron mines, and it will be decidedly advantageous to extend the line to the large military station under construction at Raneekhet. The question however has been deferred. The rich country north of Ramgunga is neglected in the plan, but roads will, as far as possible, supply the deficiency, and provision will be made for roadways for ordinary traffic over the railway bridges at Moradabad and on the line to Bareilly. When the time arrives for extension westward of Moradabad, Hurdwar and Roorkee might be included in the line to join the Delhi Railway at Saharanpore. It would afford control over the pilgrim traffic to and from Hurdwar, and bring the workshops at Roorkee into more intimate connection with other parts of the country.

With regard to Oude the trunk will be taken through Lucknow, instead of laying it out more directly for the through traffic from Buxar to Rohilkund; and Fyzabad will be placed on the main line, instead of on a short branch, as proposed in the arrangements of 1864. The former will thus join the Byramghat branch at Nawabgunge, instead of at Dilsrai. The line westward from Lucknow will be carried to the south of the Goomtee, through the towns of Sundela, Hurdai, and Shahabad, instead of northwards via Seetapore and Khyrabad as previously planned; but this part of the through line will for the present be postponed, and the works first proceed from Lucknow eastwards.

As to the province of Benares, the conclusions of the Lucknow Committee of November, 1867, have been adopted. They were to complete the line between Lucknow and Usrengurh, and the branch from the latter to Jounpore and Benares first, without any bridge at Benares, and to leave that from Usrengurh to Buxar, with the bridge at the latter place, for future consideration. The only modification is that the line may be taken by Akherpore and Meerpore instead of by Usrengurh, but with the understanding that the Buxar route with the bridge is still to be undertaken by the company when required by the Government.—Indian Daily News.

THE FAMINE TRACT.

JEYPOOR.

The principality of Jeypoor is one of the most important, if not the most important, of the Rajpoot provinces. It is bounded on the north by Bikaner, and the British districts of Hissar and Puttealah; on the south lie Gwalior, Boondce, Tonk, Meywar, and Ajmere; to the west are Kishengurh and Marwar; to the east Ulwur and Bhurt-poor. The area of Jeypoor is about 15,000 square miles, with an average length and breadth of 150 miles. The population is estimated at 1,900,000. This estimate includes the tributary States of Khetree and the Shekawattee country.

The centre of Jeypoor presents an elevated chain of rocky hills, running in a north-easterly direction, and separating the more fertile plains to the south from the sandy semi-desert tracts, and from sand hills as already described, under the head of Jeysulmere, to the north. On the southern side of this line of hills water is everywhere near the surface, but, on the north, the further the desert country is entered, the greater depth must wells be sunk. As a general rule, the monsoon is tolerably plentiful in the south of Jeypoor, an average fall of twenty-five to thirty inches being the fair estimate. To the north there is scarcely half this quantity. Colonel Brook, in his political history of Jeypoor, remarks that the country "to the south-east is seldom afflicted with the periodical famines which visit the neighbouring territories. Being on the verge of the influence of the south-western and south-eastern monsoons, it receives rain from both, and if one fails the other is generally bountiful. The annual fall at Jeypoor itself may be stated at from twenty-two to twenty-eight inches."

The Jeypoor territory, while thus more highly favoured than many of the neighbouring districts, is not well watered by running streams. The River Bunnass, rising near the Rajmahal hills, takes a tortuous course until it reaches the eastern frontier; and a smaller stream, the Bangunga, passes in a north-easterly direction, becoming afterwards a tributary of the Ganges. But neither of these rivers retain water, except at intervals, through the hot weather. Hence the irrigation of the crops is chiefly effected from wells. In the southern districts, where water is near the surface, wells are soon constructed, the weight of a round hollow masonry tower serving to sink the whole as a shaft through the porous stratum of supervening earth. Six or eight feet (in height) of this shaft being erected, it is left to subside into the earth, another portion being added at intervals of a few months until water is reached, the central earth being excavated from time to time. In the northern parts of Jeypoor, as indeed throughout the semi-desert country generally, the construction of a well is a much more serious and expensive matter. The cost of digging a well in these localities varies from five to eight thousand rupees. The shaft must be sunk to an enormous depth, and often a stratum of sand appears, which pours into the opening like water, defying all attempts at removal, and ultimately causing the abandonment of the well. When a well is finished, Colonel Brooke tells us, it is a source of great profit, as the cattle from neighbouring villages are brought to drink at so much per head a month. "The effect of the small number of wells in the semi-desert districts is to cause a congregation of the population. When a bed of Kunkur has been come upon, a handsome town has been formed. Thus Seckur, Suchmunpoor, Futteepoor, Bissao, and other cities of the Jeypoor border, have arisen. The imposing aspect of the mansions in these towns, notwithstanding the gaudy character of the decorations (painted outside), sensibly strikes a stranger, who little expects to meet such handsome cities immediately adjoining the sandy desert." Four-fifths of the population is however congregated in these towns, which are generally about twenty miles apart, and between them is scarcely an inhabited place. Where villages do exist the houses form a great contrast to those of the towns. They are little better than circular, or rather "bee-hive shaped" structures of grass, supported by a few sticks—a form of residence common to the poorer classes throughout all the semi-desert tracts.

Much of the water in the Jeypoor territory partakes of the brackishness almost universal in Marwar. And this is particularly the case near the Great Sambhur salt lake, situated at the south-west extremity of Jeypoor, between that country and Marwar. The Sambhur lake is an immense sheet of water, many miles in extent, and capable of affording an unlimited supply of salt, which is procured after the process of evaporation. But owing to the absence of roads to the spot, to the vexatious imposts on the article produced, and to the oppressive treatment accorded by durbar officials to the Brinjaree carriers, not nearly the quantity of salt is made, or carried away, which would otherwise be the case. Formerly a British officer was located at Sambhur for the express purpose of protecting the salt-traders. Since his withdrawal the manufacture has become much less.

We have seen that in Marwar, Bikaner, and Jeysulmere, no sugar-cane, opium, or rice is grown, and comparatively little wheat or cotton. In the State of Jeypoor, however, it is very different. In the south-east districts particularly large tracts are covered with wheat, urhur, rape, til, linseed, chinna, while a considerable number of fields are devoted to tobacco, opium, and sugar-cane. In former times the amount of the latter cultivation must have been much greater than at the present period. Near almost every village are the remains of old stone sugar mills, which thus demonstrate the former wealth of the country.

The revenue of the Jeypoor principality may be estimated at twenty-eight lacs. Maharajah Ram Sing in the rule of his country presents a pleasing contrast to his neighbour of Marwar. Acting under the advice of successive political officers, his conduct has generally evinced a liberality and broadness of view seldom evidenced by the native chiefs of Rajpootana. The action taken by the Jeypoor Durbar in relation to the present famine reflects the greatest credit on the Political Agent, Major Beynon, with whom we believe the propositions originated, and also on his Highness the Maharajah, who cordially and without hesitation accorded his sanction. By proclamation, issued under the Jeypore State seal, it is directed that all import and export duty on grain, and all transit duties on grain, shall cease throughout the Jeypoor territory, both in khalsah and jagheer lands. The Maharajah states that he considers he can in this manner best serve public interests, not only in his own province, but in that of neighbouring chiefs. And the value of this order can scarcely be over estimated. Grain for the supply of the British districts of Mhairwarrah and Ajmere must pass from the north through Jeypoor. The boon, therefore, accorded by the chief of the latter place to the inhabitants of Mhairwarrah is incalculable. At present, so far as we are informed, no other chief of Rajpootana has followed the example of Jeypoor. All are bent on preventing the export of grain from their territories, and in forbidding the passage of emigrants across their frontiers, in which illiberal policy Gwalior takes the lead.

At present the inhabitants of Jeypoor have not suffered from the scarcity to any very great extent; they were more lucky than their neighbours of Marwar. A little rain fell throughout most talooks of the former principality; but the aspect of the future, as regards the cold weather crops, is not favourable, and the country people, fearing the worst, strenuously endeavour to compel all emigrants from neighbouring States to "move on" without delay.

KISHENGURH.

The small State of Kishengurh comprises about 800 square miles, and joins the eastern frontier of the British district of Ajmere. The population is estimated at 100,000, and the revenue at about two lakhs and a quarter. The aspect of the country is very similar to that of Jeypoor, comprising a succession of hills composed chiefly of granite or tap rock, with fertile valleys between. Following the example of Colonel Dixon in the adjoining British territory of Ajmere, the Kishengurh chief, years back, caused the construction of a number of tanks and bunds, from which in ordinary years an ample recompense is now obtained. The present ruler, who bears the title of Maharajah, is well spoken of, and transacts most of the business of the administration himself. The chief towns in the district are Kishengurh, the capital, favoured by the vicinity of a noble lake, Roopnuggur and Surwar. During the past season very little rain fell at either of these places, but the country is better off than many other districts, and water being near the surface, no great distress is to be anticipated. It is also said the quantity of grain stored in Kishengurh is sufficient for the consumption of at least the inhabitants until next monsoon.

ULWUR.

Ulwur is the most northerly of all the Rajpoot principalities, bordering on Jeypoor and Bhurtpoor to the south, and marching with portions of the North-West Provinces on the opposite frontier. The revenues amount to about 20,000,000 rupees, and the population is computed at 2,80,000, on an area of 3,573 square miles. The appearance of the country is very similar to some parts of Jeypoor—hilly, with fertile valleys intervening. During recent years a considerable quantity of waste land has been brought under cultivation, and many new wells dug. It is authoritatively stated that, owing to a light land assessment, the people of this province are more prosperous and contented, and the country better tilled and cultivated, than in any other principality of Rajpootana, excepting perhaps Bhurtpoor. This is, however, in a great measure due to the province having been for some years, during a minority, under the immediate superintendence of British officers; and since, in 1863, the assumption of the rights of sovereignty by the young Maharajah, few of the arrangements formerly made have been disturbed. This speaks volumes for the chief, who might increase his revenue by a fresh assessment; but, to his credit, he has rather preferred the welfare and prosperity of the people to his own enrichment.

The Ulwar principality is divided into seventeen pergunnahs, of which those districts situate to the south-east are the most fertile. In the north-west, towards the semi-desert regions, the country becomes more sandy and sterile, though there are none of those barren wastes characteristic of Bikaner, the Shekawatee, and Marwar. The principal food of the people in Ulwar is bajira, but in ordinary years large quantities of wheat and other kinds of grain are produced; also til and a little sugar-cane and opium. Water is generally near the surface, fairly good, and the country possesses a number of tanks. The city of Ulwar is partly supplied with water conveyed from a "talao" some miles distant, and which will probably yield a sufficiency until the next monsoon fall. Although scarcity must exist in Ulwar, none but the very poorest will suffer from actual want, and doubtless the well-known liberality of the Maharajah will be extended to alleviate the sufferings of this class.

STATION TALK.

UMRITSUR.—Our quiet station has been in an unusual turmoil and excitement during the last week, on account of the Bishop of Calcutta's visitation, which lasted from Wednesday morning until Sunday evening. His Lordship, during that short time, consecrated a native burial-ground, held an ordination of priests and deacons, confirmed a large number of native candidates, visited the Christian Orphanages and the Mission Girls' School, and performed besides many other necessary duties, such as visiting the cemeteries and hospital, examining the candidates for ordination, and doing in addition a fair amount of preaching and exhortation every day. Perhaps the most interesting event in connection with his Lordship's visit was the Mission Educational Durbar, which was held in six large schamiana tents, erected in the compound of the Rev. C. E. Storrs, and so arranged as to form one long spacious tent, sufficiently large to hold conveniently more than a thousand boys, besides a great number of European and native visitors. At nine o'clock the scholars of the Mission schools assembled at the main school, and having arranged themselves in double file, marched through the city, accompanied by two bands of music, and carrying nearly forty flags and banners of the gayest and brightest colours. The procession was strikingly un-Indian in its appearance, being orderly and well arranged, and could not but remind one of that thoroughly English sight, which most of us have had the pleasure of witnessing at one time or another, namely, the Sunday-school treat at Whitsuntide, when all the parish school children dressed in their best make a high holiday and hold their annual feast. When the scholars reached the mission compound and were arranged in their seats, the native gentry began to assemble from the city and neighbourhood, and before twelve o'clock a goodly number of Raiis and Sardars, and nearly all the civilians and Europeans of the station, were gathered together to show their interest in the mission schools and their respect and regard for the Lord Bishop of the diocese. The durbar was opened by the reading of the report of the schools by the Rev. C. E. Storrs, principal of the Mission Collegiate School, which report was first read in English, and then addressed in Urdu to the native gentry present. The Bishop then, having made a short speech in the vernacular, proceeded to distribute the prizes among the boys, which consisted of a handsome silver medal (in memory of the late respected Principal of the school, the Rev. F. Wathen), splendidly embroidered chogas and turbans, and useful and well-bound books, the whole amounting in value to about Rs. 400. After the distribution was completed, Mr. Egerton, the Commissioner, spoke a few words; then one or two of the leading native gentry (among whom were Rajah Shamshere Singh and Sir Rajah Sahib Dial, K.S.I.) made short speeches and presented sums of money to the Mission Schools, and the whole "tamasha" was concluded by a very lively address from the Bishop on the importance of education, urging the natives present not only to educate their sons, but to give the same inestimable blessing to their wives and daughters.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE BANK OF BENGA has declared a dividend for the past half-year, ended December 31st last, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum.

ARRIVAL OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—A salute was fired at Fort William on the morning of the 8th December, in honour of the arrival of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at this Presidency.

MYSORE COMMISSION.—As we noticed, above a month ago, the probability of Mr. Gordon's appointment to the Judicial Commissionership of Mysore, we may state that it is now settled that this arrangement will take place. We may also notice that Captain Randall will be appointed to officiate as Agent of the Governor-General with the ex-King of Oudh, and Superintendent of Political Pensioners.—Indian Daily News.

101ST ROYAL BENGAL FUSILIERS.—This regiment left Bombay in the Indian transport Malabar on the 1st January, Colonel Frederick O. Salusbury in command. The Malabar is due at Suez on the 17th, the regiment disembarks on the following day, and proceeds on by rail to Alexandria, and embarks on board H.M.S. Serapis for Portsmouth, arriving about the 4th of February. Lieutenant Brydon is reported to have passed an examination in the Lower Standard in Hindoostanee.

THE VICEROY'S EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.—According to the Pioneer, speculation is still rife as to the probable successor to Mr. Noble Taylor in the Executive Council of the Governor-General. The favourites are Mr. Seton-Karr and Mr. Clive Bayley, the Foreign and Home Secretaries. We however rather incline to Mr. Ellis, of the Bombay Civil Service—a member of Council of that Presidency. It is generally thought desirable that one of the minor Presidencies should always be represented in the Supreme Council, and Mr. Ellis would therefore fitly succeed Mr. Noble Taylor, who has now for nearly five years represented Madras. Mr. Ellis is thought much of in Bombay, and is, in fact, a man of very fair capacity, and possesses good business-like habits—perhaps somewhat inflated and loud, as leading men in small circles are apt to be (it is astonishing how fine and rich a tenor one has while singing in a bath-room); but he is not illiberal in his views, and is capable, we should think, of expansion. He has, moreover, good interest at the India-office.

THE ADVANCE OF CIVILISATION AMONG THE NATIVE LADIES OF DACCA AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.—We have been informed on competent authority that it has lately become a custom with the wives and daughters of the more advanced class of native gentry in this city to keep pet dogs and cats, and that there is a considerable demand amongst them for English dogs, especially for those of the smaller sort. We fear that this has inadvertently given rise to what has certainly not been common in Dacca before—dog stealing, for of late suspicious disappearances of canine favourites have taken place, which leave little room for doubt that they have been stolen with a purpose, and the animals are now believed to figure in the outpouris of obese baboos, who, whether they are aware of it or not, are the receivers of stolen goods. Let our readers be on the alert, and be especially careful to keep a sharp eye on the police.—News, Dec. 5.

THE KING OF BURMAH.—There is a pleasant fiction in Burmah that the old King is very averse to the shedding of human blood—that, in fact, he has never sanctioned the taking of human life. Royal blood, it is said, is never shed in Burmah, but the last rebellion destroyed many of these illusions. The King is also represented as so very peaceful as to dislike weapons being carried about him, and the general idea entertained is that he is a very amiable old woman. But the Rangoon Times vouches for the following story:—"A short time ago some of his ruby merchants were discovered taking bribes; he ordered them to be punished by being carried through the town in the usual way, beaten at every cross road, and their crime proclaimed to the people. By exertions and bribes the severest part of the sentence was not carried out, and everyone supposed that his Majesty would have forgotten all about it; but the King made inquiries next morning as to whether or not his orders had been carried out. When he heard that the men had not been flogged, he sent at once for the two Woon-douks to whom the orders had been given, questioned them sharply, and getting nothing but evasive answers, seized a spear and threw it at the head of one of the offenders. Had it not been for one of the queens who was present, and who rushed forward in time to catch his arm, one at least of the Woon-douks must have been killed upon the spot. The two culprits were then dragged from the Royal presence by the hair of the head, and thrown into prison. Through the intercession of some of the queens they have been released, but not reinstated in their rank." There are rumours of another insurrection, but these appear chronic, although foreigners in Mandalay are generally prepared for any such contingency.

THE 28TH N.I.—The head-quarters of this regiment will leave Kurnool on the 24th inst. for Vellore, where the corps is to be stationed in succession to the 6th N.I., presently on its way to Nagode.

DR. GELL.—We regret to hear that the state of his health will compel our bishop to go home early next year. Dr. Gell has been out in this country seven years, and as his life during that time has been one of incessant activity, we are not surprised to hear that he requires rest. We trust that if he must return to England he will soon come back to us like an episcopal giant refreshed with wine. Meanwhile, who is to act for him? Mr. Griffiths is the senior on the list of chaplains.—Madras Athenæum, Dec. 8.

COFFEE PROSPECTS.—We regret to learn that the prospects of planters in Coorg are not so favourable as could be wished. We are assured on good authority that all the coffee estates in Coorg, with very few exceptions, have yielded crops this year which will be ruinously short of the quantity estimated for.

LORD MAYO'S STAFF.—A correspondent of a contemporary, who ominously dates his letter from Fie-so-bad, asks:—"Why ridicule Lord Mayo's intention of making short work of the 'mazy correspondence' carried on out here? Has he not, in the appointments to his private and military secretaryships, proved himself well disposed to burn and burke?"

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—We believe it has been definitely arranged that the command of the Contingent, about to be vacated by Brigadier-general Lumsden, c.b., will be conferred upon Colonel H. D. Abbott, c.b., of the Madras Staff Corps. Colonel Abbott was first posted to the Hyderabad Contingent in March, 1839, nearly thirty years ago, and has served all that time with the cavalry branch of the army, doing good service and fully entitling him to the preferment in store for him—an appointment which we have reason to believe will be highly acceptable to the officers and men of the Contingent.

THE BENGAL BANK AGENCY IN BOMBAY.—At a meeting of shareholders in the New Bank of Bombay (Limited), residents at Madras, which was held at Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co.'s, on Friday, the 13th ult., and of which Mr. Patrick Macfadyen was chairman, it was unanimously resolved to submit a memorial to the Home Government, with the object of procuring the discontinuance of the Bengal Bank's Agency in Bombay. The memorial was submitted to the Local Government, who have transmitted it to the Government of India for submission to the Secretary of State. A copy of the letter to the Government of India, with a copy of the memorial, are also to be forwarded direct to the Secretary of State.—Madras Times, Dec. 10.

THE LATE COLONEL WINSOM.—We regret to record the death, at the Presidency, on Saturday evening last, of Lieutenant-Colonel G. V. Winsom, R.E., Superintendent Engineer of the Second Division. The deceased officer had been ailing for some time, and came down to Madras, only a few days ago, with the intention of going home, and, we believe, of eventually retiring from the service in which he had spent twenty-two of the best years of his life. So little did he know what was really the matter with him when he was taken ill, that he was, we hear, treated for brain fever; he died, however, of typhus. He was buried yesterday evening in St. Mary's Cemetery with the usual military honours. Three hundred rank and file of the Sherwood Foresters, under command of Major Hobbs, formed the firing party, and all the officers of the garrison off duty followed him to his last resting place.—Madras Times, Dec. 14.

A BRUTAL MURDER.—We have had a murder of unusual brutality. On the evening of the 29th November Mr. Thomas Page, master of the British ship Lena, lying in the roads, was walking on the pier, when a sailor, accompanied by two others, came up and stabbed him in the left side; in a day or two afterwards the wounded man died in the hospital. It appears that Thornton, the man who gave the fatal blow, and James Sinclair, one of his accomplices, were seamen of the Lena, who had been prosecuted by Captain Page and sent to jail for six weeks for continued refusal of duty; the third man was a discharged sailor from another ship. Thornton and Sinclair had just been discharged from custody, and they immediately walked from the jail to the pier with the purpose of finding the captain. They found him, and on his refusal to discuss with them the cause of their imprisonment, they stabbed him as we have described. All three prisoners have been committed for trial.—Madras Athenæum.

THE STAKE IN MANDALAY.—A Rangoon journal reports the crucifixion at Mandalay, the capital of Burmah, of a learned man for his religious tenets. The following may be relied upon as a true statement of the case:—A Burman of great respectability, and in his own way a highly educated man, began to denounce the worship of the Poongees, as being not only wrong in itself, but contrary to the true spirit of pure Buddhism. He at the same time exposed the gross abuse of power which is so common amongst the men of the yellow robes, and the iniquities in which too many of them indulge; he in fact preached a reformed Buddhism, and did his utmost to rid that religion of many of its worst features. A few followers, to the number of about forty, adopted the reformed religion, and all went about endeavouring to aid in the good cause. For this heinous crime the leader of this little band was cruelly crucified, some of his disciples thrown into prison, and all more or less persecuted.

A TRICHINOPOLY VILLAGE SCENE.—It is a strange fact that, notwithstanding the complete revolution that has come on, and is still going on in the social customs and peculiarities of the natives of this country, there are still left some of the time-honoured customs and institutions among some of their classes which time or change can neither efface nor reverse. As an illustration of this we give the following, which occurred a few days ago in the Pullar-street at Varaghanary. It would appear that among the Pullars there is a sort of authority which one of them exercises hereditarily, and which from time immemorial these people submit to in settling all disputes and differences among themselves. The man who exercises this power and authority over them is designated the Nattumupen; and this individual has, it would appear, a very summary mode of settling disputes. His office is hereditary and he subsists on the "fees" given to him by those of his caste who are involved in any dispute, and which dispute he settles. In the instance under notice, a Pullar woman—a newly-married woman perhaps—was, it is reported by an eye-witness, complained against to the Nattumupen of having abandoned her husband's home and taken to that of her parents'. On receiving the complaint the Nattumupen, who is a sort of circuit or peregrinating judge, proceeded to the village in which the accused resided. A large assembly of Pullar men and women was soon collected, and the Nattumupen seated himself very augustly on the cumly or blanket. He then sent for the accused and questioned her about her desertion of her husband and his house. The hard-hearted wife remained silent, when the Nattumupen ordered a chatty filled with water and cow-dung and a broom to be brought. This order being obeyed, the Nattumupen directed the woman at fault to attire herself with a white cloth, which he gave her, and to return the black cloth that she had worn to her mother. This being done too, the woman was next made to sit down with her face directed towards the south; and after this each of the women who were there successively took the broom, immersed it in the chatty of cow-dung and water, and beat it on the head of the accused. A few women went through this ignominious mode of castigation, when the delinquent begged pardon of the Nattumupen, and promised to return to her husband and to act the part of a good wife for the future.—Mofussil Guardian, Dec. 5.

STATION TALK.

BROACH, Dec. 10.—The E. Battery of Artillery, under the command of Colonel Oldershaw, marched in here a few days ago from Dec-a. They were bound, I learn, for Deolee; but just as they were preparing to cross the Nerbudda, a telegram from headquarters effectually stopped their arrangements. They remain here for the present, awaiting the arrival of his Excellency the Governor, and before they again resume their onward march you may be sure they will have enough to do, and spend heaps of powder in doing honour to the distinguished guests expected. They are a fine lot of fellows, and their gallant Colonel and officers are evidently becoming general favourites. I cannot vouch for the truth of the statement, but I learn that, in all probability, the battery will remain here till they take their final leave of the shores of India for those of Old England. The Broachites, I fancy, will welcome this piece of news, especially the Gymkhana sahib loque, for since the arrival of the men, the Gymkhana is beginning to look quite a different thing. With the permission of the Colonel, a few of the men have undertaken to put it in pukka order in time for the Exhibition (and I have no doubt that they will succeed, since Messrs. Bentley and Drennan are always to be seen on the ground, ready to grant all the aid they possibly can), so that another source of amusement is thus being opened to intending visitors. We only hope the battery will remain here, for they have gone to no end of trouble in arranging and doing up their present camping ground. Another battery of Artillery, I learn, arrives either to-day or to-morrow from Ahmedabad, en route to Kurrachee. It is not at all likely, however, that they will take up their quarters here also, for a company of the 23rd Fusiliers, I see, are in orders for Broach, so that the battery expected will, in all probability, be allowed to proceed to its original destination. The 23rd bring their fine band with them; two bands of other regiments are also expected, so that we need fear no lack of sweet music. All these arrangements of course are for the Exhibition, so that should it not prove a complete success (but I have no doubt it will) it will not be for the want of civil and military aid. The Governor, I believe, is expected here by special train from Bombay on the evening of the 21st, and will, perhaps, be accompanied by Lord Mayo and Lord Napier of Magdala. Every necessary arrangement due to the distinguished guests is being made, and all Rajahs and Chiefs that can possibly be puckaroud are to be present. The Gaekwar, I learn, encamps in one of his own villages (Chummergaum), a few miles from Broach, and will come in every day in State, with no end of tag-rag and bob-tail that is usually seen on such occasions. The Resident, Colonel Barr, however, will be in Broach, and in all probability will take up his temporary residence somewhere in the grand camp. A goodly number of visitors are expected, including a very fair sprinkling of the fair; so, young men, beware of manœuvring mammas, for matches of course are being contemplated.

Miscellaneous.

THE RATE OF DISCOUNT IN BOMBAY.—At the meeting of the directors of the Bank of Bombay, on Dec. 17, the rates of discount were raised one per cent. all round. The rates in Bombay are still very considerably below those prevailing in Calcutta. The interest charged by the New Bank of Bombay is 7 per cent., and on private discounts having a currency of over 60 days, 10 per cent., as compared with 9 and 13 per cent. respectively in Calcutta.

BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND LORD MAYO.—A special general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on Dec. 16, for the purpose of voting an address to the Right Honourable the Earl Mayo, K.P., on his arrival as Governor-General of India. Also for the purpose of balloting for the admission, as members of the Chamber, of the firm of Lockhart and Co.; Mr. Hamilton Maxwell, the chairman of the Chamber, presided. The draft of a memorial which had been drawn up was read by Mr. Taylor. It congratulated the new Viceroy on his appointment, and stated the hope of the Chamber, that under his auspices the extension of railways in India would be promoted, and referred to other subjects. Mr. Gumpert expressed the opinion that the address should contain allusion to the want of an improved postal service, the necessity for reform in the telegraph service, the famine existing in some parts of India, and other subjects which will have to be considered by the Government of India. The Hon. Mr. A. H. Campbell and the Hon. Mr. Alex. Brown supported the views of Mr. Gumpert, and eventually, on the motion of Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Rudolf Ahlers, the address was agreed to, subject to the additions now suggested, which it was left to the committee to embody.

SANS SOUCI.—The festivities of the season opened very brilliantly on Monday evening, Dec. 14, at Sans Souci, to which Mr. Sassoon had drawn as his guests all the beauty and fashion of the island, to meet his Excellency the Governor. The approaches to Mr. Sassoon's mansion were illuminated for, we suppose, a third of a mile, and the guests passed under an arch of "Welcome" as they entered the grounds, which were one blaze of light throughout. His Excellency the Governor, with Mr. Fitzgerald, accompanied by Sir H. M. Durand and the staff, reached Sans Souci about ten o'clock, when the ball was immediately opened. The band was in attendance, and the whole of the suite of rooms was speedily thronged by dancers now winding their way through the mazy intricacies of "the Lancers," and now dashing through the galop or the valse to its music. Supper was served about half-past twelve, and at one o'clock H.E. the Governor and Staff retired; but dancing was kept up to a late hour in the morning. Among the guests were Sir H. M. Durand and the Chief Justice, and almost all the members of Council, native as well as European. We cannot conclude this notice without a further word or two concerning the illumination, which was the most perfect and beautiful one we have ever witnessed. It was an eloquent testimony to the capability of the Bombay Gas Works, which delivered, we believe, about one hundred thousand cubic feet of gas for the purpose. The colours of the glasses were harmoniously blended, and produced an almost fairy scene of splendour.

THE SCARCITY IN KHANDAISH.—Some correspondence regarding the failure of the crops and the scarcity of water in several parts of the province of Khandeish has been placed at our disposal by Government. From a letter of Mr. G. F. Sheppard, Acting Collector of Khandeish, to the Revenue Commissioner, N.D., dated 24th November, it appears that the rainfall has been scanty throughout the province; and even the showers that fell were unseasonable, and were prevented from penetrating far below the surface of the soil by a strong warm wind, which dried up the moisture during the first three months. In the talookas of Malligum, Nandgaum, and Chalisgaum, the country is in many places bare and dried up, and in some of the villages rain only fell once during the monsoon, and no jowaree was even sown. In these three talookas there has been a succession of bad seasons for three years, and this year the prospects are gloomy. The First Assistant-Collector, Mr. Pritchard, recommends that in fifteen villages there should be a remission of 50 per cent. of revenue, and that in other forty-six villages 50 per cent. of the revenue should remain over till next year. Prices in the province have already risen 30 per cent., and are expected to continue to rise, not only on account of the short crops, but also owing to the drain, which has already commenced on the northern talookas for the distressed districts of Rajpootana. There is no reason, however, to anticipate anything approaching to an actual famine season. The distress which is apprehended is more from a scarcity of water than from increased prices of food. The rivers generally, excluding the Taptee, have at present barely more than the usual hot weather supply of water in their beds, and in some parts of the zilla considerable distress is anticipated as the season advances. No large public works are in progress in the province; there are no crops to watch, no harvest to reap, and the demand for field labour in such a season must be small. It is, therefore, felt necessary to devise some means of livelihood, not only for the distressed classes of the province, but also for the emigrants from Rajpootana, who are passing through Khandeish in great numbers. The Collector has recommended that the construction of a road from Chalisgaum to the rich plateau of Kunhur, via the Rajaugum Ghaut, be at once commenced under the superintendence of Captain Thomson, the Executive Engineer, who states that he can profitably spend upon it a sum of Rs. 50,000 between this and the 1st of June next. The Collector has also recommended that a sum of Rs. 25,000 be sanctioned for improving certain tanks, wells and dams in localities where a scarcity of water is most to be apprehended. Government has given its sanction to the remission and postponement of the revenue recommended, and telegraphed to Mr. Sheppard its sanction to the expenditure of the Rs. 75,000 necessary for carrying out the proposed works. The prompt action of the Government is highly commendable. As Mr. Sheppard pointed out, had there been any delay in granting the amount required for the tanks and dams the water supply in the places where these were required would probably have become insufficient to allow of the works being carried out this season, and the money placed at once to his credit will be more valuable than a much larger sum granted at a later period.

DESPATCHES OF THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.

From Major-Gen. A. Wilde, Commanding Hazara Field Force, to the Adj.-Gen., Head Quarters, Simla.

Head Quarters, Hazara Field Force, Camp Oogie, Oct. 26, 1868.

SIR,—In my last despatch I had the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the close of operations against the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain, and the signal punishment of the Puryaree Syuds. On the 14th Oct. the Hazara field force was encamped at Chermung, in the Tikaree valley. Four native regiments,* under Lieut.-Col. C. H.

Brownlow, C.B., had been detached from the camp at Munna-ka-Dunna to occupy the village of Koongullee and the Jalgully Pass. His Highness the Maharajah of Cashmeer's Dogra regiments being sent back from the pass to the camp at Oogie. On the evening of the 14th I opened communication with Lieut.-Col. C. H. Brownlow, who, under my orders, had commenced improving the rugged path through the pass. In two days Lieut. W. Broadfoot, R.E., assistant field engineer, had, with the working parties of the native regiments, made a fairly good road.

2. On the 15th I marched to the village of Tikaree, the most open part of the valley of that name, and during the day two squadrons of the 16th Bengal cav., under the command of Capt. R. Topham, joined me from Jalgully. I would here beg to advert to the excellent conduct of the soldiers, both British and native, of the force, and to which I know the commissioner will bear ample testimony. On my entering the valleys of the independent Swatees, I announced that the people of these districts were to be treated as friends by the troops; that they had submitted as suppliants to the British Govt.; that a fine of Rs.12,000 had been imposed on them for their unprovoked attack upon our detachment in the Agrore valley; that all supplies of food and forage were to be paid for; and that no plundering could be allowed. As H.E. is aware, the transition from war to peace in the feelings of native soldiers is no easy process; but I can state, in proof of the discipline of this force, that not a complaint was made, nor a single man punished, from the time the force left the camp at Oogie on the 3rd and returned on the 22nd Oct.

3. The 16th was spent in making a road from Tikaree to a village, Maidan, in the Nundehar valley, and during the day the 1st Goorkha regt., from the Jalgully Pass, and a squadron of the 16th Bengal cav. from Tikaree, were posted at the village of Chermung to keep open my line of communication when I advanced into the Nundehar valley.

4. On the 17th the force marched to Maidan, the road a very difficult one, running over the Shubora spur, which had been made passable under the directions of Lieut. W. B. Holmes, R.E., field engineer.

5. The 17th and 18th were passed in making reconnaissances towards the Takotee country, which Major C. C. Johnson, Assistant Quartermaster General, conducted as far as the top of the Dubrai Pass, seven miles from camp. The troops were employed in improving the road up the mountain, in case I should decide to move troops in that direction—a contingency which engaged the attention of the Commissioner and myself for some time. On the occupation of the Dubrai Pass by the troops, Habeeb Gool Sahibzada, of Paimal, the Akhoond of this part of the border, tendered his allegiance to the Deputy Commissioner, and several of the Takotee villages surrendered. No enemy appeared in sight, and all the distant villages seemed to be deserted. It was also reported on reliable authority, that Shaul Khan, of Takotee, had fled across the Indus on the approach of the force towards the Nundehar Valley. The country beyond the Dubrai Pass was the most difficult that could be imagined; the lands of the Takotees were poor, their crops scanty, and unlike the districts of Tikaree and Nundehar. No valleys were visible; their principal lands are said to be on the right bank of the Indus. I contemplated at one time a military raid, with the object of burning Takotee, a village of two hundred houses on the left bank of the Indus, but a nearer view of the country from the Dubrai Pass determined me not to attempt it. Considering the Takotees had fled, taking refuge on the Suksesar Mountain, beyond the Indus, and to reach them would have involved the extension of my military operations at least ten days, the Commissioner and myself concurred in the opinion that it was neither expedient, necessary, nor advisable to prolong the march of the force to the banks of the Indus. In this decision there were other political considerations at stake, which Major Pollock will no doubt explain in his communications to the Government.

6. The force subsequently made the following marches, and reached camp Oogie, in Agrore, on the 22nd October, having been absent from their tents and baggage since the 3rd:—19th October, Phugera, in Nundehar, foreign territory; 20th October, Chutta, in Konsh; 21st October, Aal, in Konsh, British territory.

7. In connection with this military demonstration through the countries (Tikaree, Nundehar, and Darshoo) of the independent Swatee tribes, I would record that the conduct of the inhabitants was uniformly good, and that the Swatee deputations remained faithful to their agreements. Supplies were not brought into camp readily, owing to most of the people having left their homes through fear; confidence was, however, partially restored ere we left the country. One incident, however, occurred—the act of an individual, which it was necessary to notice to prevent the prestige of our proceedings being injured. As the rear guard, late in the evening, passed along, a shot was fired at or over it. The Commissioner summoned the head men of the village near the spot where the insult was offered, and making prisoners of them, exacted a fine of Rs. 500, or the production of the culprit. The fine has been paid.

8. Having detailed the daily operations performed by the Hazara field force, I would venture to point out the political results of the campaign. Three Patan and three Swatee tribes have been brought into submission. The Puryaree Syuds have been signally punished, and Guffoor Khan, of Tikaree, one of the foremost, has been forced to sue for peace. The independent Swatees have been made to pay Rs. 12,000 to the British Government for their misconduct; and Hubeeb Gool, the Sahibzada of Paimal, a man held in great veneration, has paid his respects to the Commissioner—a very significant fact, showing that the people felt that they could no longer resist our arms.

9. The force traversed eighty miles of hill country, through which it had to make its own roads, and carry its own supplies; and on each occasion that a shot was fired, or an insult offered, immediate punishment was inflicted on the offenders. By the occupation of the strongholds of the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain, and the passage of our troops through the valleys of the independent Swatee tribes, the British Government has shown its ability and power to vindicate its honour; and I believe that late events will leave a lasting impression, not only on the Patans Cis-Indus, but also on their clansmen residing on the Eusufzai border.

10. One other circumstance I would note, namely, the mobility displayed on this occasion by our British regiments, and their capability to partake most efficiently in hill campaigning. Nothing could exceed the high spirit and energy displayed by both the Royal Artillery and British Infantry. With the exception of one blanket carried for each man, they fared as the native troops did; and their food did not actually require more carriage than that of the native troops. The men, too, of the Royal Artillery evinced their aptitude to adapt themselves to duties quite novel to them. The horse artillerymen of D battery, F brigade, packed and unpacked their guns on elephants, and the gunners of No. battery, 24th brigade, led and tended the mules carrying the mortars. From the day I started not a soldier, either British or native, made a complaint, but cheerfully underwent all the hardships, labour, and exposure incidental to our bivouac.

11. It is impossible to estimate the loss of the enemy, but I feel confidence in stating, and in this opinion the political officer agrees with me, that since the commencement of hostilities in August last up to the end of the campaign, their loss has been considerable.

12. In closing these reports of the expedition of '68 against the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain and the independent Swatze tribes of the valleys of Tikarce, Nundehar, and Darshce, I beg to bring the names of the following officers to the notice of H.E. the C. in C. :—

I. I have first to acknowledge the co-operation and unvaried assistance I have received throughout this hill campaign from Brigadiers-general R. O. Bright and J. L. Vaughan, c.b. As the colonel of that fine regiment, the 19th foot, Brigadier-general Bright set an example of disinterestedness and indifference to hardship and discomfort that proved most useful to me in the organisation of the force. Brig.-gen. Vaughan's knowledge and intimate acquaintance with hill warfare made me confident at all times that his brigade would be ably conducted, and his advice was, on several occasions, most useful to me.

II. The work performed since the formation of the Hazara field force by Majors J. Morland and C. C. Johnson, respectively, Asst. adjt. gen. and Asst. quartermaster gen., has been very severe, and I can state for H.E.'s information that there has not been a single misdirection of orders, or any confusion in the many intricate details these officers have had to control. They have both evinced great zeal, much knowledge, and a peculiar aptitude for the responsible appointments they held.

III. As H.E. is aware, the health of the men and consequent safety of a force in a hill campaign must mainly depend upon the excellence of its carriage and commissariat arrangements. No force ever took the field so well and skilfully provided as this one, and this result was entirely due to the exertions and ability of Lieut.-col. A. D. Dickens, Asst. Commissary-general, whose exertions I beg thus publicly to acknowledge.

IV. Much of the success of the late expedition is due to the talents and labours of Lieut.-Col. H. C. Johnstone, of the survey department, whose services were fortunately placed at my disposal. I would refer to the remarkable correctness of the sketch map this officer prepared from native information before we entered the hills. Lieut.-Col. Johnstone served in the Cabul Kheyl and Mahsood Wuzerece expeditions, and also at Umbeyla. I trust this occasion may be availed of to reward this most devoted and excellent public servant.

V. Lieut.-Col. E. Atlay commanded the artillery of the Hazara field force, and the manner in which the elephant and mortar batteries were equipped reflects the highest credit on this officer.

VI. In connection with this campaign I have to mention the name of Lieut.-Col. O. E. Rothney, commanding the 5th Goorkha regiment. This officer commanded in this valley during the first disturbances in August up to the end of September. He evinced in this difficult position great judgment and discretion, particularly in his attack on the enemy on the 12th Aug. On the force moving into the hills I considered it my duty, in the interests of the public service, to leave him in command of the camp at Oogie, and I trust this will not in any way be allowed to affect his professional prospects.

VII. I have every reason to be satisfied with the rapidity with which the field telegraph line was constructed and worked by Lieut. J. A. Armstrong, R.E., assistant field engineer.

VIII. The arrangements of the medical department were efficiently completed by Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals G. E. Morton, and I have to acknowledge the zeal and activity displayed on all occasions by Capt. Holmes, R.E.

IX. In conclusion of my recommendations in favour of the staff of this force, I beg to bring to H.E.'s notice Major W. Paget, my Aide-de-Camp, who has, from the very commencement of hostilities, rendered me great assistance. This officer bears a high character in the Punjab frontier force (in which he has served twenty years) for intelligence and devotion to his duties.

13. I append a list of officers commanding batteries and regiments, with remarks attached significant of their merits, and the opportunity their men have had of doing service during this command.

14. I transmit, for the perusal and consideration of H.E., the reports and commendations of Brigadier gens. Bright and Vaughan, and Lieut. col. Atlay.

15. From the commencement to the termination of hostilities, I have been in perfect accord with Major Pollock, the chief political officer, and his deputy, Capt. Ommauney, and again I beg to record my thanks to him for his co-operation.

COLONEL A. G. HYSLOP.—The death of Colonel Archibald Geddes Hyslop, of Lotus, Kirkcudbrightshire, and late of the Madras Artillery, took place very suddenly at Edinburgh, on December 20 last. He was educated at Addiscombe College, whence he was appointed to the Madras Artillery in 1817, and served in the Horse and Foot Artillery and Ordnance Commissariat Department of that Presidency till May, 1849, when he retired. He succeeded to the Lochend estate on the death of his elder brother, Lieutenant-Colonel William Hyslop, also of the Madras army, in 1864.

MAJOR-GENERAL JAMES RAMSAY, on the Retired List of the Bengal army, whose death at Bryanston-square on December 26 we announced in our last, was the third son of the late Lieutenant-General the Hon. John Ramsay, Colonel of the 79th Foot (the latter was the fourth son of George, eighth Earl of Dalhousie), by Mary, daughter of Philip de Lisle, Esq., of Calcutta; he was therefore cousin to the late Marquis of Dalhousie, sometime Governor-General of India, and of the present Earl of Dalhousie, and a younger brother of Major-General William Maule Ramsay, also a retired officer of the Bengal army, who is now heir-presumptive to the earldom. Major-General Ramsay was appointed captain in the 35th Bengal Light Infantry in 1845, and received his brevet majority in 1849. He was Deputy Commissary-general of the Bengal army from 1848 to 1852, and Commissary-general from 1852 to 1858, when he retired, being promoted to the rank of major-general in 1859.

COURT MARTIAL.—A district court-martial assembled at Chatham Barracks on Saturday week for the trial of Colour-Sergeant Guild, of the 109th Foot. The court sat again on Monday and concluded the investigation. The president of the court was Colonel Adair, Royal Marine Light Infantry. The prisoner was charged with misappropriating certain moneys, part of the funds of the sergeants' mess of the 1st and 2nd Depot Battalions, quartered in Chatham Barracks, while he was president of the mess; and also with forging the names of tradesmen to bills, to make it appear that the bills were receipted when they had not really been paid. On Saturday the evidence for the prosecution was given; and on Monday the prisoner made his defence, after which the court was closed. The finding of the court will not be made public till it has been approved by Major-General Freeman Murray, the Commandant of the Garrison.

THE LATE SIR HERBERT EDWARDES.—The following resolution was passed by the Secretary of State for India in Council on Thursday, the 7th of January :—"Resolved by the Secretary of State in Council (nemine contradicente), that the death of Major-general Sir Herbert Edwardes, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., has closed a career of great usefulness and of great distinction. His earliest achievements, twenty years ago, secured the special recognition of the Court of Directors of the East India Company and of her Majesty's Government. His last services deserve no less signal an acknowledgment. The Secretary of State for India in Council, in deploring the loss of so devoted and so valued a public servant, feels it a duty to signify his sense of the ability, daring, and resource which Sir Herbert Edwardes displayed in times of great difficulty and of great peril. He desires further, by the erection of a monument to the memory of this most distinguished officer, to attest his high appreciation of the example which Sir Herbert Edwardes has left to all the servants of the Crown in India."

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.—We are informed that the meetings of creditors and shareholders of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, directed by the Master of the Rolls to be called to consider the proposed arrangement, will be held on the 18th and 19th inst. Notices convening the meetings have been posted; and Mr. Holyland, the official liquidator, has sent to each creditor and shareholder a copy of a report which he has prepared, setting forth the grounds upon which it is desirable that the proposed arrangement should be confirmed. This report enters very fully into the past history of the liquidation, and of all the matters which were the subject of various suits in Chancery, including the suit instituted by the official liquidator of the old bank against the Corporation. The terms of the arrangement alluded to—namely, that all litigation is to be at once stopped, the creditors accepting 17s. in the pound in full satisfaction of their claims without interest—are also given; and Mr. Holyland recommends the compromise as expedient in the interests both of creditors and shareholders. Should it be rejected a call of £15 per share must be made; and as the Master of the Rolls has decided not to allow any further distribution of the assets in hand, now amounting to about £500,000, until the suit instituted by the old bank is settled, two years, or possibly more, would elapse before any dividend could be paid. On the other hand, should the arrangement be confirmed, the assets may be sufficient to pay the 17s. without any further call, or, should one prove requisite, it would be for a sum falling far short of £15 per share.

EAST INDIA CIVIL SERVANTS.—A deputation consisting of the following retired members of the East India Civil Service—Sir Robert Hamilton, Bart., Sir H. Harengton, K.C.S.I., Sir Henry Ricketts, K.C.S.I., Sir George Harvey, K.C.S.I., Robert Lowther, Esq., H. S. Boulderson, Esq., and J. J. Harvey, Esq.—had an interview recently with the Duke of Argyll, for the purpose of supporting their claims on the Indian Government, set forth in a memorial forwarded to the India Office. The claims were founded on arrangements made when the annuity fund was established in 1824, the main purpose of that fund being to entitle retiring officers, after twenty-five years' service, to an annuity of £1,000 a-year, on payment by deduction from salary of 4 per cent., or one-half of the settled price of the annuity, the then East India Company giving the other half by way of "boon." The payments in course of time were found greatly to exceed the stipulated half of the price of the annuity in the case of the majority of old servants, the "excess" fund now in the India Treasury being somewhere between £200,000 and £300,000. Some alterations were made in the rules from time to time; in particular, in 1853 a resolution was passed, doing away with any return of excess of payment to the fund, and substituting in lieu thereof some other kind of benefit. The old servants protested against this alteration, as irregular and unjust, and for some time have made efforts to get their claims recognised and paid. Several members of the deputation addressed his Grace, who promised to consider the matter. The result of the visit of the deputation was conveyed to the memorialists in the following letter:—"India Office. Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st ultimo, and to acquaint you that the Duke of Argyll sees no reason to depart from the decision communicated to you in the letter from this office, dated in August last, in which you were informed that the Secretary of State for India (Sir S. Northcote) was unable to sanction a compliance with the request contained in the memorial signed by yourself and certain other retired members of the Bengal Civil Service, praying for the refund of the excess of the accumulated subscriptions above one half of the value of the several annuities.—Signed, HERMAN MERIVALE. To Robert Lowther."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE STAR OF INDIA.

The Broad Arrow is puzzled to think what meritorious public services performed in India could be enumerated against the name of Mr. John Clark Marshman, who has lately been gazetted Companion of the Star of India. At present we are only aware that he is the ex-editor of the Friend of India, and, we believe, the inspirer of the policy enunciated by the Times on all subjects connected with that country. Now, both of these journals have consistently upheld the views of the Viceroy of India. We allude particularly to those entertained by Sir John Lawrence on the subject of our present foreign policy with reference to the countries beyond our North-West frontier, and on his well-known antipathy to the consolidation of native States under their own chiefs. On both of these subjects, but more especially on the latter, the opinions of the ex-editor of the Friend of India entirely coincide with those of the late Viceroy, and persistently have they been maintained in the journals to which we have referred. Sir John Lawrence's administration generally, and his eagerness to tilt at and topple over into the dust every native chief have been at all times held up for universal admiration. Is this the service that has been considered worthy of reward? And has the honour of recommending it for special distinction been reserved for Sir John Lawrence? How many names of Government officials, European and native, who have done good service to the State, had to be passed over before Mr. Marshman's was arrived at? These are questions which suggest themselves to us. We say advisedly "special distinction," because we believe that Mr. Marshman is the first instance of an Englishman not connected with the services receiving the Star of India. If this order is to be bestowed on eminent writers on subjects connected with India, how is it, we would ask, that Mr. Kaye, an able and graphic historian, and one well known in the walks of Indian literature, remains undecorated? Of the Friend of India, a paper now known by the rising generation of Baboos under a less pleasing sobriquet, that great and good man, Sir Henry Lawrence, wrote during the early days of the rebellion to the Governor-general in the following terms:—"Whatever may be the danger from the native press, I look on it that the papers published in our language are much the most dangerous. Disaffected native editors need only translate as they do, with or without notes or words of admiration or exclamations, editorials from the Friend of India (on the duty of annexing every native State, on the imbecility, if not wickedness, of allowing a single jagheer, and of preaching the Gospel even by commanding officers), to raise alarm and hatred in the minds of all religionists, and all connected with native principalities or Jagheers." The writer of these pernicious doctrines, so unequivocally denounced by Sir H. Lawrence, is the gentleman whom it hath now delighted the Government to honour, to the utter amazement of all who know what infinite mischief these sentiments wrought in the native mind—mischief that culminated in rebellion. O tempora! O mores! Appropriately may we say in Eastern phrase, that never in our dreams, or in our imagination, had we pictured Mr. John Clark Marshman a Companion of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

THE BONUS.—We have many inquiries about our information regarding the bonus to field officers. The facts are, we believe on excellent authority, as follows. The Supreme Government are very much in favour of it, and have pressed it more than once on the Secretary of State. Colonel Broom's scale and that of another officer (of this army) were both forwarded to the India-office. General Sir Robert Vivian and General Pears are the two great opponents to the measure, but they will have to give way. If they do not, the state will continue to be saddled with an unnecessary expenditure. It is curious that Sir R. Vivian and General Pears belong to this army, and cannot take a liberal view of a subject which is of such immense interest to so many of their brother officers. The authorities at home have, practically, the power of allowing a number of gentlemen, who are perfectly useless out here, to spend the remainder of their days in their native land, and at the same time by liberal measures to save the State from considerable loss; and yet they sit in their offices at Westminster, and take a short-sighted illiberal view of what is in reality a simple question of arithmetic. Perhaps the best way to put the matter before these gentlemen is to point out that for all practicable and useful purposes a number of officers in this Presidency are "retired" and drawing full effective pay—that is to say, they are "retired from business," they have nothing to do. So long as they can claim their full pay by right with the off reckonings in the future, so long will they hold on to this "retired" condition. Many of these officers, had the old Indian army been left alone, would never have dreamt of leaving the service, but the army has been destroyed, its role is over, there is no military duty, no prospect of distinction. Well, here are these gentlemen, many of them willing to go, if provided with the means to enable them to do so—and yet the means are withheld! It appears to us nothing short of "midsummer madness" to keep up an expensive army of cocked hats under such circumstances. We are informed that at Bangalore the number of field officers who attended the general commanding on field days was so great as to necessitate an order that only two officers were required to attend at each parade. It is clear that so many field officers are not required by the State for parade or any other purposes. Our conviction is that a bonus will be given, and the difficulty thus to a certain extent got over. We trust to hear more on this subject shortly.—Madras Athenaeum and Daily News.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-Gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
Lord CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUNTSTUART	Major D'ARCY TODD.
ELPHINSTONE.	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune."

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 21st, that "100 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s., 1½d., 2s., 9d., and 5s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

CHEST COMPLAINTS.—It is a source of the highest satisfaction that an easy and expeditious mode of checking and conquering these constantly recurring affections has been discovered. The propriety of disturbing the nervous and vascular system in pulmonary maladies, by administering internal medicines, was long questioned before Professor Holloway was enabled to prove the practicability of relieving over-gorged lungs and restoring their natural action by external means. His Ointment, thoroughly rubbed on the walls of the chest twice a day, gives the utmost security and comfort in influenza, acute and chronic coughs, bronchitis, pleurisy, stitches in the side, shortness of breath, and palpitation, with other allied and dangerous diseases.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 26; Agra, December 22; Calcutta, December 22; Madras, December 21.

The landing and reception of Lord Mayo at Bombay form the leading topic of the journals of Western India. After all their hopes and preparations, the Bombay folk were doomed to no small disappointment. His lordship deferred landing on the evening of the 19th December, only to forestal his expectant lieges by the earliness of his movements the next morning. Barring a few ladies and gentlemen who had risen betimes to greet the new Viceroy and the hero of Magdala, there was no one ready to receive them but the troops under arms and a few officials. On the 21st Lord Napier encamped on the Esplanade. The same evening Sir S. Fitzgerald gave a reception in honour of his guests, which was followed by a State dinner the next day. On the 22nd Lord Napier held his levée. Next morning both noblemen went off quietly to Poonah, where everybody turned out to welcome them on their arrival about noon. After two days spent at Poonah in sight-seeing and official courtesies, their lordships returned to Bombay, whence Lord Mayo on the 30th would probably sail for Beypore, on the way to Madras.

THE new Viceroy seems to have made a pleasing impression on all who came across him. One writer describes him as a handsome man, "rather tall, and somewhat portly in figure; with a face strongly reminding one of Prince Napoleon" in his less corpulent days. To judge from his face he is "a man of convictions, of entire self-possession, and of a kindly heart."

If the writer saw all this in Lord Mayo's countenance, India may deem herself not unlucky in her new master.

THE Broach Exhibition was opened on the 23rd December by Sir S. Fitzgerald himself. A levée the next morning was succeeded in the afternoon by a darbar, at which the Gaikwar of Baroda was present. The day's ceremonies were to be wound up by a ball. The Exhibition was crowded; conspicuous among the visitors being a number of chiefs and thakoors from Guzerat. Three thousand season tickets had been sold before the opening. The grand hall of the building is a hundred and sixteen feet square, and the fine-arts' gallery is a hundred and sixty feet by twenty-five.

WE have nothing but the old story to tell of the famine districts. The circle of distress seems gradually widening, until it threatens to include the Deccan also. In the North-West Provinces the Lieutenant-governor has at length been driven to issue an earnest appeal for charitable succour on behalf of the "helpless poor" in his own province. Measures of relief have already been set on foot in Ajmere, Jhansie, and Lullutpore. Charity is now urgently needed, says Sir W. Muir, for Bijnore, "where the poor and infirm are becoming clamorous for help." The Government is providing labour for all who can work, but the support of "the sick and aged, the young and tender, and the infirm" demands the interference of private charity. To all subscriptions raised by private efforts "the Government will contribute an equal sum." A Central Committee is to receive subscriptions at Allahabad.

THE Maharajah of Kerowlie has been active in the taking of measures to mitigate distress. Besides suspending the transit dues through his dominions for a twelvemonth, he has made advances to traders for the conveyance of grain from Agra, and established relief works and refuges in all directions. In aid of these good efforts the Indian Government has granted him a loan of a lakh and a-half for four years. Another native prince, Golam Mohammed, only surviving son of Tippoo Sultan, has also done a princely deed. He has set apart a lakh and sixty-five thousand rupees from his own income in aid of deserving objects in his own province of Mysore.

SIR S. FITZGERALD seems to have done a sensible thing in appointing Dr. Bhau Daji sheriff of Bombay for the current year. Among the many public-spirited natives of Bombay Dr. Bhau Daji has long been conspicuous for his services to science and the Bombay community. Not the least of these services were the experiments he brought to so promising an issue in the discovery of a cure for leprosy. His appointment is said to have given very great satisfaction.

THE twelve native regiments of the Punjab Frontier Force are to be increased, we hear, by forty men a regiment. On the Kohat frontier affairs are still unsettled, the Bazoties having been supported in their contumacy by their neighbours the Afreedies. The blockade of the former has accordingly been extended to the latter; with what effect remains yet to learn. On the Bombay side the Bheels have been getting so troublesome that a sepoy regiment has been placed at the disposal of the Resident Engineer of the Baroda Railway, for guard duty along the line. On our eastern hill frontiers a more peaceful policy is about to be inaugurated in the shape of schools for the benefit of the wild hill tribes. Grants of land have also been assigned to 1,270 families on the Chittagong Frontier, and the Commissioner, Lord Ulick Browne, has suggested to Government the propriety of advancing a small loan to each family for the purpose of house building.

FROM the Indian papers it seems that before the last defeat of Abdurrahman Khan things had been going on very badly with him. Sirdar Ibrahim Khan had cut off his retreat by occupying Balkh and the adjacent districts. The insurgent chief accordingly fled from Bamian with a few thousand horse towards Ghuznee. Since then some of his followers must have rallied to his flag, or else Azim Khan's troops had come to his aid, if the battle reported towards the end of December was really as important as it was said to be.

WE observe that the new Adjutant-general of the Queen's forces in India, Colonel Thesiger, C.B., left London on Monday with Mrs. Thesiger, in order to take up his new appointment.

IN an appendix to the Viceroy's despatch—published elsewhere—to the Punjab Government on the late campaign in Hazara, reference is made by Major Pollock to the colony of Wahabie fanatics whom we failed to catch on the left bank of the Indus. Most of them are now in temporary hiding among the Trans-Indus Hussunzais; but their hosts are said to look on them with no favour, and the chances are that ere long the refugees will have either to make terms with our Government or scatter themselves in the countries north of Swat and the Black Mountain. Once broken up, their power for evil would of course be greatly diminished, and it is certain that they have already lost very much of their old prestige.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL WILDE has really accepted the post of Military Secretary to the Madras Government, thus reverting to the Presidency whence he was transferred to the command of the Punjab Frontier Force.

MADRAS has been busy holding examinations and giving away prizes. The results of the former, so far as they concern the University matriculations, are not yet reported, but if a fair proportion of the 1,300 students who paid their examination fees have passed the preliminary ordeal, the educational prospects of the province must be steadily improving. As compared with Calcutta, Madras takes the lead in respect of yearly progress, the number of successful candidates being ten times as many as in 1859; while the total of competitors doubles itself about every three years.

LATEST telegrams from India announce Lord Mayo's arrival at Calcutta on the evening of January 12. He met with an "excellent reception," and at once proceeded to Government House to be sworn in as President of the Council.

ANOTHER telegram of January 15 reports a sharp shock of earthquake in Calcutta and throughout Assam. We are not told what damage was done to the buildings of the capital, but the alarm must have been great in Chowringhee as well as the bazaars.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE was to sail from Calcutta on the 19th, not unaccompanied by tokens of public esteem. A Central Committee of leading Englishmen and natives has been formed at Calcutta for the erection of a statue to the departing Viceroy, and sub-committees in up-country stations will no doubt draw handsome subscriptions for the same purpose. The members of his own service will hardly lag behind the native gentlemen of the Punjab and the North-West.

THE compliments paid by the Viceroy to the Maharajah of Cashmere seem to have borne good fruit. The Rajah's Dewan, Kirpa Ram, has visited Umritsur, and after conferring with the chief merchants of that city, has forwarded to the Government a memorial, in which they declare their readiness to embark freely in the trade by Kangra and Ladakh to Yarkand. The Dewan himself has promised to build Serais along the Cashmere section of the road and to give traders every help. If his promises mean anything, trade with Central Asia is fairly opened.

STATE affairs in Jodhpore are not apparently as the friends of native Governments would like them to be. Some two years ago the Maharajah of Jodhpore was invested with the Star of India for services of some kind rendered to the Paramount Power. Since then however he has done little, it seems, to prove his worthiness of such an honour. His frequent disputes with his nobles have elicited frequent remonstrances from Col. Keatinge, to so little effect that the Indian Government finds itself compelled to interfere by force, if need be, between the disputants. For the present however the famine stands in the way of a prompt settlement. Any despatch of troops into Marwar at this moment would only involve the few people left there in further suffering, and the troops themselves in serious straits for want of food. So the Maharajah has been counselled to make the best use of his reprieve, and come to terms with his subjects while there is yet time for amendment. Should he still fail to mend his ways, our troops will have to teach him better in due season.

MAJOR TENNANT's photographs of the great solar eclipse have turned out better than even he had at first expected. What with the light clouds passing over the sun at the time and the effects of Indian heat on the chemicals, the negatives taken by him were spotty and dim. They have since however been magnified with good results. The prominences have come out well, and their true character has been clearly ascertained, as well as the changes they undergo. One of them is reckoned to have been at least ninety thousand miles in height, with a swaying motion of twenty thousand miles from side to side.

MR. GEORGE MACINTOSH COLVIN, superintendent of the Burtola Tea Garden in Cachar, has been taught by the High Court of Bengal the impolicy of flogging native coolies to death on no very great provocation. Some of the coolies on his employer's estate seem to have so disliked their work after only a month's trial, that they ran away into the jungle and there stayed until rain and hunger brought them back penitent and craving mercy. Colvin ordered each of the truants to get twelve strokes of the cane. One man, named Bundo, who came back after the rest, was further beaten about the face and chest by Colvin's closed fist, after which he was finally flogged into insensibility. On the sixth day after the beating he was dead, and Mr. Colvin no doubt wondered what on earth a nigger was made of, that he could not stand a severe caning varied by heavy blows with the fist. A special jury tried the case, and, either for want of due evidence or from a touch of fellow-feeling for a white man in difficulties, acquitted Colvin of aught worse than the intent to do grievous bodily harm. The judge however took a somewhat sterner view of the business, for he condemned the prisoner to twelve months' rigorous imprisonment—the utmost stretch of punishment allowed by law for the offence of which Colvin had been found guilty. Let us hope that the penalty, such as it is, will teach Mr. Colvin and others of like kidney not to stand too much on the European's right to wallop his own nigger.

It is a pity that the changes caused in the movement of troops by the spread of the famine could not have been foreseen a little earlier. Not a few regiments of cavalry and infantry, besides several batteries and troops of artillery, have been ordered to stand fast or retrace their steps, to the great annoyance of many officers who had already sold off most of their furniture and household goods at no gain to themselves, and would have to buy them back at a fraction of their former cost.

THE CONTROVERSY ABOUT GIBRALTAR.

ARE we to keep Gibraltar, or ought we to give it up in exchange for some other piece of ground less fraught with provocations to Spanish pride? These are the questions which have lately been discussed to satiety by the daily press. One admiral assures us that the mighty rock which England has held so long, and at immense cost to herself has made so impregnable, is worth nothing in comparison with Ceuta on the opposite coast. Another admiral declares that Ceuta is quite a mistake, and earnestly adjures us not to think of surrendering so valuable a stronghold as Gibraltar, come what may. Engineer officers, artillery officers, captains of the navy, lawyers, scribes, professional and amateur, have all taken active part in the wordy war. Appeals to British pride have been answered by appeals to British courtesy and fairplay. The interests of our trade have been set against the demands of Spanish patriotism. Gibraltar, on the one hand, has been described as the Portland of Spain, on the other, as the keystone of the British Empire. Some people would have us surrender it to Spain just as we have surrendered Corfu to Greece, while others implore us to retain it at any cost as an essential element of our imperial prestige. Much again has been said of the injury which Gibraltar does to Spain as a vast smuggling depot, whose existence breeds continual quarrels between the Spaniards and ourselves.

It is by no means easy in such a controversy to get at anything like a fair statement of the facts. Who shall decide, when good judges disagree, between the relative merits of Gibraltar and Ceuta, as places of shelter for our shipping and of defence against foreign assailants? Since when has the former failed to answer the purposes for which we have held it so long against all comers, and bestowed so much pains at an outlay of so many millions on its safe retention? Would the cession of it to the Spaniards remove all or nearly all the causes of existing grievance on their side, or secure us in Ceuta a stronghold equally useful and perfectly inoffensive to Moors and Frenchmen? With regard to the arguments founded on our cession of Corfu, we can see no real resemblance between the two cases. Corfu was held by us in trust for another nation, and the question of surrendering it was merely one of time. Gibraltar has been ours by conquest and by treaty for more than a century and a-half. We have made it what it is, a free port and a safe asylum for people of all nations who are welcome to trade and thrive under the British flag, so long as they obey our laws and regulations. Our presence there may have indirectly encouraged smuggling, to the annoyance of our Spanish neighbours; but such things will happen always under like conditions, and the Spaniards have more reason to blame their own Government than ours for the natural results of prohibitive customs duties. The plea that Gibraltar is a standing offence to Spain must of course be accepted for what it is worth, and if we had no Indian Empire to maintain and no Mediterranean trade to look after, we might do well to secure a useful ally by giving up the key of the Mediterranean to her safe keeping, if only we could be sure of her power to keep it safe. But how long would it remain in her hands with France waiting the moment to try and wrest it from her, either openly or by secret encouragement given to intestine strife?

The time may possibly come when the cession of Gibraltar would really benefit Spain without hurting ourselves, especially if we could gain as good a harbour and as safe a coaling-station on the Moorish shore. But to our thinking that time is far off still. In the interests of British India alone we must have free command of a passage into the Mediterranean, even were there no other reasons for such a requirement in the shape of Turkish weakness and Russian or French intrigue. Without such a security the continuance of our rule in India would depend on the chances of continued peace in Europe, and on the forbearance of neighbours by no means certain to show themselves our friends in need.

WHITE TRASH IN INDIA.

BOMBAY city is just now troubled among other things by a swarm of white loafers, of whom she is naturally anxious to be rid at the earliest opportunity. The chief cause of the visitation seems to be this. During the year before last some hundred and fifty of these masterless vagrants were shipped off to England from the capital of Western India. It was a measure of relief for all concerned. Bombay got rid of unprofitable visitors, and the men themselves got another chance of earning a livelihood at home. But the result was vexing for the good people of Bombay. For every spadeful of refuse carted out of sight, ten times the amount of noxious matter has since accumulated in its place. From all parts of India needy Europeans, attracted by hopes of employment or relief, or sent on from other stations where their company was in no request, have been flocking to the Western capital, until the Home at Colaba is gorged with inmates, and the streets of the city swarm with beggars dangerous to its peace and discreditable to the British name. Among other agreeable ways, they are wont to call at the houses alike of Englishmen and natives in order to extort alms by fair means or by foul. Scenes of this sort may now indeed be witnessed in many an Indian station; loafers and vagrants enow haunt the bazaars and weary the police of Calcutta; but Bombay seems to eclipse all rival cities in the number of needy and dissolute ragamuffins whom vice or misfortune has left stranded on the outskirts of her social being.

What to do with a nuisance of this kind is not among the least important questions of the future. Ever since the Mutiny the proportion of white vagrants in India has increased at such a rate as to have finally frightened the Supreme Government into making serious efforts for its reduction. There has already been laid before the Supreme Council a Bill which would certainly go far to check the nuisance, however harshly it seems to deal with some of those who accidentally help to develop it. One of the penalties we must pay for the extension of our Indian trade and industry is the constant influx into India of poor adventurers, lured thither by offers of work, by some hope of gain, or a mere craving for change of scene. Time-expired convicts, discharged or truant sailors, unemployed artisans and field-workers, beggars by profession and beggars by circumstance, congregate more and more in the ports and stations of British India, to the scandal and frequent annoyance of their more thriving countrymen. It is a nuisance that cannot be wholly avoided without closing the country to British enterprise—a condition which no sane person would dream of enforcing in the present day. All we can do is to keep the nuisance under, so far as justice and sound policy may allow. With certain needful amendments the new Bill will probably satisfy both requirements. Meanwhile however Bombay is crying out for immediate succour in one shape or another. The Committee of the Strangers' Friend Society see no way out of the growing perplexity, save in the timely interference of the ruling Powers. Unable to cope with the increasing numbers thrown upon their hands, they have begged the Bombay Government to aid them by sending home a dozen or so of the Home's inmates in each of those splendid troopships which were built at the cost of the Indian Government for the apparent benefit of the War Office. Twelve men would take up small room in a ship that will easily carry a thousand, and would add no great item to the public outlay, if they were made to earn their passage by doing some kind of work. A little help of this sort might save betimes from bodily and mental ruin many a poor vagrant whose misfortunes rather than his faults had brought him to so hard a pass. We are sorry to see that so far the Government has failed to answer the prayer of the Committee, albeit backed by the strong remonstrances of the Commissioner of Police to the same effect. It may be said that the Supreme Council is at this moment considering the clauses of a Bill purporting to deal comprehensively with the whole question. But that process takes time, whereas a measure of the kind suggested by the Bombay Committee might be enforced at any moment, by way of makeshift, by a few strokes of the official pen.

A QUESTIONABLE FRIEND IN NEED.

THE name of one Moulvee Musseehooden—self-styled "Plenipotentiary and Ambassador at the Court of St. James' on the part of the deposed King of Oudh"—will, no doubt, be fresh in the memory of our readers. His constant appearance in the law courts and in the metropolitan police courts rendered him a conspicuous, not to say notorious, character in his day; and his sudden disappearance from the stage upon which he had played so many unenviable parts created a sensation worthy of the antecedent portion of his career. So adroitly was this final vanishing act managed, that Mr. R. B. Oakeley, who held a judgment against him for a sum of £7,777. 13s. 10d., could obtain no clue to his whereabouts, and consequently no means of prosecuting his rights. But, like a bad shilling, he was, we felt certain, sure to turn up at last, and such now turns out to be the case. His reappearance is in the light of principal ally and bottle-holder to the deposed Nawab of Tonk, whom he has persuaded (mirabile dictu) to entrust to him the advocacy of his claims, speciously insinuating, of course, that he—Moulvee Musseehooden—possessed influence in England, whereby the stony-hearted India Office officials might be induced to listen to the Nawab's petition. The affair, no doubt, offers considerable advantages to our worthy friend, and would offer more were it not for those plaguy newspapers, who insist on publishing all the particulars of the negotiation! What is the consequence? Why, his poor deserted English wife, whom the Moulvee left behind him in this country, with his full permission to starve, unless she could get supported by public charity, sees his name and whereabouts in the pages of some journal, and forthwith applies to the police-courts for assistance to enable her to reclaim her truant spouse. Nay, more; fired with indomitable resolution, she actually follows him to India, and on landing at Calcutta applies to the ex-King of Oude to assist her in seeking an interview with his noble ambassador. Finding however that this disreputable monarch is little better than an idiot, she next beseeches the aid of Moonshee Ameer Ally Khan Bahadoor, an opulent Mahomedan gentleman, who has been knighted by the English Government for valuable and faithful service performed by him. In reply to her application, the Moonshee aids her so far as to enable her to reach Ka Keri, the town near Lucknow in which her husband is residing. The result of this poor woman's long journey and energetic action we have yet to learn, but we cannot augur much success from a consideration of the character of Musseehooden, or from a review of his past conduct to her. Whilst living in London he actually endeavoured in a criminal court of justice to disown her in the most unblushing manner, and there seems small reason to hope that his conduct will be different now that the poor lady is so far from all her own friends and supporters.

In the interests of justice and humanity therefore we now beg to call the attention of the British authorities at Lucknow to the following notice, which appeared in the Times of Aug. 30, 1860:—

On the 2nd inst., the Moulvie Musseehooden, R.B., the ex-Minister of Oude, to C. J. Bilk, the second daughter of the late Wm. Bilk, Esq., and granddaughter of the late Wm. Bilk, Esq., of Martinstown, at the residence, Oxford-terrace.

Still, in the sacred interests of justice and humanity, we give the following extract from the Friend of India of Thursday, Oct. 31, 1844:—

The Friend of India, Thursday, October 31st, 1844, No. 51, Vol. X., page 695, column 2, line 5:—"It is generally believed (and as confirmation allusion is made to the suspension of Musseehooden the Meer Moonshee in the Foreign Department) that before the Governor-general's letter could reach Lucknow a copy of it was presented to the King, who, not being a good Persian scholar, allowed his Minister to explain its contents to him. It is said that this wily functionary, taking advantage of the circumstance, gave the construction best suited to his own views, and avoided such parts as he thought likely to interfere with his projected measures, or create suspicion in his Majesty's mind, giving him to understand, at the same time, that the person who had supplied him with the copy of the Governor-general's letter previous to its coming to hand through the regular channel has desired him to assure his Majesty that he (the person alluded to) would manage to get the complaint of the British representative rejected and his Majesty's statements attended to, and his requests granted, so that there was no occasion for his Majesty to make a timid reply, but that on the contrary he should set forth a bold denial of all that had been advanced against him, and maintain his right to adopt such measures in the management of his government as he might think proper."

In conclusion, we commend to the notice of our countrymen in India, and especially to those in authority in Lucknow, this sad case of one of their own countrywomen, who, we have reason to know, actually for two long years supported the man whom she had been fool enough to marry, when he must otherwise have died of want.

BRIGADE COMMANDS IN BENGAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—In the interests of the senior officers of her Majesty's Bengal Army I beg of you, through the medium of your journal, to draw the attention of the Secretary of State for India to the subject of brigade commands in the Bengal Presidency. I particularise this presidency because it is that I belong to, and I am not aware if the evil I complain of exists in the sister presidencies. The subject is one of such importance to the senior officers who are looking out for a turn of brigade command, that I think it should be brought to notice publicly. A reference to the "Army List" will show that no promotions to the rank of major-general have been made since the middle of 1868, though there are many existing vacancies, the consequence of this being that men who should long since have been promoted to these vacancies are still retaining brigadier-generals' (colonels) commands, contrary to the rules of the service, and to the great loss of their brother officers, who should have succeeded to these commands. In plain terms, somebody or other, by these promotions not having been gazetted, has been deprived of perhaps seven or eight months' brigade command allowance. The injustice extends further than the case of those looking out for the brigade command, for in the case of a brigadier-general commanding a first-class brigade being promoted, an officer holding a second-class brigade naturally looks for his advancement to the first-class.

I think I have put the subject fairly; I hope the plaint will be attended to.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

A BENGAL COLONEL.

Notices of Books.

Indian Criminal Law and Procedure. By M. H. Starling, Esq., LL.B., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. London: W. H. Allen and Co., 13, Waterloo-place. Madras: Higginbotham and Co. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink, and Co. Bombay: Thacker, Vining, and Co.

The author of this work has supplied a want which has long been felt by every student and practitioner of Indian law. A knowledge perhaps of one of the most important branches of Indian jurisprudence—"Indian Criminal Law and Procedure"—has had hitherto to be collated from the various statutes enacted by Parliament in England, and by the Legislative Council in India, or at the very best from two or three treatises on its various branches; but Mr. Starling has combined the Penal Code with the course of procedure of the Indian Criminal Courts, so that we have in a compact form a text-book, which will doubtless ere long become as indispensable to all interested in the administration of Indian criminal law as "Archbold's Pleading and Evidence in Criminal Cases" is in England.

The work itself has been most carefully prepared, and an arrangement, which will be of material assistance to the student, has been adopted of grouping the sections of the Penal Code so as to bring together all those which relate to the same class of offences; whilst appended to these are short paragraphs condensed from the schedule to the Criminal Procedure Code, containing information respecting the modes of procedure applicable to each offence. Nearly every group is followed by one or more "Forms of Charges," which may serve as models for others of a similar nature. The wording of these forms has been framed in accordance with the various decisions of the High Courts; and while they are as free as possible from technicality, they have been drawn up with due regard to the particularity of an indictment, and the care which is always taken in this country that the accused should be made aware of the precise nature of the charge against him; and not be prejudiced in his defence by any uncertainty as to the specific accusation made against him. Each charge is followed by a note of the evidence necessary to support it, and of the cases decided in England and India, explanatory of the meaning of the Act.

In the portion of the work relating to punishment the utility of the plan adopted by the editor becomes more apparent. The Penal Code has allotted death as one of the punishments which may be inflicted under its provisions, but the student must turn to the Procedure Code to find out how the sentence is to be executed, and back again to the former to learn under what conditions it may be commuted. Then, with regard to offences punishable with fine only, or fine and imprisonment, certain provisions are made respecting the mode of levying the fine, and the amount and description of imprisonment which may be awarded in default of its payment or levy; but these have to be sought for in both codes. Again it is the Penal Code which provides for the limit of punishment for offences which are made up of several other offences, while the Procedure Code provides for the punishment of an offender who has been convicted of more than one offence at the same time. In all these cases Mr. Starling has arranged these sections from the two Codes consecutively in their proper order, so that at one glance the student may see what procedure should be adopted in each case. The two Acts regulating the procedure of the High Courts in criminal matters have also been carefully taken to pieces and interwoven with each other, and with the Code of Criminal Procedure, so that all the law on each portion of the subject will be found at the right place, and by the use of such a book as this many of the wrong rulings of native magistrates in the Mofussil, which have now to be corrected by the High Courts, would be avoided. The definitions contained in all the Acts treated of in this work will be found collected in one book, where the Act or Acts from which each has been taken are noted.

Notwithstanding the apparent complicity caused by this wholesale demolition and reconstruction which the editor has not hesitated to take in hand, each section, thanks to an elaborate table of the Acts which is placed at the commencement of the work, is accessible at a moment's notice, and a copious index of some thirty pages places the matter within easy reach of those who wish to find out the latest law on any subject.

We also see that the editor did not cease his labours when he first sent his copy to press, for in the Addenda are three or four criminal decisions from the first number of the Bengal Law Reports, which have lately been started in emulation of the English Law Reports, in respect to which we may say in passing that we hope they will copy the style of the official reports of the High Courts of Madras and Bombay, and thus avoid falling into the faults of the present numerous reports at Calcutta, of which everyone in England who has anything to do with them so loudly complains. The book itself has been dedicated to the Right Hon. Sir Stafford H. Northcote, Bart., C.B., who was the Secretary of State for India while it was being prepared and passed through the press—and there can be little doubt that a work so much needed throughout our Indian possessions, and which has been prepared with the assistance of the India-office in England, will confer a boon upon Indian practitioners and the Civil Service students, who will ever owe a lasting debt of gratitude to the editor for the assiduity and care with which he has prepared a volume of such vast public utility.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

MORTALITY IN INDIAN JAILS.

The Friend of India does not believe that any arrangements, however sanitary and however expensive, will largely reduce prison mortality in India. Freedom alone will do that, and there was a great natural truth which blindly guided our Asiatic predecessors, who punished offenders on the spot and had done with them. On the whole the mortality is much less in proportion to that of the ordinary population than is generally supposed, and if anything can diminish it, the improvement of jail buildings, at the cost of a million sterling in five years, will do so. For ourselves, eager as we are for prison reform, though at the same time desirous not to be unjust to Government for what it has already done, when we are told that £470,869 was spent on Indian jails in 1867, exclusive of buildings, we can only express regret that people are not prevented from becoming prisoners by devoting at least the half of that sum to the education of the masses in their mother tongue. We may not care too much for criminals, but we care a vast deal too little for the mass of honest men. Our objection to Miss Carpenter, and even Dr. Mouat and Major Hutchinson, whose one-sided remarks she quotes, is that they would spend money disproportionately on the thieves out of the pockets of the honest men, and not always spend it wisely. If the public do not take care they will find themselves taxed to house our seventy-four thousand convicts as gentlemen.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.

The Indian Daily News thinks it is to be feared that if the reputation of Sir John Lawrence depended entirely upon popular estimation there would be little to hope for. Sir John Lawrence is not a popular man, partly because he is not a popularity hunter; he may not be indifferent to public opinion—no wise man is—but there may be influences that affect a ruler far more than any fleeting praise, or the prospect of hollow popularity. The real state of the case was well and briefly put at the St. Andrews' dinner, 1867, by the Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Grey said that "next to the approbation of his own conscience the good opinion of his fellow citizens was the greatest reward of a public man." It very frequently happens, however, that the course which would render a man what is termed "popular" is not always that which a wise and conscientious ruler would feel it his duty to pursue; and in these cases that primary influence, the "approbation of his own conscience," must or should be the guiding one. It is the one which we believe Sir John Lawrence has consistently followed, and we say this with the fullest reservation to express differences of opinion as to his policy on many subjects. But that should never blind us to the general merits of his government; and there is reason to believe that if Sir John has missed popularity, he has gained what is much more to his credit, a more enduring fame. It may be that Sir John Lawrence has not "specially fostered" the trading interests of Calcutta; yet, surely Englishmen do not regard questions of public policy exclusively through the medium of their individual interests; if that be the rule of life, there is an end to honour and policy, that happy junction of qualities which should be inseparable in peace or war.

The Times of India thinks that an admirable successor as he would have been to Lord Dalhousie (if there had been no rebellion), Sir John Lawrence was the last man who should have been sent out as the successor to Lord Canning. Looking at the matter from our own point of view, we can clearly see that there are those who may very reasonably have thought that the pendulum had oscillated a little too far in one direction (under Lord Canning), and that it was necessary to restore its more moderate action. Left to itself, the rectification would have followed as a matter of course, without any violent efforts to restrain it. But it was hardly wise to send out a man of Sir John Lawrence's known proclivities. He was placed thereby in a false position, and, all things considered, the wonder is that so little evil has followed the mistake. To those who have watched his progress it must have been apparent that every year he has toned down more and more, and that his views, as regards the native States and the native aristocracy, have become more and more liberal. We believe that if he had remained with us another year he would have been a politician of the Times of India school. But we have to write of what he has been, not of what he might have become if he had remained longer amongst us. With respect to what is more properly the "Foreign policy" of the Indian Government (it was only the pedantry or the wilfulness of Lord Ellenborough which introduced an inapplicable term into our Indian official nomenclature), we are happy to be able to pronounce a verdict of unqualified commendation. The "Central Asian question" has loomed largely during the last five years, increasing in magnitude as time has advanced; and many lesser men than Sir John Lawrence might have been alarmed by such manifestations of approaching danger. But our Viceroy stood, cold and firm, as a block of ice. He was not disturbed by what had excited many and alarmed some, but looked calmly on, as the great Northern Power achieved new victories and came onward and onward, with gigantic strides, towards the frontier of our Indian Empire. There was, in truth, no reason to regard these advances as a menace. We have ourselves been continually advancing northward, continually approaching Russia; but we do not suppose that the Government of the Czar, in its wildest moments, has ever charged us with menacing Russia. Russia has certainly as good a right as England to establish an Eastern Empire, and if it be, as we so often protest, in the plenitude of our national self-complacency, good for the interests of humanity and civilisation that we should bring the tribes of India under our yoke, we can hardly, with any consistency, deny that in the same great interests it is advantageous that Russia should civilise the predatory, man-stealing, slave-trading tribes of Turkistan. Sir John Lawrence has seen clearly the necessity of having a friendly power in Afghanistan, and nothing was clearer to him than that to establish this influence we must have little or no personal dealings with the Afghans. Give them money, and give them arms, but keep our people out of the country.

THE PILGRIMAGE NUISANCE.

The Times of India holds that something should most certainly be attempted to reduce the number of persons congregating at religious festivals. This would be sufficiently easy of accomplishment if only the right plan were adopted. The class of people assembling at religious festivals are very different from those frequenting a common commercial fair. At the latter gatherings we comparatively seldom hear of the outbreak of cholera—and the reason is obvious. As a rule, "well-to-do" people, as buyers, sellers, merchants, &c., attend fairs, while the majority of those present at a religious festival are poor pilgrims, or the poor attendants of richer travellers. A large proportion are indeed beggars, fukeers, and mendicants, of various denominations. Such persons leave their homes without the means of providing common necessities en route. Many indeed start with the express intention of begging their way throughout. They have no shelter by day or night, they are indifferently clad, they are poorly fed, and they are excited or depressed by a pseudo religious enthusiasm. They are reduced to the exact condition most susceptible to epidemic morbid influences. It is scarcely matter of surprise that such classes succumb to miasms, powerless to injure the strong, healthy, and robust. Why should not persons be prohibited commencing a pilgrimage, unless in the possession of the necessary means? Passes should be issued by the civil officials of every district only on the applicant bringing forward satisfactory evidence that he possesses sufficient to defray the expenses of his journey. Such procedure would, in fact, be nothing more or less than the application of measures for the repression of mendicancy. But the concourse of people at festivals would by such means be very materially reduced, and the chances of an outbreak of cholera much lessened. Unless it can be proved that the conclusions arrived at by the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India are false, something must be attempted to prevent pilgrims spreading disease wholesale throughout the land. And short of the prohibition of fairs and festivals altogether, the plan above mentioned appears most likely to diminish the evil.

MILITARY.—The 2nd Goorkha Regiment passed through Jhelum en route to Dehra on the 8th December; the 1st Goorkha Regiment passed through Jhelum en route to Dalhousie on the 12th; and the 4th Goorkhas passed through the same station en route to Bukloh on the 14th of the same month.—It is stated by the Delhi Gazette that the Government of India have determined upon garrisoning the station of Jhelum again with troops. Already the 3rd Bengal Cavalry and 30th N.I. have arrived, and are occupying the old cantonment, which is in a very dismantled state. Most of the bungalows are very dilapidated and almost untenable, and for the few which are in a fair state of repair enormous rents are being demanded. It is said the 29th N.I. is also to form a portion of the garrison.

Bengal.

THE FAMINE.

PUNJAB.—It appears that the price of grain in the Punjab had not risen during the last week of November. In three districts only was the price of wheat less than 10 seers the rupee. These were Sirsa, Umballa, and Loodhiana. There was no marked difference in the average price from that of the previous week.

N. W. PROVINCES.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. Provinces has issued an appeal for monthly subscriptions towards a Famine Relief Fund. The Bijnour and Jhansie districts are those most suffering at present. The Delhi Gazette of the 15th December says:—"Grain continues pouring into these provinces, we are told, in quantities we do not like to mention without verification. Heavy trains laden to overflowing arrive daily, without any perceptible effect upon the market. A passing cloud, however innocent of any intention to afford a supply of water, has more effect on dealers than all the trains in the kingdom. A hazy day last week caused prices to fall." Another correspondent writes on the 19th:—"Of the agricultural prospects I can give no favourable account, for things are looking as gloomy as they can. The wheat and gram crops are withering all round for the want of moisture; water supply is rapidly decreasing, and the prices of grains are rising. Wheat is selling at ten seers and below in eight districts; and not above fifteen seers in any district; whereas last year and in all ordinary times the average rate used to be twenty seers per rupee, and as high as a maund in some places. The same may be said of gram. The second sort of rice is selling on an average at nine seers per rupee, i.e., the rice which the poorer classes feed upon, and one can easily imagine to what straits these people must be reduced. There is now an alarm raised that pasture will also fail this year; cattle are already beginning to be sold at half their value by the agriculturists in some districts. No one now attempts to disguise the calamity which will overtake us, should the winter showers not prove abundant and fall soon."

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Bad accounts of the agricultural prospects continue to reach us from the Central Provinces. The rubber crop, consisting mainly of wheat and gram, has withered in some places, and is drying up in others, from the lack of moisture in the soil and the absence of the usual heavy dews. There is no sign of rain as yet. Greater fears are entertained for the wheat than for the grain, which does not require so much care and moisture as the former. When it is added that Saugor, Jubbulpore, Hoshungabad and Narsingpore are almost entirely sown with wheat, and may be called the granaries of the Central Provinces, the nature of the impending calamity may easily be imagined. And there are other districts which are infinitely worse off than those we have named. The poorer hilly districts, of which Seonic and Baitool may be said to be the best specimens, can hardly escape distress unless rain should fall at once; while the alluvial plains of Narsingpore and Hoshungabad may hold out against the bad season till Christmas, when, if the winter rains should fall in the Nerbudda valley, the harvests there may afford food enough for a few other districts until the khurreef time. The Chief Commissioner has acknowledged the gravity of the occasion, and set about doing whatever is in his power to help the people. Mr. Morris has recently addressed the civil officers on the subject of deepening existing wells, as the apprehensions of failure of the water supply during the ensuing hot season, which he has noticed in the special reports received by him, he considers to be well founded from his own personal observations. He believes the danger to be a real one. Municipalities are to be encouraged to devote part of their funds to the purpose; advances of Government money without interest are to be made liberally; and the question of procuring a supply of Norton's tube-well apparatus for distribution is under consideration. It has also been declared that no remission of revenue will be granted, though suspension of the Government demand will be conceded in every case of necessity.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 15.

RAJPOOTANA.—In the State of Kerowlee, in Rajpootana, the last harvest has been completely destroyed for want of rain, and the rubber harvest is likely to share the same fate. To meet the impending famine, the Maharajah of Kerowlee has remitted the transit duties for one year, and has ordered advances to be made to traders to bring grain from Agra. He has also established houses of relief in various places within his territory, and has set on foot works of public utility to afford employment to the poor. In addition to these measures, his Highness has directed that no revenue shall be taken from those who have lost their crops entirely, and that it shall be collected by instalments from those whose crops are injured. In connection with the scarcity in Rajpootana, the Government of India, on Colonel Keatinge's recommendation, has sanctioned the appointment of an agent in Jessulmere to facilitate the importation of grain into those States from the direction of Sind. The agent will be employed for eight months, on a salary of Rs. 200 per mensem, and an allowance of Rs. 50 for his office; but it is understood that he will be withdrawn before the expiration of this period, if it should be found possible to dispense with his services.

STATION TALK.

RAWUL PINDEE, Dec. 10.—Rain began to fall gently last night and still continues at intervals, while heavy clouds appear to promise a downpour which will, I trust, be in time to avert threatened famine. We had a smart shock of earthquake this morning, at twenty-five minutes past midnight. It was severe enough to awaken most people, but the vibration did not last so long as during our last two earthquakes. The dearth of forage here is becoming a very serious matter.

ALLAHABAD, Dec. 19.—All hopes of rain have again vanished with the clouds. A little drizzling two nights ago had led us to expect a wet night, but the next morning the sun appeared as bright as ever, and the sky is at this moment entirely cloudless. We are not very badly off this side for grain, yet the poor are pinched. The failure of the rubbee crop will, I apprehend, involve us in the famine. Good wheat is 10 seers for the rupee, gram, 16 ditto; bajra, 16 ditto; rice, 13 ditto.

DEYRAH DOON, Dec. 16.—The 2nd Ghoorkas are expected here before Christmas, and right glad must they be to get back, after their long campaigning, to their old haunts. The place is full of European residents who have come down from the hills to make themselves comfortable for the winter. The public offices are all here, but it is curious that the Telegraph Department do not make a move down. Government is certainly a loser by this. If a message is required to be sent, it has to be sent all the way to Mussoorie by a coolie, thus entailing a delay of half a day. There should be an office in Deyrah for at least five months in the year. There has been lately an almost thorough change of officials here. The Superintendent of the Doon, Mr. J. Sladen, has left on furlough for Europe; his locum tenens is Mr. Cornwall. It is rumoured that Mr. Hercules Ross gets the Doon. The Civil Surgeon, Dr. Banister, goes shortly also; who his successor will be nobody knows. Captain Bramley, the Superintendent of the Doon Police, goes to Saharunpore, and he in his turn will be succeeded by Mr. Foster, from Etah, who, I believe, has arrived to take charge of the district—a young officer and a passed hand; one whose name goes before him as possessing far more superior detective ability than is generally to be seen in N.W. police. Mr. Maine will not, I think, have occasion to regret the selection he has made from among the subordinate officers of the department for the charge of the Doon Police. If this officer takes the same interest in this district as he has in others, there will in a short time be a remarkable change in the untidy and slow police of Deyrah. No rain yet; heavy clouds keep hovering about, and the sun has not been seen for days. Scarcity is now being felt by the poor. The prevailing prices are—atta, 8 seers per rupee, and that indifferent; dall, 5 seers; ghoe, 1½ seers; rice, 7 seers. The station is healthy, but the Municipal committee ought to look more to the cleanliness of the bazaars, for labour is very cheap in these days.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

NEEMUCH, Dec. 16.—It may seem a rather selfish way of viewing matters, but I heard to-day that there is likely to be at least one good result of the scarcity of food—or at least of money to buy food—up here. It is said that the road from this station to Nusseerabad is to be completed at once, as a “famine work.” Though Government has within the last few years taken a more correct view of the importance of having good roads throughout India, and has indeed very considerably increased the annual vote for expenditure on this very one, and that from here to Mhow, the amount granted has been far below the sum necessary to proceed with the work as quickly as it is required. We have had a very energetic officer, Major Francis, in charge, but he has had his hands fettered by the want of funds; and although great progress has been made during the past year, very much more remains to be done, and it will indeed be a God-send, both to the inhabitants of Rajpootana and the sojourners in cantonments, if the necessities of famine time accelerate the work. The natives of this country are, however, a strange race. At home, when high prices throw the labouring population into distress, they are only too glad to take any work, public or private, that will save them from starvation, however badly paid. In this country, at least in Rajpootana, it is different. I was told the other day (I do not speak from my own knowledge, so I may be wrong) that the Political Agent had offered work to the people in constructing a tank in or near Oodeypore, but instead of them flocking to him as one would suppose, he could not get enough men to continue the work. I have had no opportunity of verifying this story, so it may not be correct, but I fancy that it has a pretty fair foundation in fact. If such be the apathy of the people, it will remove a considerable amount of responsibility from the shoulders of Government.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

LUCKNOW, Dec. 17.—Our Christmas rains are promising. The last few days clouds have been gathering around, making the mornings warmer and the days cooler. No improvement has taken place in the price of grain, owing to the immense amount of exportation going on from this to the North-Western Provinces. Every day hundreds of carts may be seen wending their way along the Cawnpore road. This traffic keeps to the old route and eschews railway communication. Native merchants fail to see the advantage of our small railway. Carts once laden at Seetapore or Fyzabad, are laden for Cawnpore and not merely for Lucknow, to be reloaded on the banks of the Ganges. So, until the Oudh and Rohilcund line is much extended, and the bridge over the Ganges at Cawnpore is a fait accompli, but little railway traffic can be expected. Indian zemindars, like their brethren the English farmers, are never satisfied. A year ago, when, owing to a fine harvest, wheat sold at forty-six seers for the rupee, they complained of getting nothing from their land. This year, with wheat selling at twelve seers, they are again full of grumblings and growlings. Of course this continual complaining is intentional, with a view of getting a reduction made in the revenue paid to Government. But they managed to live last year when, as they allege, they could not find purchasers, and they will probably survive this when, owing to a scarcity of rain, they have but little to sell. It appears that in consequence of the abolition of octroi dues, we have jumped out of the fryingpan into the fire. The octroi was a nuisance, and a very great one as originally collected, but I am afraid its substitute will not only be considered equally a nuisance, but its collection will be much more sensibly felt. We are to have a horse and wheel tax. A conveyance-tax would perhaps be a more correct name, for palanquins are also to be included; an annual impost of four rupees being laid upon them. Four-wheelers of all descriptions are to pay twelve rupees a-year. This may not be much for gentlemen who indulge in carriages, but for those who keep palkee gharries, for economy's sake, the figure is too high. Buggies and single horses will pay six rupees. Should this tax prove insufficiently remunerative, we are to have a house tax, and ten per cent. will be added to our rents. By the time this has been in force six months our local Government will probably be deluged with petitions praying for the restoration of the octroi, notwithstanding its irregularities, annoyances, and iniquitousness. Rumour has it that we are shortly to have important changes in our local administration of some kind or other. Instead of being swallowed up by the North-West, we are said to be about to extend our borders, and that before long we shall have a hill-station in Oudh, and be as well off in this respect as the Punjab, North-West and Bengal. Everybody seems to think that something is brewing. Mr. Davies, in his tour through the province, reached Oonao some ten days ago. His camp remains there, but he has gone off to Calcutta, leaving Colonel Barrow to act as Chief Commissioner. Probably his visit to the presidency has more to do with personal matters between himself and the departing Viceroy than with anything else. Still there are many who think that almost at once either Sir George Couper or Colonel Barrow will take up the reins of our local administration.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—The 15th January, according to the Pioneer, has been fixed as the day on which Sir John Lawrence will bid farewell to India.

THE NEPALESE EMBASSY, which left Katmandoo on the 27th November, bearing letters and presents for both the departing and the coming Viceroy, was, we learn from the Pioneer, expected to arrive in Calcutta on the 17th Dec.

VISITORS TO ENGLAND.—The Nawab of Moorshedabad, with two of his sons and his suite, intended leaving India on a visit to England about the end of December, travelling by Bombay. Colonel Layard has been appointed to take charge of his Highness.

PROGRESS OF CHRISTIANITY.—Two native Christians employed at St. Paul's Cathedral were sentenced to death for the murder of a native woman who had been for some time in their keeping. One of the prisoners was about to get married, and the opposition which the murdered woman offered to the union led to the crime.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.—The blockade of the Bezoti clan has, in consequence of the support they have received from the Afreedis, been extended to the whole of that tribe. This measure will necessitate the establishment of additional posts along the Southern Peshawur and Kohat borders.—Englishman.

THE CUNNINGHAM CASE.—The Englishman states, on very good authority, that the Secretary of State has sanctioned a proposal of the Viceroy by which the Government of India will undertake the defence of the actions brought by Mr. Cunningham against the Commander-in-Chief and the members of the Cunningham Court Martial.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—The Secretary of State has ruled that all men enlisted for the service of the East India Company who did not claim their discharge on the transference of the army to the Crown are entitled to a boon of two years' service. This decision ought to have been arrived at sooner. The number of men who were transferred from the Company's army is now greatly reduced by death and the departure of time-expired men, who also ought to have enjoyed this boon.

FISCAL CHANGES IN THE PUNJAB.—The Punjab Government has ordered a revision of the settlement of the districts of Umritsur, Gurdaspore, and Sealkote, with reference to the record of rights of tenants, in consequence of the provisions of the Punjab Tenancy Act. The Financial Commissioner has accordingly been invested with the powers of a court of final appeal in cases relating to the status of tenants in these districts.

DEATH OF MAJOR CURRIE, R.A.—The Mofussilite regrets to announce the death at Hurreepore, on the 14th of December, of Major Mark E. Currie, Royal Artillery. Major Currie had been very ill at Simla, and was recommended by his medical advisers to take change of air. He was on his way down to the plains, when it was found that he could not proceed. His remains were buried at Kussowlie with military honours on the 15th December. By Major Currie's death a much coveted appointment in the department becomes vacant—that of agent for the manufacture of gun carriages.

THE SIRSA DISTRICT.—In consequence of complaints made by the mafeedars and proprietors of certain villages in the Sirsa district, which were granted to the Maharajah of Bikaner for his services during the Mutiny, the Government of India called upon his Highness to maintain the rights and privileges conferred on the villagers by the British Government, and to substitute a person of upright character for the present corrupt manager. The Maharajah has readily acceded to the wishes of Government, and has promised to regard scrupulously the terms of the settlement which were in force at the time the villages were made over to him.—Delhi Gazette.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.—It appears from the Englishman that considerable speculation has been excited regarding the successor to Mr. E. H. Lushington, Financial Secretary to the Government of India. The names of various officers have been mentioned in connection with this post. Should the appointment be given in the department, there can be no doubt that Mr. E. F. Harrison will be selected as an officer possessed of special fitness for the post. Outside of the department the choice appears to rest between Messrs. W. C. Plowden, A. M. Monteath, and Ashley Eden. Our contemporary puts in a good word on behalf of the last-named.

GENEROUS TREATMENT OF A SHIPWRECKED CREW.—On the 13th November the French ship Amiral Goubeyre received the crew of the British barque Denislam, wrecked on its voyage from Calcutta to the Mauritius, and conveyed them to Pondicherry, where their wants were supplied. The shipwrecked men were sent back to Calcutta on board the French steamer Meinam, and the Company of the Messageries Imperiales generously declined to accept any payment for their passage. The thanks of the Governor-General in Council have been conveyed to the Governor-General of the French Establishments, and also to the agent of the Messageries.

MORE SHOCKS OF EARTHQUAKE.—We learn from the Lahore paper that a severe shock of an earthquake was felt there on Wednesday night, the 9th December, about half-past twelve. The shock lasted more than half a minute. The unfortunate crows, disturbed by such a state of things, awoke and cawed loudly. The shock was felt at Umritsur about the same time. A correspondent there, writing on the 10th, says:—"There was an earthquake felt here at one A.M. last night; rather severe, and lasting over a minute. The shock was preceded by a rustling sound as of wind, something like what one hears on the Hooghly when the 'bore' or high tidal wave comes up the river. I have not heard of any damage in the town."

THE AKHOOND OF SWAT.—The Englishman's correspondent reports that the Akhoond of Swat has taken a census of the elaka of Swat. There are 24,000 houses, in each of which there are two men fit for service. "The people have agreed to keep up a force in this way, and at this computation." It is said the Akhoond has given pay to 40,000 men, who are to be always ready to do his bidding. Of this force 1,000 men have been posted at a place called Malgund, another 1,000 at Punjar; there is another 1,000 men with the Moulvies, 1,000 are at Roostun bazaar, and after this fashion nearly the whole force is disposed at different places to watch all the borders and roads of the country. The remainder wait the Akhoond's orders.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR J. LAWRENCE.—The Punjab Chiefs are determined not to allow Sir John Lawrence to leave the country without expressing their sense of the benefits they have experienced under his rule. The Nawab Sekunder Ali Khan, of Malair Kotlah, is taking the leading part in getting up the address; and Indian Opinion tells us that a Vakeel was specially deputed to Cashmere to obtain the Maharajah's signature. His Highness signed the address with some reluctance, not arising from any imperfect sense of the Viceroy's services to India, but from jealousy of a measure originating with a petty chief like him of Malair Kotlah. The memorial is still circulating throughout the Punjab, and no doubt will be numerously signed.

MR. G. DICKSON, OF THE BENGAL BANK.—There is no one who understands the importance of sound finance and cautious banking to the good government of India who will not regret the necessity which forces from his post Mr. George Dickson, the secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bengal. He has worked too hard in a tropical climate, but we hope to welcome him back a year hence in renewed health. It is the simple truth that, since Mr. Wilson's death, Mr. Dickson has been more to the Government of India than any Financial Secretary or member of Council, though his modesty would be the first to disclaim the praise; and the obligations of Government have been gracefully acknowledged in an official letter. Government will find it difficult to act without him at a time when the introduction of a gold currency, and the disarming of its opponents in the Indian Council, is so pressing. Mr. Dickson left Calcutta on Tuesday last by the Cape ship Durham.—Friend of India, Dec. 22.

THE NEW ADJUTANT-GENERAL.—The Hon. Colonel Thesiger, C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen, is to succeed Colonel Longden as Adjutant-general. The appointment seems a very good one. The Adjutant-general designate has seen a great deal of service in the Crimea, Central India, and the crowning glories of Abyssinia; and possesses, in addition to professional qualifications, a considerable share of social attractions which have made him a popular man with all classes in the Bombay Presidency.

A GOOD MOVE.—We are glad to learn from the Pioneer that the Government of India is taking steps for providing the press more freely with intelligence of what is being done in the different departments. The same paper, in a subsequent issue, says it has been determined to designate, in each Secretariat of the Government of India, a clerk with the special function of supplying the press with all such official information of interest as can be communicated without inconvenience to the public service.

DEATH OF MR. D. I. MUNRO.—We regret to notice the death, at Jullundur, on the 10th Dec., of Mr. Donald Innes Munro, who has for some years been engaged in the construction of part of the line of railway from Umritsur to Umballa. Though but a young man, Mr. Munro had been much employed in engineering works on some of the principal railways of Southern Europe. In Spain and Italy, as well as in India, he was engaged in important and difficult works on behalf of Mr. Brassey, the railway contractor, a capitalist most careful in the selection of his agents. Mr. Munro was not only known for his practical ability in his profession, but he was respected by all who were brought into contact with him.—Indian Public Opinion.

A WELL-MEANT WARNING.—The little Arakan News celebrates the loss of the Clashmerden in a doleful ballad of twenty-three verses, and sums up with the following appropriate "moral," which we hope will have due weight with the powers to whom it is addressed:—

O! Government, beware, and give this port a steamer soon,
Every soul in the place would deem it an inestimable boon,
And many a poor mariner might be saved a watery grave,
By a little foresight, toil, and skill, and less thought given to save.
Had there not happened to have been a steamer in port at the time,
The death of no less than fifteen men would some souls have had to pine.

A steamer stationed here could almost be made to pay her way,
By towing vessels in and out, for which folks would be only too glad to pay.

THE INDIAN RECORD COMMISSION.—At the Indian Record Commission's last meeting Mr. Long laid on the table a portion of his work upon the social condition of Bengal during the last century, embracing the period from 1748 to 1755. Messrs. Cave-Browne and Wheeler reported considerable progress in the collection of Warren Hastings' minutes, and Mr. Cave-Browne announced his intention of searching the Moorsheadabad archives for further papers. Mr. Wheeler presented a printed memorandum on the Records of the Home-office, and a portion of the political annals of Bengal during the period over which Mr. Long's collection of social records extends. The latter contains original narratives of the political state of the Bengal factories previous to the acquisition of the Dewanny, with a full narrative of the capture of Calcutta and its recovery by Clive and Admiral Watson. The volume will be ready early next year.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—We hear from Indore that on Colonel Meade, C.S.I., proceeding on leave to England, Colonel Daly, from Gwalior, will officiate as agent to the Governor-general for Central India, Colonel Showers, who has been acting at Gwalior during Colonel Day's absence, being again, at India's wish, re-appointed to the Gwalior agency. In all likelihood these appointments will be permanent, as Colonel Meade is not expected to return to this country.—It is expected that Colonel Balmain, Commissioner of Chuteesghur, will shortly retire, and that he will be succeeded by Major Cumberland, Deputy Commissioner of Sumbulpore.—Central India Times.—We hear it rumoured that Lieutenant-colonel Henry D. Manning, District Superintendent of the Benares police, has sent in his resignation in the Police Department, and that his services are to be placed at the disposal of the Military Department.—We learn from the Friend of India that the Secretary of State has appointed Colonel Haines—an old Indian of sixty—guardian of the young Maharajah of Mysore.—It is not yet known who will succeed Colonel F. P. Layard, S.C., Superintending Engineer of the Northern Circle, who is to accompany his Highness the Nawab of Moorsheadabad and his two sons to England. Major Aeneas Perkins, R.E., Executive Engineer, Darjeeling, who officiated lately for Colonel Layard, may take his place. Colonel Layard held the appointment for many years, and his retirement will be regarded by many with regret.—Indian Daily News.

THE INDIAN DIVORCE BILL.—At the meeting of the Council of the Governor-General, held in Calcutta on the 4th December, the Hon. Mr. Maine moved that the Hon. Sir George Couper and the Hon. Messrs. Gordon Forbes and Shaw Stewart be added to the Select Committee on the Bill for conferring upon the High Courts of Judicature in India the jurisdiction and powers vested in the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England. He explained that the committee had made a preliminary report at Simla recommending the subject for further consideration at Calcutta. The amended Bill had, in fact, been sent to the learned judges of the High Courts, from whom valuable suggestions might possibly be received. There was, however, one imperative reason why the committee should sit again. The operation of the amended Bill was confined to cases where the husband was a Christian, whose marriage had been solemnised in India, and who, at the date of the marriage, had his domicile in India and retained that domicile down to the institution of the suit. This limitation was occasioned by what, when the committee reported, was believed to be the state of the English law. The balance of legal opinion certainly inclined to the view that the English Courts would not recognise divorces pronounced by foreign Courts where the parties had contracted marriage in England. But this doctrine had recently been disturbed by a decision of the House of Lords, which, as was often the case in English law, had come as a surprise on the legal profession. The select committee would have carefully to consider the judgment of Lord Westbury in Shaw v. Gould (3 Law Reports, English and Irish Appeals, p. 80), and would probably be of opinion that the measure might be made applicable to classes which, as the measure was at present framed, were excluded from its operation. The motion was put and agreed to. The following select committee was named:—On the Bill to define and amend the Law of Evidence—The Hon. Mr. Cockerell, the Hon. Sir George Couper, and the Hon. Messrs. Gordon Forbes, Shaw Stewart, and the mover.

A RACE.—The ship Gosforth, from Gravesend September 10, arrived in the roads yesterday morning, and the Renown, from Deal, September 15, put in an appearance in the evening. Both are crack passenger ships, and have made the passage in ninety-five and ninety-one days respectively.—Madras Times, Dec. 15.

AN ARREST.—On Friday, the 11th December, as soon as the P. and O. steamer arrived from Calcutta, Police-sergeant Middleton and Inspector Taylor proceeded on board and arrested a Mr. C. A. Foster, late Comptroller-general of the Calcutta Money Order Office, on a charge of embezzling Rs. 3,000. The prisoner had engaged a passage for Suez, to which place he was on his way, when a communication was received from Calcutta for his detention.

A NEW MADRAS DAILY.—The Times of India has much pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of the Madras Mail, a journal which will, it feels sure, maintain from the first the high reputation its conductors won for the Madras Times. It is to be published morning and evening, the morning issue being a second edition of that of the evening. The issue before us—says the Times—is full of interesting matter, and is admirably got up, and we doubt not the Mail has a useful and prosperous career before it.

DEATH OF COLONEL TAYLOR.—The Madras Times gives the following particulars regarding the death of Colonel Taylor, Paymaster at Madras:—"Colonel Taylor rose yesterday morning in his usual health and went out for his morning ride. On his return about seven o'clock, and when near the gate of his own compound at the Adyar, he fell from his horse, and when assistance arrived he was found to be quite dead. Disease of the heart is pronounced to be the cause of death. Colonel Taylor entered the service in March, 1840, and he has held the rank of lieutenant-colonel, with the appointment of paymaster, since April, 1855."

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—It is stated that Major Michael has been appointed Deputy Secretary to the Madras Government in the Military Department, and has intimated his acceptance of the post.—The Madras Mail announces that Colonel Greenlaw, now Paymaster in Burmah, has been appointed to succeed the late Colonel Taylor as Military Paymaster at Madras, and that Colonel Clarke succeeds to the vacancy in the Department, and goes to Burmah.—General Wilde is said to have accepted the Military Secretaryship to the Madras Government.—According to the Madras Athenaeum, Lieut.-colonel George William Russell, of the Staff Corps, Paymaster of the Mysore Circle, is to be made Presidency Paymaster at Madras.

DISTRESS IN HYDERABAD.—Our Hyderabad correspondent writes that the signs of the famine are multiplying in that city. The Treasury of the Nizam will have to disburse large sums of money to avert a catastrophe like that which in 1866 overtook Orissa. The large lake between the city and the cantonments at Secunderabad is drying up fast. The lake is a magnificent sheet of water, about five miles in circumference, and its waters served to irrigate a large area of the neighbouring lands; grain rises in price every market day. Rice, which is the staple food of the population of Hyderabad, has gone up 50 per cent.—the effect of this rise on the poor is deplorable; it will tax all the administrative abilities of the Minister to save the poorer classes in the city from absolute starvation.—Englishman, Dec. 19.

THE BIDEN HOME FOR SAILORS was formally opened on Saturday afternoon by the Right Hon. the Governor. After luncheon Lord Napier made a short address expressing his hearty congratulations on the successful completion of the building, which would remain a monument of the interest felt by Government in the comfort and well-being of the mariner. His Lordship referred in graceful terms to the memory of the good man, and staunch friend of the sailor, whose name the home bears. The labours of Captain Dalrymple and Mr. Crowther in connection with the home for a long series of years were then suitably acknowledged, and in wishing success and prosperity to the institution in its greatly improved position the name of Captain Dalrymple was associated with the toast. The present inmates of the old home were also entertained at a good dinner served out in the dining-room downstairs of the new building, which will now in due course be regularly occupied.—Madras Times, Dec. 21.

LANDING OF EARL MAYO AND LORD NAPIER AT BOMBAY.

At about 5.30 P.M. of the 19th December the signal was given that the Feroze was actually in sight. This relieved suspense so far; but another question was, whether their lordships would land that night. Many thought it was just possible; so people waited on, till they learned that a deputation was going on board to request that the landing might be put off till next morning. Taking for granted that the request of the deputation would be complied with, most went home without waiting to hear the result. The Earl and Countess of Mayo and Lord Napier, having been informed of the object of the deputation, at once agreed to land on the following (Sunday) morning at eight o'clock. As soon as the Feroze came to anchor, several vessels made demonstrations of welcome. Rockets were fired and blue lights burned, and the Coromandel was richly illuminated with blue lights and Roman candles, which had an exceedingly pretty effect.

Unfortunately it was impossible to make their Lordships' plans generally known throughout the island, and it was feared that the gathering in the dockyard on Sunday morning would be limited in consequence. And so it was. By seven o'clock the guard of honour was in attendance, and the troops in garrison had taken up the various positions assigned them; but visitors came slowly. Officers, both naval and military, mustered strong, and there was a sprinkling of native gentlemen; but very few Europeans from Malabar-hill, Breach Candy, or Byculla. Where the Justices of the Peace ought to have been, there sat two solitary Parsee members of the Bench. Not that these were the only Justices of the Peace present; but how was Earl Mayo to know that? The benches reserved for members of the High Court, members of Government, &c., were adorned for a short time by two fair ladies, and latterly left altogether unoccupied. There was room enough and to spare round the gangway for all present. Ladies could not have been expected at such an early hour, so that the elaborate and tasteful preparations and gaily decked benches made for their accommodation were made in vain, so far at least as their expected occupants were concerned. There were perhaps half-a-dozen ladies present, just sufficient to give an idea what the canopy would have been like, and how gay and glad-some it would have looked, had circumstances been more favourable.

Shortly before eight, Colonel Marriott, Captain Robinson and Mr Fitzgerald proceeded on board the Feroze, to conduct the distinguished party ashore. When the barge pushed off from the ship, all the vessels of war in harbour manned their yards, and the sailors cheered as their lordships passed. Many of the ships also were all a-blaze with flags; the street of boats was a grand idea, and would no doubt have produced a grand effect, had it been well carried out; but there was a sad lack both of numbers and arrangement, which considerably affected the result; as it was, however, it showed that at least something had been done to make the demonstration general. On arriving at the dockyard stairs their lordships were greeted with cheers both from the dockyard and the Apollo Bunder, on which large crowds of natives had assembled. The guard of honour of the 23rd Royal Welch Fusiliers presented arms, and the band played "God Save the Queen." A salute of twenty-one guns was fired in honour of Earl Mayo, and one of seventeen guns in honour of Lord Napier. The Earl and Countess of Mayo were at once conducted by his Excellency to a carriage, drawn by four magnificent horses, and proceeded to Government-house, Parell. Lord Napier of Magdala followed, also in a carriage and four, three cheers of welcome being given for him before he started. Along either side of the scarlet cloth laid from the stairs to where the carriages were waiting stood dismounted troopers of the Poona Horse, magnificent fellows every one of them; these will form Lord Mayo's body-guard during his stay in Bombay.

In compliance with Government notification of the 14th December the whole of the troops in garrison (Poona Horse, H.M.'s 1-23rd Foot, detachment 2nd N.I. Grenadiers, H.M.'s 21st N.I., and H.M.'s 22nd N.I.) paraded in full dress for the reception of the Viceroy elect. H.M.'s 23rd R.W. Fusiliers gave a guard of honour as laid down in Queen's regulations, which was drawn up opposite the landing place; the remainder of the regiment occupied the avenue leading from the reception place to the outer gate of the dockyard, forming a street by ranks, faced inwards on each side of the road. The Poona Horse furnished forty dismounted troopers, with a proportion of officers and non-commissioned officers, who were stationed in front of the seats allotted to visitors, as has already been noticed. The Native Infantry prolonged the street from the dockyard gate in the direction of the Money School, the detachment of the Grenadier Regiment on the right, each regiment extending by successive companies from the right, at four paces distance. The Poona Horse were formed on the left, and occupied the space which was vacant from the left of the 22nd Regiment to the Money School. The line was formed on the left of the road, with an interval of thirty paces between the ranks. On the procession reaching the right flank of each regiment the order for presenting arms was given by commanding officers, and the band played "God Save the Queen."

The party who arrived in the Feroze were the Earl and Countess of Mayo and child, Lord Napier of Magdala, Colonel Dillon, C.B., Major and the Hon. Mrs. Burne, Major the Hon. E. R. Bourke, Captain Scott, Dr. Cruickshank, and the Rev. Mr. Wilbraham.—Abridged from the Times of India.

RECEPTION OF THE EARL OF MAYO AND LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA AT POONA.

The Earl of Mayo, K.P., accompanied by Lord Napier of Magdala, and Major-General the Hon. A. H. Gordon, C.B., arrived at Poona on the afternoon of December 23 by special train from Bombay, and were received by the whole of the civil and military authorities of the station on the platform of the G. I. P. Railway, which was decorated with flags, and the motto, in illuminated letters, of "Welcome Mayo and Napier to Poona." On the stopping of the train, after receiving the salutations of the officers and gentlemen who had assembled to greet them on their arrival, their lordships proceeded to their carriages, and left the station for General Gordon's residence, the assembled crowd cheering heartily. The platform and the surrounding grounds were densely crowded by both Europeans and natives of all ranks.

A battery of Royal Artillery from Kirkee fired a royal salute on the arrival of Lord Mayo, who is accompanied by Major Burne. Lord Napier is accompanied by Colonel Kirby, Adjutant General of the Army, Colonel Gell, Quartermaster General of the Army, Colonel Dillon, C.B., His Lordship's Military Secretary, and Captain Scott, A.D.C.

During their Lordships' stay in Poona they were to be the guests of Major General the Hon. A. H. Gordon, C.B.

A levee was held on the 24th Dec. by his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala.

Lord Mayo and Lord Napier were to return to Bombay on the 24th by the 11 P.M. train.

The Earl of Mayo was to visit the Deccan College and inspect the new powder works and splendid upper story barracks in course of construction at Kirkee. From thence he would proceed to the new Government-house buildings at Gunness Khind; finally visiting the Engineering College at the Sungum, and probably Mr. David Sassoon's castle on the banks of the river.

There was to be a grand review of the whole of the troops at Poona and Kirkee at 4.30 P.M. of the 24th Dec. on the general parade ground, in honour of the Right Hon. the Earl of Mayo.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Dec. 12.—The approaching departure of the A Battery 18th Brigade Royal Artillery to Ahmedabad, in course of relief, is looked upon with sincere regret by the community of Kurrachee generally. Ever since the arrival of the Battery in 1864 from Hyderabad its officers have been conspicuous for their continuous efforts to promote all kinds of sport among us; and in this they have been cordially assisted by their men, whose orderly and excellent conduct—notwithstanding the contiguity of the barracks to the bazaar, which affords in Kurrachee no little temptation to the soldier to do wrong—has been the theme of general admiration, a fact which reflects great credit upon Colonel Woolcombe, C.B., and Capt. Roberts, both officers of great firmness and intelligence. I only echo local public opinion when I say that the A Battery will long be missed when it leaves by all classes, both civil and military. The members of the committee in connection with the "Penny Readings," too, will lose in its gunners and drivers valuable co-operators, for they have contributed greatly to enhance the attractions.

Dec. 16.—Sir William Merewether returned from the districts yesterday, and proceeds to Bombay by this mail. Lady Merewether does not accompany him. She is at Sehwan, staying with Mr. and Mrs. John Moore. Official intimation has just been received by the local military authorities of the steamer Lawrence, with flats Bukkur and Shikarpoor in tow, having left Mooltan for Kotree on the 8th instant, with a detachment of invalids on board, consisting of 5 staff sergeants, 4 warrant officers, 22 sergeants, 303 rank and file, 54 women, 116 children, and 94 public and 12 private followers—the whole in charge of the following officers:—Captain M. Barton, 85th (Bucks Volunteers); Captain P. Cahill, 88th (Connaught Rangers); Captain A. M. Handley, 19th (1st Yorkshire, North Riding); Lieut. Hugh Latham, 25th Brigade Royal Artillery; Assistant Surgeon F. P. Staples, 19th (1st Yorkshire, North Riding); and Quartermaster T. Lawrence, 88th Regiment. On the 10th instant the steamer John Jacob left Mooltan for Kotree, having on board 12 officers, 1 lady and 4 children, 1 warrant officer, 1 staff-sergeant with wife and 5 children, 326 non-commissioned rank and file, 11 women, and 25 children. The names of the officers are:—Captains W. Lambert, 88th (Connaught Rangers), J. R. Newbolt, 5th (Northumberland) Fusiliers, and H. S. Wiegall, 77th (East Middlesex); Lieutenants J. R. B. Bennett, 7th (the Queen's Own) Hussars, G. M. Onslow, 20th Hussars, T. M. Maxwell, 36th (Herefordshire), W. Skerrett, also of the 36th, H. Beal, 38th (1st Staffordshire), and T. V. Shepherd, 109th Bombay Infantry; Ensigns W. P. Stevenson, 85th (Bucks Volunteers); Surgeon F. Holton, M.B., 77th (East Middlesex), and Assistant-Surgeon F. F. Foster, 36th (Herefordshire). The detachment of drafts, which left Kotree for Mooltan, en route to the Punjab, on the 19th of last month, under the command of Captain John Gore Campbell, 104th Bengal Fusiliers, is still on the Indus, which is reported to be very low this month. A man belonging to the 106th met with a watery grave on the 7th instant. He somehow missed his footing and fell overboard. The captain and officers of the Havelock did their best to save him, but without success.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—The foundation stone of the University of Bombay was to be laid by his Excellency the Governor on the 30th or 31st December.

KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—Our Kurrachee correspondent writes:—"The constant agitation by the local Chamber of Commerce and the press of Kurrachee, as to the imperative necessity of proceeding with our harbour works, has at last had the desired effect. Orders have been received for the immediate resumption of operations, and the necessary arrangements to have a dredge at work on the bar have already been completed. This news cannot but be gratifying to all those who have the interests of this province at heart."—Times of India.

DEATH AT KURRACHEE.—The Kurrachee papers announce the death of Captain McCleay, of the 22nd Brigade R.A., which took place on the 13th Dec. The deceased officer had just come out from England in the Cospatrick, which reached Kurrachee on the 26th of November. He died of disease of the heart.

A NATIVE AIDE-DE-CAMP.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council notifies that her Majesty's Government has approved of the appointment of a native aide-de-camp on the personal staff of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, on a staff salary of Rs. 150 per month.

MAJOR BATTYE, the Postmaster-General of the North-West Provinces, only recently rejoined from furlough, has been, we are given to understand, transferred to Bombay, to succeed Mr. F. R. Hogg in a similar capacity. Mr. Dove will return to us we suppose; he should at any rate.

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—The Sindian says:—If we are not misinformed, Captain Atkinson, Political Agent at Muscat, will visit Bombay shortly at the request of Government, accompanied by an envoy from his Highness Azan-bin-Ghás, the new Sultan of Oman, and that the object of the mission is to form some definite understanding between the two Governments.

THE GAIKWAR'S CHUDDER.—The famous Chudder designed by the Hindoo Gaikwar of Baroda to ornament the tomb of the Prophet Mahomet will be displayed for the last time at the Broach Exhibition, after which it will be broken up and sold to replenish the Chief's exhausted coffers. No jeweller can be found to purchase the entire sheet, and the Gaikwar will lose heavily by being compelled to sell the gems in lots. The jewels in the Chudder were valued at twenty-five lacs of rupees, and the workmanship must have cost a very large sum. The unfortunate jewellers in Baroda have all fallen under the Gaikwar's displeasure, through valuing the sheet when offered them for sale at a lower rate than that at which they had previously priced it.

BOMBAY POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—We hear that at the instance of the Director-General of the Post-office, the Government of India has sanctioned a revision of the salaries of the Postmaster of Bombay, and of the chief inspectors of British Burmah and the Central Provinces. By this decision the salaries of the three appointments have been equalised at 1,000 rupees a month. The pay of the Chief Inspector of British Burmah, who is now in receipt of 800 rupees, is to be augmented to 850 rupees, rising to 1,000 rupees, by an annual increase of 50 rupees; and that of the Chief Inspector in the Central Provinces, who receives 700 rupees only, is to be at once raised to 800 rupees, progressively rising to 1,000 rupees. The Postmaster of Bombay, who is already in receipt of 1,000 rupees, and is a senior officer, will be allowed a personal allowance of 200 rupees per mensem; but when opportunity offers, he will be transferred to some other appointment which carries with it a higher emolument, the maximum pay of his present post being fixed at 1,000 rupees only, which will be allowed to his successor.—Indian Daily News.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—The 12th Madras N.I. arrived in Bombay early on Tuesday morning from Poona, embarked on the steamship Asia and the transport Tiverton, and sailed on Wednesday afternoon for Rangoon. The European officers are Lieutenant-colonel Tripe, Major Gordon, Captain Cunningham, Captain Simpson, Lieutenant Tyrell, and Assistant-surgeon Theobald.—The 4-5 R.A. is expected to arrive in Bombay from Kurrachee per steamship Dacca on or about the 28th inst. On arrival they will be transhipped to the steamship Scotia for conveyance to Beypore. The strength is two officers, with two wives and three children, seventy-five men, six women, and fifteen children. The officers are Captain Engstrom and Lieutenant Roberts. The details of the 2-21st Foot and 45th Foot, which arrived last week from England per Malabar, and are at present stationed at Colaba, will also embark aboard the Scotia for conveyance to Beypore about the 28th. The strength of these detachments is—2-21st Foot, four officers (Major Hawker, Lieutenant Law, Ensign Yule, and Ensign Dunn), fifty-two men, thirteen women, and twenty-two children; 45th Foot—two officers (Lieutenant O. J. Garrett and Ensign Rawlinson), 120 men, eight women and nine children.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

STATE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE FAMINE IN BENGAL.

Dec. 11.—No. 2,321a.—The Lieut. gov., North-Western Provinces, announces to the public, with much concern, that it has at last become necessary to make an appeal for charitable aid towards the support of the helpless poor in those parts of the N.W.P. in which the calamity of drought is found to press most heavily.

Up to the present time a copious fall of rain would have averted this necessity. But rain, even if it were to fall now, would only partially alleviate the distress which begins rapidly to show itself in the district of Bijnour; and if none should fall (a contingency for which we must be prepared) for any lengthened period, it cannot be doubted that in other quarters also distress will speedily and extensively spread.

Relief operations of a charitable character have for above two months been set on foot at Jhansie, Lullutpore, and Ajmere. They are now urgently required in Bijnour also, where the poor and infirm are becoming clamorous for help.

The Government will provide labour for all who can work; and arrangements, it is hoped, of a complete and sufficient nature, are being organised in the public works and irrigation departments for the direction of the destitute labouring population to appropriate centres of work.

But the support of the sick and aged, the young and tender, and the infirm, must be mainly the care of private charity, and the Lieut. gov. now invites contributions for this laudable work. The Government will contribute an equal sum to all subscriptions so raised.

A central committee will be appointed at Allahabad to receive contributions, and to appropriate them according to the comparative need of each locality.

Local committees will also be constituted wherever they may be required.

Contributions already made to the operations in the distressed districts will be notified as contributions to the general fund.

The official members of the central committee will consist of—Senior member of the board of revenue, or in his absence the junior member, commissioner of Allahabad, inspector-general of police, the accountant-general, collector of Allahabad, secretary to the board of revenue, Mr. A. Anthony, and Mr. T. A. Brown. And the Lieut. gov. will be glad to recognise any other members whom the committee at that station may nominate, and to approve their being associated with the committee in the general management of the funds.

The Lieut. gov. would suggest that for the present the bounty of residents in these provinces, who are disposed to contribute, might best be given in the form of monthly subscriptions. If by a merciful Providence rain should fall, the necessities of the poor will be greatly alleviated; but, if otherwise, the distress may greatly exceed what is now anticipated. The aid of the benevolent might thus be proportioned to the necessities of the day.

His Honour feels confident, in view of the former great liberality of the public, native and European, on similar emergencies, that this appeal will not be made in vain.

By order of the Hon. the Lieut. gov. of the N.W. Provs.

R. SIMSON, Secretary to Govt. N.W.P.

THE DROUGHT IN THE MEYWAR.

No. 1,434.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council publishes for general information a proclamation issued by H.H. the Maharana of Oodeypore, remitting customs duties in alleviation of the famine in the Meywar State. A similar order has been issued by the Nawab of Jowrah.

SANSKRIT LITERATURE.

The following resolution by the Gov. gen. in Council, in regard to the discovery and preservation of the records of ancient Sanskrit literature, has been forwarded to the local Governments and Administrations:—

All procurable unprinted lists of Sanskrit MSS. in the native libraries should be printed uniformly in octavo, in the Nagari character, and under the superintendence of a competent editor, such as Babu Rajendralala Mitra in Bengal, Mr. Burnell in Madras, and Dr. Buhler in Bombay. Fifty copies of each list so printed will be sent to the Government of India in the Home Department, and the remainder of the edition (which need not exceed 150 copies) may be sold to the public, or otherwise disposed of as the Local Government or Administration thinks fit.

Competent scholars should be sent annually on tours to examine the MSS. named in the native catalogues so printed, to seek new MSS. (especially those named in the lists of desiderata hereinafter mentioned), to explain to native scholars at the different places visited the objects and importance of the mission, to purchase such MSS. as the possessors are willing to sell at a reasonable rate, and to employ copyists to transcribe codices which are unique, extremely old, or otherwise desirable, but which the possessors refuse to part with. The gentlemen sent on tours will make reports to their respective Local Governments, and such reports will be transmitted to the Government of India in the Home Department. The annual expense of the several tours should be so arranged as not to exceed, in the case of each Local Government and Administration, the amount noted.*

Scholars, both in India and in Europe, will be invited to transmit lists of desiderata. Those in Europe will be requested to communicate with the Government of India through the Secretary of State; those in India through the local Governments. From the suggestions so received general lists of desiderata will be prepared and circulated annually, and the notice of local Governments and Administrations will be drawn to entries in the catalogues received from them which seem to refer to any work in the lists of desiderata.

Subjoined is a specimen form in which, as far as possible, notices of MSS. ascertained to exist may be prepared. Quarterly lists of the MSS. found during the previous quarter will be submitted in this form to the Government of India in the home department.

Local Governments and Administrations will use their discretion in purchasing or having copies made of the MSS. existing within their jurisdiction. His Excellency in Council would, however, suggest the desirability of bearing in mind the subjects which European scholars deem most valuable, and that MSS. of the Vedas and Vedangas, and of their commentaries, law-books, grammars, vocabularies, and philosophical treatises, should be regarded as of primary importance. When transcripts are made, these should be in the modern Devanagari character. Copies of the Sanskrit MSS. existing in Southern India, if made in the Telugu or other Dravidian character, would be of little use to European Sanskritists and to the large majority of native scholars.

The annual outlay in purchasing and transcribing MSS. should not exceed, in the case of each local Government and Administration, the following amount.† But if a valuable library be offered for sale, if any rare and rapidly-perishing MSS. be available for transcription, or if there be any other ground for incurring extra expenditure, the local authorities should state the facts of the case to the Government of India, which will be ready to sanction any reasonable proposal in this behalf.

* Bengal (L.P.), Rs. 1,000; Bombay, 1,000; Madras and Mysore, 1,000; North-Western Provinces, 500; Punjab, 500; Oudh, 500; Central Provinces, 500; Rajputana, 1,000. The officer sent by Madras will extend his researches to Mysore. The Governor-general's agent will administer the sum appropriated for tours in Rajputana.

	Purchase.	Transcription.
† Bengal (L.P.) ... ..	Rs. 1,000	Rs. 1,200
Bombay ... ..	1,000	1,200
Madras and Mysore ... ..	1,000	1,200
N. W. Provinces ... ..	500	600
Punjab ... ..	500	600
Oudh ... ..	500	600
Central Provinces ... ..	500	600
Rajputana ... ..	1,000	1,200

The sum allotted to Madras and Mysore will be expended under the direction of the Madras Government. That allotted to Rajputana will be expended under the direction of the Governor-general's agent.

The original MSS. and transcripts so obtained should be carefully preserved apart in the office of the secretariat of each Government and Administration, pending the arrangements which may be made in each case for their ultimate disposal. Such arrangements will from time to time be communicated through the Government of India in the home department. Quarterly lists of the MSS. remaining undisposed of will be forwarded to the Government of India by each local Government.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE.

Dec. 8, 1868.—No. 3,429.—The following letter, addressed to the Government of Bengal, is published:—

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Officiating Junior Secretary A. Mackenzie's letter, No. 4,484 of the 13th ult., and in reply to state that, under the circumstances therein represented, the Governor general in Council is pleased to rule—

"First—That when an officer who is temporarily promoted from a lower to a higher acting appointment, takes privilege leave on being relieved of the latter, and the local government to which he is subordinate declares that on being so relieved he has reverted to the lower acting appointment, it shall not be necessary for the officer to rejoin the lower acting appointment previously to proceeding on leave, but his allowances on leave shall be calculated as if he had so rejoined.

"Second—That when an officer holding an acting appointment is transferred to another appointment of not inferior emoluments, he shall continue to draw his acting allowances during the time spent in joining the new appointment."

RESIGNATION OF APPOINTMENTS.—CASE OF LIEUT. COLONELS STAINFORTH AND SMITH.

The following order, issued by the Government of India in the military department, is published:—

From the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India to H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council (No. 358, dated India-office, London, Oct. 14, 1868).

I have considered in Council your letter, dated July 28 last, No. 279, bringing to notice the cases of Lieut. cols. Stainforth and Smith, who, by the operation of the rule laid down in the Secretary of State's despatch of Oct. 8, 1863, No. 352, have, on obtaining promotion, resigned their appointments in the public works and police departments respectively, in consequence of the salary of their appointments being less than the pay of their substantive military rank.

As instances of this kind will rarely occur, I sanction the adoption of the rule proposed by your Government, that, in any such exceptional case, the difference between the consolidated salary of the appointment and the substantive military pay of the officer should be paid to him, and treated as a military charge.

Should your Excellency find no difficulty in replacing Lieut. cols. Stainforth and Smith in the appointments which they have vacated, I shall not object to your assigning a retrospective date to the operation of this order for that purpose.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—PORT OF EMBARKATION.

Dec. 6.—No. 3,408.—The following letter, addressed to the Acting Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George, is published for general information:—

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,884, of the 17th ult., and in reply to state that under Rule XI. of the rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants, published on June 16 last, an officer proceeding on or returning from furlough or special leave is at liberty to select as his port of embarkation or debarkation any port in India, provided only that the journey to it or from it shall not extend to more than thirty days."

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATE.

No. 1,161.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication, for general information and guidance, of the following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India:—

Military.—No. 382.

India Office, London, Oct. 31, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—As it appears from recent circumstances that an impression exists in India that officers commanding divisions and brigades whose leave of absence on sick certificate with retention of appointment is limited to six months, and who may come to this country for that period, are not required to produce evidence of physical fitness for duty before being allowed to return to India, I request that you will notify to the army at large that all officers, however employed, and whatever may be the amount of leave granted them, who leave India on sick certificate, are required to produce a certificate of fitness for duty before they can be allowed to return.—I have, &c.,

STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

STAFF CORPS OFFICERS.—DECLINING APPOINTMENTS.

No. 1,163.—Under directions from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to announce that no officer of the staff corps is to be considered at liberty to decline any employment for which it may be thought proper to select him, or to throw himself out of employment by resignation of an appointment, excepting under special circumstances, to be duly considered and admitted by the Government of his Presidency.

H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council also announces, under authority from the Sec. of State, that in any exceptional case where the consolidated pay of an officer in civil or staff employ of any description is less than his substantive military pay, the difference will be paid to him and treated as a military charge.

RETIREMENTS AND RESIGNATIONS.—Whenever an officer of H.M.'s British service is gazetted out of the army in the orders of the C. in C. in India, such officer is, on the receipt of the G.O. at the station where he may be serving, to be relieved of all duty and struck off the returns of his corps. H.E. desires to draw the attention of commanding officers to the pecuniary responsibility they incur, under regulations and orders, by continuing an officer in the performance of duty after he has been gazetted out of the service, or after his regiment has left India.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE ON THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

Mr. W. S. Seton-Karr, Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to the Secretary to the Government of the Punjab, December 12, 1868:—

I am directed by H.E. the Viceroy and Governor General in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated Nov. 6, which contains, amongst other enclosures, a letter from the Commissioner of Peshawar on the late operations in Hazara, and which conveys the opinion of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor as to the political results gained, and the effect produced on the tribes of the border, by the late campaign.

The Government of India has lately recorded, in the military department, resolutions expressive of the high sense which it entertains of the services of the troops in a difficult and rugged country, of the nature of their operations, and of the conduct, exertions, and discipline of the soldiers. But H.E. in Council gladly avails himself of this opportunity to record his opinion on some of the political questions raised in your communication under reply, as regards past operations during this season, and as to the method of dealing with these wild tribes for the future.

H.E. in Council desires me to express his concurrence with the views of the Lieutenant-Governor and the Commissioner, of the mode in which these wild and excitable tribes should be dealt with in such expeditions, and of the political objects to be sought for by the same, as well as of the amount and character of the retribution at which the avenging forces should aim. It is by no means the wish of the British Government, on such occasions, to desolate by fire and sword a large extent of country; to mark the track of the invading army by long lines of burning villages and wasted fields; and, while thereby inflicting grievous calamities on every section of the native community, to exasperate the leaders, and to render them sullen, and, possibly, intractable for the future.

H.E. in Council thinks it unnecessary to follow in detail the interesting and clear narrative of the Commissioner, showing how, by the advance of the forces, and by their systematic, well-considered, and unchecked operations, the above ends were brought about in a campaign of not three weeks' duration. It is sufficiently clear that nothing was left to chance as far as foresight could guard against it, that every reasonable contingency had been carefully provided for, and that when once set in motion, no effort on the part of the tribes could check the progress, or even impede the movements, of the British force. And the Government of India is clearly of opinion that the expense and the labour of organising and conducting this expedition have produced results not incommensurate with expectations and with motives of State policy, when difficult passes and lofty mountains have been skillfully and rapidly occupied by divisions of British and native soldiery, when sharp and summary retribution has been inflicted on some of the principal offenders, when considerable fines have been imposed on others, when the heads of tribes have successively tendered their submission to the representatives of the British power, when roads have been constructed and survey has been made through a country little known and almost inaccessible, and when, either by the surrender of hostages, or by the acceptance of the terms dictated, or by their altered demeanour, the chief aggressors have given ample proof of their amenability to justice, and have thus complied with all that the civil and military authorities, acting in unison, had thought fit to exact in the way of atonement and reparation.

The Government of India has learnt, with great satisfaction, the cordiality which has existed between Gen. Wilde and Major Pollock throughout the whole of these operations; and H.E. in Council considers that Major Pollock has thoroughly earned for himself the cordial thanks and acknowledgments of the Government of India for the discretion and judgment manifested by him since our forces took the field.

The services of Lieut.-Col. Johnstone, revenue surveyor, of Capt. Ommamey, deputy commissioner, and of Lieut. Wace are also fully deserving of the terms of commendation in which they have been mentioned in your letter, and this Government desires to place on record its approval of the same.

H.E. in Council also entirely approves of the notice which the Lieut.-Governor has taken of the efficient aid rendered by the troops of the Maharajah of Cashmere. A letter from H.E. expressive of the acknowledgments of the Government of India is enclosed for communication to the Maharajah.

While indulging the hope that the late operations, conducted without a check to a practical and early consummation, may have a marked and durable effect on the conduct of the tribes of the Hazara frontier, H.E. in Council cannot but feel that tact and resolution will be essential in dealing with the chiefs in future, and in preventing recourse to expensive military operations. H.E. entertains a conviction that we ought to be always prepared for conduct on their part which may require a prompt manifestation of our firmness and our readiness of resource. He further agrees with you in regretting that the colony of Hindustani fanatics was not, on this occasion, thoroughly broken up and dispersed. But, in expressing this regret, he does not impute the slightest blame to either the civil or the military authorities, looking, as he must do, to the nature of the country in which operations would have had to be conducted, to the absence of any offence or participation by the Hindustanis in the late attack on our police, and to the avowed objects for which the forces were directed to commence operations.

The Government of India will await the report promised in the 56th paragraph of Major Pollock's communication, and alluded to in the 5th paragraph of your letter under acknowledgment. In the future he can only impress on the civil officers of the frontier the expediency of cultivating such friendly relations with the tribes of these wild valleys as circumstances and our position will permit, of combining fair treatment and conciliation with firmness, vigour, and resolution, of being on the watch against unprovoked aggression and lawlessness, and of maintaining generally such an attitude as may convince those from whom disturbance may be apprehended, that the British Government is competent not only to organise large expeditions by a considerable expenditure of time and money, but also to repel promptly any unprovoked or unjustifiable aggression on the lives and properties of its own subjects on the frontier.

An appendix to this notification refers to the colony of Hindustanis of the Wahabi persuasion, which has been for years settled among the independent Pathan tribes on the North-West Frontier. We give the following extract:—

It seems probable that a month later the force under General Wilde would have found a powerful coalition and some organised plan of defence, but our rapid approach disconcerting them, the fanatics hastily recrossed the river, deserting their Chuggarzai hosts, and thereby departing from their profession as soldiers of the faith, and destroying the last remnant of their former "prestige," already injured by the treatment they had met with at the hand of the Akhoond and his disciples. The main body of them is now at Pulosa, village of the Trans-Indus Hussunzais, who have, according to latest advices, refused to allow them a permanent settlement. For the sake of religion they may be fed for a time, but the country is too poor to support them long, and they must soon, I believe, either make terms with the British Government, or break up and scatter themselves through the Mahomedan countries to the north of Swat and the Black Mountain, in which case their power for evil will be almost entirely removed, for the leaders will have lost the source of their importance, and the followers the guiding spirit that kept them together and made them formidable. When the Chuggarzai Jirgah waited on me at Machia, they voluntarily commenced their story by declaring their determination not to give shelter to the fanatics.

THE HAZARA DESPATCHES.—In continuation of our already voluminous extracts from the Hazara despatches, there still remain "Annexures" IV. and V., being the interesting reports (dated Camp Oogie, Oct. 22, 1868) of Brig.-Gen. R. O. Bright, commanding No. 1 brigade, to the Asst. Adj.-Gen. of the Hazara field force, and Brig.-Gen. J. L. Vaughan, C.B., commanding No. 2 brigade, also addressed to the same authority. The facts and statements of these "annexures" having been duly quoted and dwelt upon by the leading despatches, and the notifications of the Gov.-Gen. in Council, all of which have appeared in our columns, we must now omit the "annexures" themselves, as their publication would be considerably after date, and to some extent supererogatory. Therefore, with this "note," our extracts from the Hazara despatches must be considered as brought to a conclusion.

MILITARY PROMOTIONS.—An order in the Gazette of India of Dec. 12 contains an immense number of military promotions of officers; each of them receives one step. The rank mentioned with each name is the local rank—not the staff corps or brevet rank. The list appears to have been compiled from the "Official Gazette," extracts from which have already appeared in our columns at different times.

OPENING OF THE EXHIBITION.—The Exhibition at Broach was opened by his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. A. F. Bellasis, Revenue Commissioner, N.D., read an address to the Governor, and his Excellency replied. The Exhibition was crowded. On Thursday, at eleven o'clock, his Excellency held a levée; and there was a durbār at four. His Excellency the Gackwar was present at the opening of the Exhibition. A ball came off on Wednesday night.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 26.

Home.

RELIEFS.—The troopship Malabar arrived at Suez on the 16th inst. with the 101st Regiment and draughts for other regiments. Her troops will be brought from Alexandria to Portsmouth in the screw steamer Helvetia.

H. M.'s 95TH REGIMENT.—A detachment of the 95th Regiment, consisting of Captain Mulock, Ensign Creag, one sergeant, four corporals, and 110 privates, has left Pembroke Dock for Portsmouth, where they will embark for Bombay for service with the head quarters of the regiment.

THE UPPER ASSAM TEA COMPANY (LIMITED) propose an issue of £50,000 mortgage debentures in 1,000 bonds of £50 each for five years. They are to bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, payable quarterly by coupons attached, and will be redeemable by half-yearly drawings at 10 per cent. premium, or £55 per debenture.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.—A meeting of the creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East was held on Monday, when a resolution approving of the scheme—the particulars of which we previously gave—for payment of the debts and for the stoppage of all litigation, was unanimously agreed to.

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.—The opinion expressed by Lord Salisbury some time ago that the mercantile community should be represented in the Council of India is engaging the attention of the Manchester party. The subject was considered on the 11th inst. at a meeting of representatives of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the Cotton Supply Association, and the Cotton Spinners' Association. Mr. Hugh Mason suggested a scheme for the consideration of the Government, but it was deemed advisable to postpone for the present any definite proposals upon the subject. Meanwhile Lord Salisbury will be invited to give the committee the advantage of his advice upon a question with which he is so eminently fitted to deal, and Mr. Bazley will probably introduce the subject for discussion at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

NERBUDDA COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—A special meeting of the above company was held on the 18th inst., at the London Tavern, Mr. Henry Hayman in the chair, for the purpose of considering a proposal from the directors to subdivide the present shares of the company. The Chairman moved, "That the capital of the company be £250,000, divided into 250,000 shares of £1 each." Mr. J. Wyld seconded the resolution. Mr. Villeboisnet, Mr. Wagstaff, Mr. Martineau, and others, strongly condemned the proposal. A long and angry discussion ensued, during which the chairman vacated the chair and left the room, but ultimately resumed his seat at the request of his brother directors. On the resolution being put to the meeting it was lost, it not having obtained the requisite majority of three-fourths of the shareholders present. A poll was then demanded, which, having taken place, the resolution was again negatived. The chairman, on announcing the result, expressed his deep regret and disappointment at the vote, and said he should feel it his duty to retire from his seat at the board.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—The 2nd Battalion 16th Regiment will go direct to Ireland to relieve the 1st Battalion 21st, which will then embark for India. The 35th Regiment will remain at Portsmouth for the present, as the 101st Fusiliers will, upon its arrival from India in H. M. S. Serapis early in February, proceed at once to Fort Brockhurst, Fort Elston, and Fort Rowan. The depot may be expected to move next week from Walmer to Fort Brockhurst, to await the arrival of the head-quarters of the regiment.—Broad Arrow.—The battalions to be sent out to India next season will be the 1st battalions 17th, 66th, 63rd, and 65th Regiments from Ireland, all of which returned from foreign service in 1865, and a battalion now serving in the colonies, the selection of which will, no doubt, depend upon the general measures to be taken by the Government with reference to our colonial garrisons. The cavalry regiment to relieve the Bays will, it is finally settled, be the 15th Hussars, now at York, and not the 13th Hussars. The latter corps will return from Canada in the spring, but will not be sent to take its regular turn of service in India for a year or two.—Army and Navy Gazette.

LOCAL EUROPEAN ARMY FOR INDIA.—A correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette says: As the Army is to be reduced, and as a local service is required for India, why not disband the 2nd battalions, and form a local force of new battalions entirely, as many as might be required, say fifteen? I would call for volunteers for these regiments, both officers and men; and as it would be a matter of importance that her Majesty's regiments serving out here as a permanence should have a handle to their names, I would make them again the 2nd battalions of home service regiments, allowing the officers to exchange into the 1st battalions, or into other regiments as they now do. The men for this service should be enlisted specially for a first period of fourteen or fifteen years, and should receive a liberal bounty on re-engaging to complete their time, if found, in all respects, qualified. The volunteering to these regiments from those going to England should be restricted to men under, say thirteen years' service, otherwise they would rapidly become (as is now the case with many regiments which have been a long time in India) filled with old and worn-out men, and would never be efficient or fit to take the field. The East India Company saw the force of this, and would not permit volunteers from her Majesty's regiments to enter their European regiments; when they wanted recruits, they got them young and fresh from England.

EXPORT OF SPECIE TO THE EAST.—From the "Annual Statement" of bullion exports to the East in 1868 appended to Mr. James Low's Indian Circular we quote the following totals:—In 1868, £1,564,635 in gold, and £1,650,132 in silver were exported to the East from Great Britain; and £4,953,441 in gold and £1,908,421 in silver were exported to the East from the Mediterranean ports (including shipments of the Messageries Impériales). The above as against exports of specie in 1867 to the subjoined amounts, viz.:—From Great Britain, 1867—gold, £258,904; silver, £643,927. From the Mediterranean ports, 1867—gold, £1,240,129; silver, £1,408,297; thus a very large increase in the exports of both gold and silver appears to have taken place in the year 1868. The exports of bullion by the P. and O. steamers from Southampton and Marseilles, for the month of December, were as follows:—Bombay (per Tanjore, Southampton, Dec. 19), gold, £11,000; silver, £45,500; do. (per Syria, Southampton, Dec. 26), gold, £5,400; silver, £10,000; do. (per Ceylon, from Marseilles, Dec. 20), silver, £12,120; do. (per Delta, from Marseilles, Dec. 27), silver, £60,000. Ceylon (per Syria, Southampton, Dec. 26), gold, £5,932. Madras (ditto), gold, £4,993; do. (per Ceylon, Marseilles), gold, £320. Calcutta (per Syria, Southampton, Dec. 26), gold, £5,000; silver, £157,050; do. (per Ceylon, Marseilles, Dec. 20), silver, £155,000. Government drafts drawn during the year 1868: Calcutta, Rs. 4,37,67,000; Madras, Rs. 44,47,000; Bombay, nil; total, Rs. 4,82,14,000.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE RUSSIAN BUGBEAR.

The Times argues that it is a thing to be proved, not, as has been customary, assumed, that the geographical relations of the Asiatic dominions of Russia and of England and the schemes of the former Power make the exchange of Russian order for Tartar misrule exceptionally dangerous to us. It is not impossible that this country might even gain commercially if Russian progress were continued yet further. At present the Russian system of protection excludes British goods from Central Asia. But the prohibition is itself in some measure a political expedient, the use of which would, in that state of circumstances, have been exhausted, and it could not stand with India ready to pour its commerce across the Russian border. However, those who are not sanguine as to such commercial prospects may console themselves with the contemplation of the space still separating Russian influence from British India. The same hard geographical fact which makes the calculation of English mercantile prospects in Turkestan seem Utopian removes into the regions of speculation the fears of what may come to pass when Great Britain and Russia actually do confront each other in Asia. That Samarcand is not India the histories of the expeditions of isolated individuals to Bokhara five-and-twenty years ago prove. Even when the intervening regions had been surmounted, a Russian army would meet a British on very unequal terms. Persons infected with Russophobia argue as if they thought the spirit and life of the whole Russian Empire migrated instantaneously on a conquest having been effected, and passed entire into every fresh morsel of territory snatched by it. But it will be long before Turkestan will be as thoroughly incorporated as the Crimea was in 1854, and the Crimean war shows what proportion of the resources at the command of the Czar to oppose to the Allies came from the scene of the campaign. For a fair estimate of the comparative means of Russia and England for maintaining a war in Southern Asia the military basis of the former State must be taken to be rather Moscow than Orenburg, much less Samarcand. War is not solely a question of men. A Russian expedition against India might obtain certain reinforcements from among their Tartar subjects, but for by far the greater part of the warlike apparatus which would be needed to make it efficient she would have to look to European Russia. India, on the contrary, secures to its possessors a constant supply both of men and of treasure, and all the other necessities of war. We are not very apprehensive of the consequences of continued Russian progress to the tranquillity of British India; but at present the bugbear of Russian aggrandisement in Asia is certainly a mere chimera. Such neighbourhood as there now is between the two Powers may perhaps even do British rule good by the mingled example and warning which the spectacle of Russian policy and government in vigorous operation in Central Asia will present to our Indian statesmen.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raking fire of fever and dysentery that

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Are decidedly the best remedy for all disorders of the stomach and bowels, the liver, and kidneys. They act with so decided an effect, and yet so gently, that people of the most delicate constitution may take them with the utmost confidence. They, being composed exclusively of rare balsams, do not contain a single grain of mercury or other noxious substance. They are, therefore, equally safe and efficacious, and as a family medicine nothing yet invented or discovered can be compared with them. With these inestimable Pills at hand, together with the printed directions affixed to each box, no other medical advice or assistance can be needed in any ordinary case of sickness.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 18s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 2; Agra and Calcutta, December 29; Madras, December 28.

Lord Mayo's sojourn in Bombay and the Broach Exhibition furnish the Bombay papers with plenty of printed matter. The new Viceroy and his countess had their time well filled with all kinds of public ceremonial, from balls, levées, and reviews, to the inspection of cotton-presses and dockyards, the receiving of public addresses, and the visiting of schools; the last-named business being mostly reserved for the countess. His lordship spent about two hours discussing the suggestions laid before him by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on railways in Guzerat, Kattiwar, and Rajpootana, the Southern Mahratta country, and along the Indus Valley; on the improvement of Bombay Harbour; on telegraphic communication via Suez; on the high rates of overland postage; on irrigation and water supply for Bombay Presidency. The Bombay Association also had its turn, and got at any rate a courteous hearing. Of course his lordship was engaged to lay the foundation-stone of the new University. Broach expected him, but he could not go. By way of recreation, he contrived to pay two visits to the Caves of Elephanta.

On the 30th December Lord Mayo left Bombay for Madras, having won the hearts of his new acquaintances by the way in which he received their attentions. One journal declares that, "kindly, cheerful, accessible, social, as nearly all his countrymen are, unaffected yet dignified in manner, Lord Mayo is certain to be le bienvenu wherever he goes," welcome alike to sportsmen and lovers of business, who find that he can work as well as hunt.

THE Broach Exhibition was opened on the 23rd December by Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, amidst a great crowd of both colours. The Gaikwar of Baroda sat on his right hand, and a number of native chiefs filled up the dais on either side of these two. Sir Seymour made the proper kind of speech for the occasion. Next day he held a levée, followed by a darbar, at which about sixty chiefs were present. The Governor expressed his pleasure at meeting them there, such meetings being good for all concerned; drew their attention to the cotton and the machinery, warned them that Government had eyes everywhere, and promised to come and see them all again some day. One unlucky incident somewhat marred the festive week at Broach. On the first night a ball was given, to which no native, not even the Gaikwar, was to be invited. Want of room furnished the excuse for so impolitic an arrangement. A Parsee judge and a Parsee member of Council both asked for admission and were refused. A third gentleman shared the same fate on the ground that he too was a native; but on this point there seems to have been some misunderstanding, not yet explained. To our thinking the principle of exclusion was altogether a mistake. If the room was too small, could not the invitations have been limited without regard to colour?

ONE face, familiar on such occasions, was missing on this. The Maharajah of Edur died on the 20th December, at the age of thirty-six. The reader may remember him making an English speech at a former darbar. He was a chief of many accomplishments, a first-rate English scholar, a member of the Legislative Council, and decorated for his loyal services with the Star of India. The Governor in Council proclaimed his sincere regret at the young prince's death.

A MR. MOSS, from Liverpool, has arrived at Bombay, for the purpose, we are told, of organising a steam service between Bombay and England, based on the ultimate completion of the Suez Canal. As this great work bids fair to be completed in a few months more, Mr. Moss's errand can hardly be described as premature.

MEER HAJEE, the native charged with the murder of Capt. Douglas, Mr. and Miss Fraser, Miss Jennings, and other English victims in 1857, was sentenced to be hanged on the 29th December in front of the Lahore gate of Delhi fort, the scene of the murders. The unhappy wretch has paid the penalty of his crime, as it were, twice over. Eleven years before he had been caught trying to escape from Delhi, had been cut down and left for dead by Sir T. Metcalfe, who met him on the way. Recovering from his wounds he found shelter for some years in Rewarie and Jeypore, after which he lived quietly at Lahore until fate overtook him a few months ago.

FROM the famine districts there is little news. Severe distress was expected at Tonk, where no grain is stored, and the Boondee and Jallawar districts were likely to suffer in spite of the excellent arrangements made there for the storing of grain. In Kotah some showers had fallen and the sowings recommenced. In the North-West prices were for the most part stationary. Relief works were being steadily pushed forward in Jhansi and Lullutpore. In the latter district some 3,245 persons are daily employed on tanks and other useful works under the able supervision of Mr. Finn, who, writes Colonel Lloyd, "has disciplined a mob of wild villagers—men, women, and children—and induced them to work and move almost by word of command." The prospects of the Deccan are said to be gloomy, owing to the failure of the late monsoon.

A BOMBAY telegram of January 24 informs us that Shere Ali's defeated rivals, Azim and Abdurrahman Khan, have besought the Punjab Government for an asylum on British ground, a prayer which the Government has granted pending further instructions from Calcutta. According to another telegram of the same date, the Government has substantially adopted Colonel Norman's scheme for the retirement of staff officers.

THE Calcutta papers announce the assent of the India Office to Sir J. Lawrence's scheme of a permanent bridge across the Hooghly, in preference to the rival proposals for a floating-bridge. Popular report in Calcutta will have it that a loan of two millions sterling has already been taken up in this country for Indian public works. The report however is but another instance of over-hasty conclusions from apparent facts. In due time, no doubt, India will have her loan, but at present there is nothing doing in that direction. With regard to the twenty lakhs of debentures payable on the 4th January, the Indian Government has given holders leave to hold them six months longer, and be paid off in July with 5 per cent. interest.

It seems that Colonels Keatinge and Brooke have gone to Jodhpore with the Viceroy's ultimatum for Jodhpore's impracticable ruler. He is allowed six months' grace to compose his differences with his thakoor. At the end of that time, in default of a settlement, a British force will hold the country, and the Rajah will be displaced by his son. The Rajah's offences seem to have sprung in part from the need of providing for an over-numerous family.

THE Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab is anxious to bring about "direct relations of friendship" with the ruler of Yarkund. In view of the prospects of a flourishing trade in tea and wool, he would have a native envoy established at the Khush-Beghi's Court. Sir John Lawrence however differs widely from Sir D. Macleod. He "trusts" that certain anticipations may be "realised," "hopes" that the tea-trade will grow, but declines to commit himself to what may involve "ulterior measures," and is prepared "absolutely to refuse compliance" with any scheme for establishing a native envoy at the Khush-Beghi's capital. The Lieutenant-governor however may write to that personage if he pleases.

WITH regard to railway matters we observe that the first portion of the staff of the Lahore and Peshawar Railway, under Mr. Alexander Grant, have reached Lahore, and that the first section of the Behar Chord line has been opened by a successful trial trip.

"AN OFFICER'S" letter came too late for present insertion. We can assure him however that a memorial regarding bonus compensation is already being numerously signed, and that Parliament will hear of the grievance ere long. Messrs. Grindlay and Co., or Messrs. Ridgway and Co., will supply all needful information.

IF the Moscow Gazette speaks with authority, Russia has no present idea of swallowing up the Turkoman Khanates. She prefers to make use of them in other ways. The Khan of Kokand, for instance, being well disposed to his new patron and late despoiler, can serve as a tower of defence for Russian travellers, and also neutralise the unfriendly influence of a neighbouring ruler at Altishar. In like manner the Ameer of Bokhara may further Russian interests by dealing sternly with the wild nomad races of Turkistan. "Bokhara may be barbarous and Mohammedan"—says the Gazette—"but she is more civilised than her Turkoman neighbours, and may well be accorded the advantage of coercing them instead of ourselves." We commend this idea to the Indian Foreign-office, which has always trouble enough in dealing with the restless tribes on the Peshawar Frontier. If the Akhoond of Swat would only take them in hand!

ACCORDING to the Indian Medical Gazette medical science has utterly failed in making head against the cholera. "Forty years ago the victims were one in five of those attacked, and now they are multiplied threefold." Forty years ago the death-rate from cholera in the European army was 22·89, whereas in 1867 it was 66·07. In the native army the death-rate from cholera rose from 19·56 in 1829 to 50·82 in 1867. The last Sanitary Blue-book certainly bears out the correctness of the higher figures. From the Madras statistics for 1865 we find that at Secunderabad of six men seized with cholera, five died, at Kamptee eleven out of fifteen, at Bellary nine out of eighteen. At Cannanore and Vizagapatam none who caught the disease survived; at Thayetmyoo and Fort St. George the proportion of deaths to cases treated was 1 to 2. Bangalore alone shows the more moderate proportion of 1 in 3. On the Bengal side we find cholera at Agra, in the same year, carrying off 7·25 per 1,000 out of 11·3 attacked. In Bengal Proper and Assam there were 99 cases in hospital from among the native troops, resulting in the death of 47·47 per cent. In 1866 out of every hundred prisoners stricken with cholera in the jails of Bengal 44·33 died. Between 1854 and 1860 the ratio of deaths from cholera among the European troops compared with seizures had ranged from 50 to 54 per cent., while between 1861 and 1865 it ranged from 61·3 to 75·1. In 1866 however the proportion of recoveries was larger than it had ever been since 1860. Yet the deaths were still about one to every two seizures, and in the native troops the percentage for that year was 54·60, a proportion exceeded only in 1863. These figures speak for themselves as to the failure of medical science, for all its new lights and varied experiments, to deal successfully with the great scourge of the nineteenth century.

ELSEWHERE will be found a description of a self-working punkah invented by Lieutenant Turnbull, of the 6th Royals. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and the best thing to say for this new piece of mechanism is that all who saw it working at the United Service Institution were satisfied with the results. It has the further merit of being portable. If it will only stand a good deal of wear and tear without getting out of order, its cheapness in the long run will prove as remarkable as the immense comfort of a machine which will perform its soothing mission from hour to hour, unmarred by the sleepiness or negligence that continually besets the human punkah-puller. What Briton in India would not be grateful for such an improvement on the ordinary methods? And the coolies themselves would hardly regret a change which allowed them to sleep on their backs without fear of the avenging shoe or reproachful kick from some awakened and perspiring sleeper.

THE Pall Mall Gazette draws attention to the hard case of Captain Cameron, erewhile Consul at Massowah, and afterwards for four years a prisoner in the hands of King Theodore. Of all that monarch's white captives he was the one who suffered worst and longest for no other fault than obedience to the instructions of our Foreign Office. It is clear enough now to the blindest partisan, that in merely acting up to those instructions he incurred the wrath of a suspicious barbarian, whose misgivings seemed finally justified by the long delay in sending out an answer to his absurd letter to our Queen. His health is now so utterly broken that, if not permanently disabled, he has no hope of being fit for work for some time to come. The amount of compensation hitherto granted him falls very far short of his undoubted due, and his small pension can hardly suffice for the needs of a healthy, much less of a sick man. We hope that the prayer of so deserving an officer will not be rejected on slight grounds.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

RETROSPECT OF 1868.

THE past year in India has been fruitful in incidents of various kinds. It opened on the campaign against King Theodore, and it has passed away amidst the clouds of a wide-spread famine. It has witnessed the success of our arms in Abyssinia and on the North-West Frontier, the progress of an official inquiry into the failure of the Bombay Bank, the suppression of revolts in Kattiwar and Keonghur, the visit of Dr. Norman Macleod to the Indian churches, the safe return of Captain Sladen from Bhamo, heavy floods in Bengal and Guzerat, a memorable eclipse of the sun, the completion of the railway from Calcutta to Umballa, the death of the loyal old Begum of Bhopal, the enthronement of the young Maharajah of Mysore, and the appointment of Lord Mayo as successor to Sir John Lawrence; all these and many other events being crowned by a famine wider-reaching than that of 1860, and in some parts little less deplorable than that of 1866.

In the first days of the year Sir Robert Napier landed in Annesley Bay. His presence at once brought order out of chaos in the encampment at Zoolla. Ere long he was leading from Senafeh, up and down more than three hundred miles of lofty hill and deep ravine, a small army mainly composed of Indian troops, supplied by an Indian commissariat, and attended by an Indian medical staff, to defeat several times their number of boastful warriors, and to storm with ease a stronghold which might have held out against so small a force for months. On Good Friday the victory of Arojee, won not less by the courage of our Panjabies than by the Sniders of their English comrades, frightened the bulk of Theodore's warriors into speedy surrender, and paved the way for the storming of Magdala on Easter Monday. Cut off from flight by a host of enemies whom Napier's diplomacy had attached to our cause, Theodore slew himself near the inner gate of his fortress, rather than fall into the hands of conquerors whose mercy he misreckoned by the extent of his own. His European captives duly released, his stronghold burnt down, and his child numbered among the spoils of war, the conquering army at once retraced its steps, and, true to Napier's predictions, the last of his soldiers embarked from Zoolla on the 2nd June. The one aim of the expedition had been fully accomplished, and the chiefs of the country were left to profit as they could by Theodore's fall. Sir Robert Napier, the Indian Engineer officer, gained his peerage for a campaign, the results of which were almost wholly due to his own skilful leadership; and Europe wondered equally at his brilliant success, and at British forbearance in paying the costs without retaining a foot of ground in the conquered country.

The Wagheer rising in Kattiwar belongs strictly to the end of the previous year. The suppression of these outlaws cost the lives of two brave officers in the political department ruled by Colonel Anderson. Of the rebels who escaped from the fight at Tobur Hill the greater number were afterwards hunted down and slain or taken prisoners. In February a rising of Naikra fanatics in Guzerat was speedily quelled by a small force of Bheels and Sepoys, some of the leaders being slain in fight and others reserved for condign punishment. A month later the troops at Kohat went out to attack the insurgent Bazoties, strongly posted on steep hills. In spite of much gallantry and a partial success, they had to withdraw in the evening with heavy loss, leaving the bodies of Major Ruxton and ten sepoy on the field. No further attempt was made to retrieve the disaster, but the Bazoties have since been kept under close blockade, in order to bring them to terms. In the middle of the year a few hundred Madras sepoy and Bengal police had to brave the drawbacks of an unhealthy climate and a difficult country in the work of suppressing the little rebellion in Keonghur, fostered by the Ranie on behalf of a pretender to her son's throne. Before this little business was fairly settled, another cloud had risen on the Punjab frontier. A raid of Hussunzais on a police post in Hazara about the end of August led to the mustering of a strong force under General Wilde, which advanced from Oghie on the 3rd October to make a grand demonstration against the hill tribes on the left bank of the Indus. After a day or two of desultory fighting, in which some of the troops from Abyssinia bore their part, the campaign resolved itself into a military parade in the lightest marching order through the heart of the Black Mountain. Each of the tribes in turn sued for peace and sent in hostages. A few villages were burned down and some fines levied on the chief offenders. The Hindustani refugees, hunted out of Swat and abandoned by their late protectors, escaped timely punishment at our hands by retiring across the Indus; and the fear of our name waxed great throughout Northern Hazara. It remains to see how long the impression will last; but for the present all is quiet on the frontier, and the Wahabie organisation bids fair to break up of itself.

Of political events beyond the frontier the most prominent has been the expulsion of Azim Khan from Kabul and the return to power of the lawful Ameer Shere Ali Khan, whose crowning defeat of Azim's nephew and best general, Abdurrahman Khan, leaves him for the present in firm possession of his throne. A minor change of the same kind has happened in Muscat, where the reigning Imam has lately been driven out by his relative, Azan-bin-Ghes; the Indian Government wisely remaining neutral. In our own provinces the Nawab of Tonk was displaced at the beginning of the year by his son, at the orders of the Supreme Government, on account of his complicity in the murder of one of his thakoors. The quarrel between the ruler of Jodhpore and his nobles threatens to end in a like issue, if he should not speedily avail himself of the grace allowed him by the Indian Government. On the other hand the policy of maintaining native States within our borders has been illustrated by the enthronement of the young heir to the kingdom of Mysore.

In the domestic history of the year, the progress of a great famine unfortunately takes the lead. It was a peculiar season in many parts of the world, and India was not to escape her share of strange experiences. Unusually heavy rains laid many parts of Lower Bengal and Guzerat under water, while an unusual drought destroyed all hopes of a good harvest in Central and Northern India. The Kluureef crops came to nothing, and the Rubbee sowings were spoilt for want of the later rains. All that broad and arid region which divides the Ganges from the Indus, and extends southwards from the Ravee to the Nerbudda has been more or less ravaged by the last year's drought. In Rajpootana the suffering is greatest, but the effects of the scarcity will be very widely felt throughout Hindustan Proper. Everywhere however measures have been promptly and wisely taken to mitigate the distress. Government officials and native chiefs have vied with each other in legislating and carrying out plans for the relief of the hunger-stricken millions. The example set by the ruler of Gwalior has been followed by the numerous princes of Rajpootana, and the Maharajah of Indore. Private charity is also doing its best to supplement public processes. Relief works, remissions of revenue, suspensions of transit dues, subscriptions voluntary and from the public purse, all bid fair to avert the worst of the horrors witnessed in 1866. There will of course be great suffering, but this time we may expect that the evil will not be aggravated by official blindness or the lack of public spirit.

The great legislative event of the year has been the passing of the Punjab Tenancy Bill, the main end of which is to secure existing tenants in the rights virtually conceded them by the first settlement of the Punjab under British rule. Another Bill, not yet become law, provides legal sanctions for the marriage of natives belonging, like the Brahmoists, to sects apparently disowned by orthodox Hindu and Mohammedan law. Scholarships for natives anxious to qualify themselves in England for the Civil Service or any other profession have at length been instituted with the hearty approval of the late Secretary of State for India. Female Normal Schools have been established in Bombay and projected in Madras. A Bill for checking the influx of European loafers into British India has been laid before the Supreme Council with every prospect of speedy conversion into a statute.

Indian finance was shown to be in a prosperous condition by the revelations of Mr. Massey's final budget. There was a nominal deficit of half a million, covered twice over by the remains of a former loan, and convertible into a handsome surplus by deducting the year's outlay on reproductive public works. This surplus had been largely swelled by the profits on opium and grain, the latter having yielded abundantly in spite of an increased duty. The licence-tax and the Post-office had also contributed their share of increase. For the ensuing year Mr. Massey predicted a surplus of a quarter of a million. His other prediction about heavy loans in the future for works of irrigation bids fair to be fulfilled ere long. With regard to the long-pending question of a gold currency for India, an important step forward was taken in November by the Indian Government, in the shape of an announcement that English and Australian sovereigns would thenceforth be taken at all the treasuries and paid out at the rate of ten rupees and a-quarter each.

In September the Commission of Inquiry into the failure of the Bank of Bombay brought to a close the work on which it had entered three months before. The evidence taken revealed the astounding recklessness with which the affairs of the bank had been conducted on all hands during the years of the cotton mania. It was also shown that the Government directors were mere dummies in the hands of their commercial colleagues. The Commission afterwards resumed its sittings in this country, eliciting further evidence of the same damnable sort. Its report has not yet appeared, but the evidence on all the main points has been so conclusive, that the only question is how far the Government was answerable for the losses incurred?

The prospects of a permanent trade with Central Asia through Ladakh and Yarkund were greatly improved during the past year. Yarkundie merchants have shown themselves willing to buy any quantity of certain Indian wares in exchange for goods from their own country. An easier road from our own provinces, through the Changchenmoo Valley, has also been rediscovered, along which it is said that camels can pass with safety. The Maharajah of Cashmere has added to his services in the Hazara campaign by offering to build serais for the use of travellers along the road through his own dominions. A successful journey made by a disguised pundit into the very heart of Tibet opens out the possibility of further explorations in a region long closed to European intercourse. Captain Sladen's arduous journey by Bhamo to Momein under the doubtful protection of the King of Burmah has added much to our knowledge of the difficulties and capabilities of regular commercial intercourse with the unknown regions between Burmah and Western China. Another explorer, Mr. Cooper, has been less successful in the attempt to reach India from Chinese ground. On the other hand, a French expedition has succeeded, after two years' wandering, in making its way from Saigon through Yunnan to Hankow.

Several changes have taken place in the personnel of Indian Government both at home and in India. A change of Ministry has led to the substitution of the Duke of Argyll for Sir Stafford Northcote at the head of the India Office. Of the duke's general fitness for such a post there is no question, nor could an abler man than Mr. Grant Duff have been found to replace the late Under Secretary. Sir C. Mills, Mr. Eastwick, and Sir Proby Cautley, have made way by their retirement for Sir F. Halliday, Sir R. Montgomery, and Sir H. Rawlinson—all men of mark and tried ability. In India Lord Mayo has succeeded to the post so worthily filled by Sir John Lawrence, the first Viceroy ever formally invested with so high a dignity from the ranks of the Indian Civil Service. Mr. Massey's retirement from the Supreme Council made room for the promotion of Sir R. Temple to the post of Financial Secretary. The year also witnessed the appointment of Sir W. Muir to the Lieutenant-governorship of the Punjab, that of Mr. Seton-Karr to the Foreign Secretaryship, of Mr. Charles Saunders to the Residency at Hyderabad, of Mr. Campbell to the Chief Commissionership of the Central Provinces, and of Dr. Douglas to the bishopric of Bombay. In the retirement of Sir Alexander Grant from the Directorship of Public Instruction at Bombay the Presidency lost one of the ablest and most learned leaders of educational progress that England has ever sent out to the East.

The railway system of India has been developed in several directions. Sir John Lawrence himself presided at the opening of the line from Delhi to Umballa, whence the traveller can now reach Calcutta in less than two days. The line from Umballa to Lahore will soon be open. The word has gone out for a railway from Lahore to Peshawar, and from Kotree to Mooltan. On the Central Indian Railway a gap of a hundred miles from Jubbulpore to Saugor is all that remains unfinished between Bombay and the North-West. On the Madras side a new line has been opened from Madras to Trichinopoly. A line from Coimbatore to the foot of the Nilgherries has also been decreed. The opening of the new line from Alexandria direct to Suez, avoiding Cairo, has shortened the passage of the Isthmus to ten hours.

Works of irrigation are in progress, some of them under the control of private companies, while others like the Behar and Orissa Works have been transferred to the Indian Government. Peshawar is being strengthened with new fortifications, and large sums have been laid out on barracks there and elsewhere. A new line of telegraph from Russia to the Persian Gulf promises to make up for defects in the working of the Indo-Turkish line, although it can hardly obviate the need for a submarine cable by the Red Sea. The latter project however is still in embryo, because Government withholds the guarantee without which private enterprise still shrinks from carrying it out. The new postal service to India has worked so well that the increased rates of postage will most likely be done away.

A new set of furlough rules for both the Covenanted Services has removed many of the grievances involved in the old rules. To subalterns coming home on leave the boon has been specially great, inasmuch as their home pay has been raised to a minimum of £250 a-year. Staff officers and civil servants can also retain their appointments for a given term and draw half their Indian allowances for two years at home. The Uncovenanted Service will also benefit by the new rules shortly to be issued for their behoof. Some changes for the better have been set on foot by the rules lately issued for the Subordinate Medical Department.

At home and in Parliament India last year cut no greater figure than usual. The speeches of Lord Salisbury at Manchester and of Mr. Massey at Liverpool stand apart as samples of enlightened interest taken by Englishmen at home in the affairs of their great dependency. Public apathy has been but little stirred by the meetings and discussions of the East India Association. In Parliament pretty full houses were mustered on one occasion, for a vote of thanks to Lord Napier and his brave troops. At other times a few members listened to brief discussions on Mr. Fawcett's proposal to hold examinations for the Civil Service in the chief cities of India as well as London, on the progress of irrigation in India, on Mr. Massey's budget as explained by Sir S. Northcote, on the proposed inquiry into the failure of the Bank of Bombay, and so forth. A few questions were also asked touching the gold currency, the sale of girls, the Brindisi route, telegraph lines to India, the Banda and Kirwee Prize, and the beer supplied to the troops. After much thought bestowed on his two Bills for the better government of India, one of which aimed at opening the Civil Service to the natives indirectly through the Indian Government, Sir Stafford Northcote found himself forced by untoward circumstances to withdraw both Bills. It was already July, and a Parliament which had spent its energies on the Irish Church could not be expected to sit a day longer for anything in the shape of an Indian topic. The Anglo-Indian members in the new House of Commons are fewer than ever, Lord W. Hay, Mr. Laing, Mr. Massey, Sir R. Hamilton, and two or three more having lost their old or failed to find new seats. Of the newly-elected Messrs. Denison, Wyllie, and Eastwick, and Sir C. Wingfield are worthiest of note.

Foremost in the list of Anglo-Indians removed by death may be placed the name of Sir Herbert Edwardes, who died just before Christmas of the disease which prevented him from becoming Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. Earlier in the year died Sir G. Whitlock, erewhile commander of the force that captured Kirwee, and has still to get in the last instalments of the Kirwee and Banda prize. Among native worthies lately dead, a line is due to the memory of our stouthearted ally and loyal feudatory, the Begum of Bopal.

MR. MARSHMAN'S NEW DECORATION. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Broad Arrow asks why Mr. Editor Marshman has been decorated with the insignia of the Order of "The Most Exalted Star of India," and the query finds an echo in your columns.

The selection, Sir, is in strict accordance with a maxim always known here, and of late years established in certain political quarters—"You caw me and I'll caw you."—Your obedient servant,

VEBB. SAP.

THE LAY OF THE RETIRED INDIAN OFFICER.

Who paces the room with a step of despair?
The once buoyant major, the gay militaire!
His pockets are empty, and would you know why—
For enlightenment list to his dolorous cry
Of "Bonus" recurring again and again,
With a heart-rending pathos: say, is it in vain?

Oh, listen to my lay, kind friends, and hear how ruination
Befel me by the gracious Act, that's call'd "Amalgamation;"
Of threadbare coat and shabby hat I cast on it the onus,
For without fault or step of mine, it robb'd me of my "Bonus."

From glad expectancy my life was chang'd to drear vexation, Others sold out, but I was sold by this "Amalgamation;"
Of debts unpaid, and credit lost, say, will it bear the onus—
Can it refute this earnest charge, "it robb'd me of my Bonus?"

Three thousand and five hundred pounds I deem'd with fond elation Provision for my children dear; alas, "Amalgamation"
Has driv'n them forth to earn their bread, and bitter is the onus
That rests upon my aching heart, because—I lost my "Bonus."

My gently-nurtur'd wife sits lost in saddest contemplation,
Ill-dress'd, ill-fed, and all because of this "Amalgamation;"
Of cheerless home and sadden'd lives I cast on it the onus,
Oh, what calm happiness was ours! before I lost my "Bonus."

I serv'd my Queen for thirty years, and never shunn'd a station;
Honours unstain'd, career undimm'd; but this "Amalgamation"
Has rous'd a strange and bitter cry, and who shall bear the onus
If I regret the alter'd rule that robb'd me of my "Bonus?"

Surely 'twould be a gracious act, and worthy of relation,
If our good Queen would change our tone against "Amalgamation,"
By causing those who fram'd the rules alone to bear the onus,
That we may shout "God bless the Queen," who's giv'n us back our
"Bonus."

'Twould bring the happy sunshine back to many in the nation
Who now sit down with blighted hopes and mourn "Amalgamation,"
If statesmen would consider well the burden of the onus
Which they must bear, if they withhold our long subscribed-for
"Bonus."

"To err is human." Would they weigh with keen discrimination
How, without fault, we're ruin'd by the scheme "Amalgamation," They'd fight the battle for the weak, and proudly bear the onus
Of granting Indian officers their well-earn'd, rightful "Bonus."

VERITAS.

A FAMINE WORK NEGLECTED.

The Times of India admits that in ordinary seasons, when the population is in a position to wait for twelve months or more, while twenty different officials report and Government deliberates, it would be folly not to select the most urgent and most remunerative works for earliest execution; but in a season of famine, when not only the population of our own provinces, but thousands of immigrants from neighbouring States, must either work, or loot, or die, we protest against the policy of sanctioning no undertaking that has not first commended itself to the mind of a number of gentlemen a thousand miles away, as deserving of immediate attention. While the Government of India is deliberating, the people are starving, and works of the greatest public utility, the execution of which would save these thousands alive, are at a standstill. Wherever a railway may be made, a canal dug, a hundred miles of road constructed, or any useful undertaking set afoot upon which the able-bodied and unskilled poor can be profitably employed, we say let that road, railway, or canal be sanctioned at once, without questioning whether some other scheme, hundreds of miles away, may not possess a prior claim. What work can possess a prior claim to one situated in the midst of a district blessed with plenty, yet over-run with starving hordes from less favoured provinces? Of such works there are several we could mention in Guzerat, and the most prominent of them is one the desirability of which under any circumstances has often been represented to Government. We refer to the extension of the B. B. and C. I. Railway from Ahmedabad to Veerungaum. Now here is an opportunity for Lord Mayo to inaugurate his reign by substituting "action for writing." The importance of the Veerungaum extension, on purely commercial grounds, has already been brought to the notice of the Government of India. The Bombay Government, too, has strongly supported the various memorials that have been forwarded to the Government of India on the subject; yet nothing has been done. Upwards of a thousand merchants of Bombay and Guzerat have memorialised the Government of India on the subject; the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, too, has strongly urged the desirability, for many reasons, of sanctioning this extension; the Revenue Commissioner has said all he can say in support of the scheme; the Bombay Government has recommended that the work be proceeded with, yet Sir John Lawrence does "not deem it deserving of his immediate sanction." But circumstances have changed since Sir John Lawrence thus put his veto on the proposed branch. Works which may not have demanded immediate sanction twelve months ago urgently demand it now. And we venture to think this Veerungaum railway is one of them. Looked at from a purely commercial point of view, which the Government of India is only too apt to take up, especially in connection with all that concerns Bombay, the proposed extension is a most inviting one. Not only will it be a paying branch itself, but it will go a long way towards making the rest of the Baroda line pay as well. The Chamber of Commerce has long seen this, and in March last urged the desirability of proceeding with the works. The extension will not be more than thirty-seven miles in length; there are no engineering difficulties to contend against; the line will run the whole distance in British territory; and the entire cost of construction will not be much over £200,000. Moreover, by constructing this line to Veerungaum, the main line will not only be connected with a town which is already of considerable size and importance, but will be ensured of the traffic of the whole of Kattiawar. Already, notwithstanding the difficulties in the way of cart traffic, cotton comes to Ahmedabad from Veerungaum; already cotton presses are at work there, and everything indicates, that the line must be extended at no distant period.

HINDEE VERSUS OORDOO.

The Indian Daily News grants that, as at present existing, Oordoo is a language by no means barren or poor. It has been largely enriched from the Persian, the Toorki, and the Arabic, but chiefly the former. Its substratum is Hindee, the original language of the country. It has had its literature enriched by various authors. Having been the Court language of the Mogul Empire, it has assumed and holds the position in these parts which French holds on the continent of Europe. It is the fashionable language. Courtiers converse in it in the most polished and polite phrases, while the respectable Lalla uses it whenever he stands on his politeness (and that is always), and the classes of "men-singers and women-singers" use it principally in their love songs and entertainments. Europeans in general converse with natives in a broken Oordoo. It will thus be perceived that Oordoo has a prominence which cannot be denied to it. But it has its weak side. Although based on Hindee and naturalised on the soil, it is still essentially a foreign language. It came in with the Mahomedans, and has been built up by them through the help of the Persian. As the Court language of a race of conquerors it has been imposed on the sons of the soil, and is foreign to them. Taken as a language, which alone is used by the people, it does not stand the numerical test. There are fewer who use Oordoo, and it alone, as the sole medium of their conversation, than the older and true language of the country—Hindee. The Hindoos outnumber the Mahomedans, even in peculiarly Mahomedan districts and cities, as ten to one. Besides, not one in ten Mahomedans themselves can be found who is a master of the Oordoo, and hardly one in a hundred who can comprehend the technical law terms and phrases. These are the weaknesses of the Oordoo, and they are most serious. The Hindee, on the other hand, is, as was the Saxon in England at the time of Edward III., the prevailing language of the country. It is indigenous, being almost immediately related to the Sanskrit. It has a vast literature of its own, and is archaic in expression. It does not require the aid of foreign languages, and can be enriched to any required extent from the Sanskrit, to the preservation and study of which the Government of India has just given such a great impetus. And taken in these lights, besides the additional political reason we would have in letting the Mahomedan element die a natural death, while we set free the Hindoo sentiment of nationality in Upper India, we think it can hardly be doubted towards which language, the Hindee or the Oordoo, the balance should incline. And we should not forget that, in consequence of the present predominance of Oordoo, the Hindoos complain that nearly three-fourths of the posts under Government are filled by Mahomedans, to the detriment of the Hindoo section, the majority. It is a fact, too, that the written Oordoo, if carelessly or rapidly done, is almost unintelligible to the writers themselves, while the Hindee or Deva Nagari character is clear and distinct (except that which is used in native financial transactions, a sort of cipher, we presume). The causes which actuated Government to select Oordoo as the language of the Courts forty years ago do not exist at present; and one great result of banishing Oordoo to its own proper domains will be the breaking up of the present strong amlah and mooktear supremacy. Freed from the mysterious law language, even villagers and peasants could understand their own law transactions, instead of being, as at present, so completely at the mercy of the mooktear. Finally, the language of the native States being mostly Hindee, by our law transactions being in that language, we may reasonably expect that those States will be better able to appreciate the principles of our legal system if expounded in Hindee.

THUGGEE AS IT IS.

The Friend of India asserts that the crime of Thuggee is far more difficult to deal with than such open violations of the law as Dacoity; and the extent to which it is carried on among the natives, in a new form, is appalling. The terrible risk to which even the most cautious traveller is exposed from these professional poisoners demands that every official in the empire should aid in efforts to detect them. The stories of these wretches and their use of the fatal dhatura to be found in the Thuggee report rival in horrible interest the tale of a Brinvilliers or the worst episodes of Italian brigandage. manifold are the varieties the narrative assumes, but the tragical end is always the same. Now it is a party of pilgrims on their way to a holy shrine, and they are joined by a fellow traveller, who generally contrives to make himself agreeable and to shorten the weary journey by his pleasant conversation. The serai is reached; like the continental aubergiste, the keeper well knows the scene which is to ensue; cooking commences, and whether under pretence of treating the party, or on some other excuse, the insidious drug is introduced into their food or their tobacco; the protracted coma or death itself soon follows, and the poisoner is miles away and has changed his identity hours before his victims are discovered. Now it is a party of soldiers going home on furlough, with their scanty savings carefully stowed away in their cummerbunds, and, like all who follow the drum, they are at once accessible to the stranger, and as ready to treat or be treated as he can desire. At one time a rich priest is poisoned by the offerings made to his idol, and the pretended devotees walk off with all the portable wealth of the temple. At another it is a courtesan whose only wealth consists of her ornaments. The Oorlah Thugs, who are to be found in Calcutta and its neighbourhood, confine their operations to this class—a branch of the profession which may be compared to that line on which Noah Claypole's predilections led him to embark—the "Kinchin lay." In fact the multiplicity of aspects under which we recognise this agency at work is so great that we can see no means of guaranteeing the security of native travellers except by more special operations against these poisoners, by employing every means to secure the conviction of suspected parties, and by strictly prohibitive measures upon the sale of poisons. The most remarkable change which has come over Thuggee in our own days is the abandonment of the more hazardous and easily-detected method of accomplishing their fell purpose by strangulation for the use of poisons and intoxicating drugs. It may appear surprising to some that the earlier Thugs did not long ago adopt this method as being best calculated for removing their victims quietly and without personal risk. We, however, find that Thuggee by poisoning was carried on with great success in the early days, and that it was not the practice generally resorted to was due to a more strict observance of caste prejudices among travellers, and a consequent greater reluctance to accept food from the hands of a stranger than is the case at present.

PLAN OF A HARBOUR FOR MADRAS.—There is a plan for a regular harbour for Madras now before the Harbour Committee, proposed by Mr. Perkes, at one time connected as a civil engineer with the port of Liverpool. These plans were originally made in 1858, immediately after the great cyclone that caused such enormous loss of life and property. Their execution was strongly recommended by the Madras Government, but the Secretary of State, having then recently sanctioned the construction of a screw pile pier, refused to entertain the matter until the merits of the pier had been tested. They have now been tested, and certainly the necessity for getting some protection for shipping is not diminished. The proposal to construct a breakwater in a straight line parallel to the shore has two great disadvantages—those of great cost and comparative inefficiency. The necessity of embarking all the vast quantities of stone required for such a work and throwing them into the sea from boats would cause such a work to be comparatively much more costly than one running out from the shore, and on which railway trucks could run and tilt their loads of stone directly into the sea. Then a breakwater is not a harbour. It supplies no wharfage, and gives but a comparative and rather uncertain refuge from the weather. Mr. Perkes' plan is to make two curved breakwaters running out into the sea towards each other, and leaving an open space of 1,000 feet between them. They would thus form a basin or harbour, within which ships could ride in safety with an entrance a thousand feet wide. Inside the basin would be a stone pier and wharf forming two inner harbours; and in the construction of the work enough of the foreshore would be reclaimed to allow of a line of wharves and warehouses being constructed on the shore line in front of the Custom House. The great questions that will have to be discussed in connection with this plan are those of cost and of silt. How much will it cost? Mr. Perkes says a million and a quarter sterling, and we know that a breakwater would cost as much. Then, will the sand drive into the harbour and gradually fill it up? Mr. Perkes has reason to think that no silting of any importance will take place. It is only when the waves get into shallow water that they stir up the sand, and as the entrance to the harbour would be in seven and-half fathoms, the engineer anticipates that the waves entering would carry little or no sand with them. The plan will no doubt have the careful attention of the committee appointed to consider this important question.—Madras Times.

KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—On the 11th of November last Sir William Merewether, Commissioner in Sind, reported to Government the extension of the Kurrachee Bar since May 1868 in a southeasterly direction, to a distance of 490 feet, and the deepening of the new channel under Manora Point; he consequently recommended very strongly the adoption of Captain Giles' proposal to work a dredge (for the next three months of fine weather) through the channel to the extent suggested by Mr. Parkes in the 38th para. of his last report, without waiting for the sanction of the whole proposed scheme of improvement works from home. A week after the Superintendent of the Kurrachee Harbour Works submitted the customary report on the recent survey of the Kurrachee Harbour, together with tracings of charts. On the 5th of December the following "Resolution" was passed:—"The report should be forwarded, as usual, to the Government of India, and to the Secretary of State. With regard to the proposition for dredging in the new channel under Manora Point, a measure so strongly recommended by Captain Giles, Government agree with him in considering it advisable to do so, and direct that the work be at once put in hand."

THE FAMINE.

The relief works ordered by the Government of the North-West Provinces are (says the Pioneer) for the present confined to the districts of Bijour, Mozuffernuggur, and Moradabad, in the Meerut and Rohilkund Divisions. The Lieutenant Governor, in a very explicit resolution on the subject, has specified the particular works to be undertaken in each district, classifying those debitable to Imperial and local funds. Works of public utility are in all cases to be undertaken, new roads are to be opened out to connect important centres, new bridges built and old ones repaired, bricks are to be made and stored for future use, and kunker is to be quarried and stored for road metaling purposes in years to come. This resolution of Sir William Muir appears to be the result of much personal inquiry in those districts where the pressure of want is felt.

A friend, writing from Lahore, says that no rain has fallen. Numbers of the people of Bikaner and Sirsa, and others living on the borders of the desert, are flocking into the Punjab. They are driven from their houses more by the want of water than by want of food. Works have been opened at Ferozepore, Roopur, and other places, and these stations are being crowded with refugees. A large number are, however, physically unfit for labour, in consequence of the privations they have undergone. It is said that they were first to be fed and then employed. There appears to be some mistake in the rates fixed. These are 1 anna, 1½ anna, and 2 annas for children and adults respectively. Contractors, however, are giving six and even eight annas per day to those who work a little overtime.—Englishman.

We learn from the Central India Times that owing to the dearth of provisions in the Central Provinces Government has sanctioned an allowance to servants drawing less than 100 rupees per mensem, at the rate of 25 per cent. on their incomes.

According to the Pioneer the price of grain still continues stationary in the Punjab. There has been no perceptible rise, except at Umballa, where wheat has risen to eight seers the rupee. The average throughout the province is still about twelve seers.

STATION TALK.

FEROZEPORE, Dec. 19.—During the past week we have had a change in our monotonous lives in this station by the appearance of the amateurs of B-22 Royal Artillery, at the St. George's Theatre, under the patronage of Major Presant, R.A. This is their second appearance on our stage, and the play they brought out, viz., the melodrama in two acts entitled "The Miser of Shoreditch," was performed to the highest perfection, considering the small number of men they have to select from. The leading characters were ably sustained, especially that of the Miser, played by Bartlett, who for a young man and a non-professional deserves the highest credit. His man, Toby Taper, a poor half-starved domestic, was well taken by Winna, who looked the picture of hunger itself. Sampson Bealing was played by Thompson, who sustained his character well; he is a new hand in the company, and this was his first appearance; his delivery was free and expressive of the character he assumed. Oliver Dalton, Evelyn Hartwell, and Mabel were taken respectively by Hamilton, Smith, and McFarlane. Constance, played by James, was well carried through, although a little inclined to be corpulent for a female character. The comic characters were taken by Whitelaw and Findlay; the minor characters were passably played. The interlude consisted of Irish comic songs by Winna—"The Irish Schoolmaster" and "Flannagan Ball," the latter drawing forth an encore and shouts of laughter—and a Spanish dance by James and Phillips, the whole concluding with the laughable farce entitled "A Night at Notting Hill." The principal characters were taken by Whitelaw, Smith, Andrews, Findlay, and Hamilton; the latter as the Irish policeman got great applause, and kept the house in a continual roar of laughter.

ALLAHABAD, Dec. 23.—I was really delighted when I heard a few days ago that the experience, short as it has been, has fully proved to the Board of Agency that the railway arrangements which came into force from the first of this month are altogether bad and disadvantageous to the company in a pecuniary point of view. It has, in consequence, been resolved to revert to the former arrangements. Ever since the change has taken place the mails are delivered at least six hours later at this station; and this is not at all surprising when we come to consider the number of accidents that have occurred to the express trains. Only last Sunday the express, which should have left this station at one in the morning, never arrived here till after that hour; so that it started about two—that is, an hour later. The same train again broke down one station away from Cawnpore, and the mail, together with the passengers, were detained on the road until another engine was sent. In short, instead of arriving at Cawnpore at six in the morning, it arrived at half-past 9 A.M. It seems very apparent that the Board of Agency requires to be reorganised; however, the public will rest satisfied with the old arrangements and the usual speed of thirty miles an hour. The Government has been constrained to appeal to the public for relief, in consequence of the famine, which is rapidly increasing in several districts of the North-West. A central committee, composed of some of the influential and respectable members of the official and non-official community, has been formed by the special orders of Sir William Muir. The object for which aid is solicited is of such a nature as to demand the immediate attention of every man. If rain was to fall now it would be of no avail. It is a very deplorable circumstance that the first year of Sir William's administration should be accompanied by a famine, and at the same time it is fortunate that at such a crisis the head of the Government is one in whom the people can repose entire confidence—one who will sacrifice much to ameliorate the condition of his subjects—one who will be seen in the midst of the distressed extending the arm of succour. It is my painful duty to record again that loafers are daily increasing in the station. Mr. Baldwin, the chaplain, who has certainly done all in his power for ridding the country of this obnoxious class of men, has come to the conclusion that nothing short of a legislative enactment will put a stop to vagrancy in India. Some men will rather eke out their existence by prowling about the streets and going from door to door asking alms than take up any kind of employment. What can be done with them? If a law is passed which will empower the magistrate to keep such men in the lock-up on low diet it will in a very short time work a reformation in the heart of every loafer. It is a fact that as the railway has gone on increasing, in proportion loafers have increased. Two-thirds of the men that have come to me have all been railway employes, either as engine-drivers or guards, and without exception every loafer has been in the army some time or other.

NUSSEERBAD, Dec. 22.—With mingled regret and satisfaction I have to record the fall of a portion of one of the new barrack buildings presently being erected in this eminently delightful and highly salubrious camping ground; regret, because one life at least has been sacrificed, and satisfaction, because an inquiry must necessarily take place into the matter which may be attended with the good effect of saving other and more valuable lives. Yesterday forenoon a little before twelve o'clock a portion of the side wall of one of the new buildings, about forty feet long and twenty-five or thirty feet in height, suddenly bulged out and fell down, killing a girl who happened to be under the wall at the time. There were surmises at first that other persons were buried beneath the ruins, but the missing individuals have since turned up, having fled in terror from the neighbourhood on the occurrence of the accident.

NAGPORE, Dec. 23.—Mr. Morris will shortly proceed down to Calcutta, to be present at the departure of the present, and at the reception of the coming Viceroy. Major Mackenzie, our able Judicial Commissioner, now on his tour, will take advantage of the Christmas vacation to run into Lucknow on some business, and on his return will proceed on his tour of inspection towards Dumoh, Saugor, Narsingpore, Hoshungabad, Nimar, Baitool, and thence return to Nagpore. He has disappointed the many who thought that he would look up the Court papers and books only; but he has found fault wherever he has gone, with the getting up of the court-room and with the want of conveniences for the court officials as well as for the public; also with the undignified-looking accommodation of some of the more important courts, looking more like lumber godowns than halls of justice, and has ordered all such defects to be remedied at once. Major Mackenzie no doubt was satisfied that he could regulate the procedure and judgments of judicial officers from his own chambers at Nagpore, as he has heretofore done, by sending for the proceedings of hundreds of cases monthly and inspecting them himself. "He is the man for Galway;" and there is no doubt of it. The Sanitary or Suffice Commissioner, as the natives call him, is away; but he is at work inspecting villages and reading them lessons on cleanliness and other things which are conducive to the health of the people. Townspeople particularly have a horror of this official; they look upon him as nothing short of a demon, whose visit to their neighbourhood is sure to be followed up by some sort of dhick to them. You may depend upon it that the amiable Doctor (Townsend) who now fills the post gets more curses than blessings, although he so well deserves the latter. Colonel Moxon, our popular Inspector-General of Police, is also on his tour. It is said that Sir Richard Temple complimented the Public Works Department when he was here on the good condition of the road towards Jubbulpore. If he did, all I can say to it is this, that Sir Richard must have been asleep when his dawk carriage rattled over the portion between Munsur and Deolapahar; and it is almost a pity that he did not meet with some little accident in that neighbourhood on his return journey, as a recompense for the patronage which he dispensed to an overpetted department.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

PENSION.—The undermentioned out-pensioner having been permitted to reside and draw his stipend in the Bengal Presidency, payment of pension is to be made and charged accordingly:—Serg. Lloydock, an out-pensioner of the Royal Hospital at Greenwich, from the division of the corps of Royal Engineers, £36. 10s. (thirty-six pounds and ten shillings) per annum, subject to a deduction of £4. 10s. (four pounds and ten shillings) per quarter for the support of his wife in England, paid up to the 30th day of August, 1868.

Miscellaneous.

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN MOSELEY.—Captain W. H. Moseley, of the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles, met with an accident on the 21st when out riding, and sustained a fracture of the arm above the elbow. The bone was immediately set, and he is doing well.—Englishman.

MEER HAJEE.—It is reported that the sentence passed upon Meer Hajee, the murderer of Captain Douglas and other Christians on the 11th of May, 1857, has been confirmed, and that the culprit was to suffer the extreme penalty of the law at Delhi on the 29th Dec.

MR. W. HUNTER.—The Government of Bengal has taken into consideration Mr. W. W. Hunter's claim for time to enable him to continue his investigations into the great philological problem that he has undertaken. He has been appointed the Superintendent of Stamps and Stationery in Calcutta, a post which will admit of leisure.

DEFAMATION OF CHARACTER.—In the Recorder's office, Rangoon, on the 9th Jan., Captain Chamberlain, of her Majesty's 2-24th Regiment, filed a suit against Colonel Greenlaw, Paymaster of the Pegu Circle, for Rs. 3,000 damages, for defamation of character. But the suit was withdrawn on account of Colonel Greenlaw having sent a written apology, in which he stated he had no intention whatever to cast any reflection on Captain Chamberlain's character.

SHIP ON FIRE AT SEA.—Captain Irwin, of the ship Northern Empire, which has arrived at Calcutta, reports having, when in lat. 36-19 S. long. 5-32 E., fallen in with a ship on fire at 8 P.M. It was blowing a gale at the time, in consequence of which the Northern Empire did not get abreast of the burning vessel before 4 A.M. Captain Irwin then tacked towards the place where the vessel was last seen, but she had sunk, and nothing was seen except some spars and planks painted green.

"CRIM. CON."—It is naturally painful (remarks an Allahabad contemporary) to have two gentlemen bearing such very respectable, not to say Scriptural, names as Elias and Jordan, standing in the relation of plaintiff and defendant in a crim. con. case. Mr. Basil Elias, of this station, has charged Lieut. Jordan, of H.M.'s 107th Regiment, with adultery with his (Mr. Elias's) wife, and criminal trespass. The first hearing of the case came off in Mr. Rawlins's Court. The examination and cross-examination of the chief witness, Mr. Elias, occupied the Court nearly the whole day.

MILITARY.—The 5-22nd R.A. marched from Agra en route to Meer Meer on the 24th December.—The 2nd battalion 60th rifles left Allahabad on the 22nd December by special train for Cawnpore and Lucknow en route to Seetapore.—The 16th regiment N.I. reached Shahjehanpore on Christmas-day. The left wing of the regiment is to remain at that station. The head-quarters and right wing were to have left Shahjehanpore on December 28, reaching Bareilly on the 31st, and Moradabad on the 6th January.—The 26th Punjab N.I., under command of Major Williamson, were to arrive at Agra on Monday the 4th January.

THE NEW FINANCIAL SECRETARY.—Mr. R. B. Chapman has been appointed to officiate as Financial Secretary to the Government of India, during the absence of Mr. Lushington. The appointment is severely criticised by the Englishman, and the Pioneer, though far from denying his merits, cannot welcome his appointment to a post for which a fitter candidate was at hand, and for which his only preparation is that narrow knowledge of political economy which troubled the suffering of Orissa, and was not rewarded with a vote of thanks by the Parliament of Britain. The Indian Daily News, too, would not like to accept the responsibility of such an appointment. The only possible solution, says the News, "is that our contemporary is mistaken. We should as soon think of placing an Esquimaux in charge of the Great Eastern steamship. To be sure Mr. Chapman is great in finance, as evidenced in a late financial proposition of his to disburse with the services of a policeman at (we think) Kishnaghur, which led to a correspondence in which Mr. Chapman and other dignitaries figure, but do not shine."

GAMBLING IN BURMAH.—A gambling mania has broken out in the Prome and Myanong districts of British Burmah, with which the authorities are puzzled how to deal. A set of swindlers calling themselves Tsayas or "teachers," have been going about, whose modus operandi, if not strictly original, is at least highly ingenious, and does not expose them in any great degree to the penalties of the law. A Tsaya sets up in a village, and his confederates take care that the inhabitants shall be informed that he is in the habit of giving sixty per cent. interest for any sum of money that may be left for a few days in his possession. There is generally somebody simple and avaricious enough to make the experiment, and sure enough he carries away his Rs. 160 for the Rs. 100 which he had left with the Tsaya a few days before. The news gets abroad, every sixpence in the village is scraped together, and left in the Tsaya's hut, and the villagers even run into debt to raise money to put to such usury. This goes on for some time until the Tsaya has a deposit large enough to abscond with. The authorities interfered, and have prohibited Government employees from having any dealings with these gentry; but beyond keeping their movements under close surveillance we hardly see what preventive measures the law affords them.

Madras.

WE understand that Major Neild is to act for Major Michael as Superintendent of Family Payments.—Madras Mail.

OOTACAMUND.—We observe an announcement of the death, at Ootacamund, of the Rev. E. Laseron, a gentleman long known at Ootacamund in connection with an educational establishment. Mr. Laseron had been ailing for a considerable time.

NEW SANITARIUM IN BURMAH.—The Government have, says the Madras Mail, sanctioned the establishment, as an experiment, of a sanitarium at Nyounghee or Mount Joy, on the Arracan Hills, for the benefit of the British troops stationed at Thayetmyo. This will be good news to the troops in Burma.

THE HEAD DRESS OF THE MADRAS ARMY.—Having erased the beards, reduced the waist plates of the officers to one dull uniform level, and stript the Staff Corps of their gold lace and distinguishing badges, General McCleverty, the Athenæum observes, now turns to fresh fields and pastures new. These he has found in the turbans of the sepoys. A circular memorandum has, consequently, been sent round to the commandants of the different corps, requiring from them the most minute descriptions as to the style of puggree used in their respective regiments, and asking them, at the same time, for their suggestions as to the adoption of another.—Madras Mail.

MYSORE.—The Madras Mail says that the accounts of the late Maharajah of Mysore have now been nearly all settled. Some 6,000 dependants of that open-handed but deluded Prince have been pensioned off. Some have received full pensions, others half, others gratuities at the rate of one month's pay for each year's service. The gratuities alone amount, it is said, to about two and a-half lakhs, and altogether some six lakhs have been spent on those who were in the service of the Maharajah. The Government of India left the settlement of these accounts to Mr. Bowring and Major Elliott, who have done their work expeditiously and in a manner that appears to have given satisfaction even to the pensioners themselves.

MILITARY.—The 17th Madras Native Infantry, which left Kurrachee under the command of Lieut. Colonel Day, on the 1st December, in the steamer Asia, with the transport Tiverton in tow, reached Beypore on the morning of the 7th. On the evening of the same day the left wing of the corps was disembarked. The right wing was not allowed to land until the following morning, owing to a case of small-pox having occurred on board the Asia. The regiment remained three days at Beypore, and then, under instructions received by the commanding officer, marched to Arcot, a pretty and healthy place, where the corps, it appears, is to remain for about three months. Why the 17th has been ordered to stay so long in Arcot, which is no longer a military station, is not known.

A DEFENCELESS STATION.—The Darjeeling Advertiser says that her Majesty's 58th Regiment, having marched to the Plains, Darjeeling is left for the present in an almost defenceless position. The Bank, Treasury, and private dwellings are in tempting proximity to the barbarous Bhooteas, who recently showed the contempt they entertained for the Government that pay them tribute by murdering Mimba Kazee, and driving two hundred head of cattle from our territory in the true catman style. We are not alarmists, says the writer, nor do we hold the Bhooteas in any estimation as enemies, but we are not exempt from a marauding incursion in our present defenceless state, and it would be no satisfaction for the probable loss of our coin and other valuables if Government punished the marauders hereafter.

NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION.—Measures are now being taken in Madras to promote Native female education in that presidency. The Mail informs us that a meeting was held on the 21st of December, presided over by the Director of Public Instruction, for the purpose of drawing up measures for the inauguration of the Native Female Normal schools which have lately received the sanction of the Supreme Government. The following proposals were agreed to: That the matron should be an Englishwoman, and that scholarships should be forthwith founded. These are to range from Rs. 10 to Rs. 20 per mensem, and the Rajah of Vizianagram has, with his accustomed liberality, promised to sustain five of them, and the native gentlemen present guaranteed ten others. The school is, for the present, to be only for the instruction of caste girls, of whom at least five have promised to attend.

THE BROACH EXHIBITION.

The long-talked of "Exhibition of Industry and Agriculture" was opened at Broach two days before Christmas by H. E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, and is to be closed to-day by the distribution of the prizes and certificates. On the 24th his Excellency, in a very spacious tent in "the Grand Camp," held a levee, and afterwards a high durbar, at which were present, besides H. H. the Guicowar of Baroda, several of the leading Kattywar Thakooors and Nawabs, and a larger number of the Guzerat, Rewa and Mahes Kanta chiefs than have ever before been gathered together. The Exhibition, first promoted by Mr. A. Rogers, Revenue Commissioner of the Division (now in England), has been organised by a very active committee under Mr. T. C. Hope, Collector of Surat, and Mr. Bellasis, Acting Commissioner, which last-named gentleman opened the proceedings in the Exhibition on the 23rd, by reading an address to his Excellency, who replied in a short but cordial and practical speech, which was immediately afterwards interpreted in Guzerati by Mr. Hope, who is very proficient in that vernacular. Beside his Excellency on the dais was the Guicowar of Baroda, this being probably the first time he has "assisted" at any important public ceremony outside his own dominion. Somewhat lower were the Nawab of Joonaghur (one of the most important of the Kattywar chiefs); the Nawab of Sucheen (representative of the Mogul's Admirals); the Rana of Porebunder, the Thakooors of Morsee, Palitana, the heir apparent of Bhownuggur, Drangahura, Rajkote, Limree, and other chiefs of their dewans from Kattywar. There were also the Rajahs of Rajppeepla, Dhurrumpoor, and a score or two chiefs of the Punch Mahals, and the wilder parts of Guzerat. In close proximity to the respective chiefs under their charge were Colonels Barr and W. Anderson, and other leading political officers of the province; and around them other civil and military officers of the Bombay Government, together with a large number of ladies for whom space had been reserved. All named above and many more, including nearly seventy chiefs of high and low degree, were present at the durbar next day, the Guicowar being resplendent with diamonds, he alone being seated on the dais with his Excellency. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald's address on this occasion was spoken more carefully and deliberately than is his wont, and was afterwards interpreted by the Oriental Translator, Mr. Venayek Wassoodew. The durbar, though exceedingly imposing in all its accuracies, became tedious before the close, owing to the protracted time necessarily occupied by his Excellency in receiving the presents from the chiefs, and in the subsequent distribution on his behalf, of garlands and pan soparee. In the forenoon of the day Sir Seymour, in conjunction with Col. Barr and other politicals, had held a long private interview with the Guicowar, the object of which was presumed to be to induce that potentate to amend his ways at home next day in certain particular respects. His Excellency paid a great number of visits to other chiefs before he left at noon for Bombay, where he arrived in time for his Christmas dinner; but it was regretted that his stay was so short, there seldom having been an occasion in this Presidency, and never in its northern division, when such a large number of important chiefs had come to meet her Majesty's representative. The Exhibition has been very numerously attended, and, though not so complete and full a show as that at Akola a year ago, it gave general satisfaction to the people of the province. It is understood to have proved financially successful, but its influence on the commerce and agriculture of the district cannot yet be defined. It was accompanied by various festivities, including a ball for the European visitors, and a grand display of fireworks on the Nerbudda for the delectation of native spectators, all of which contributed to make a very merry Christmas in Guzerat. —Times of India, Jan. 2.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Dec. 21.—No announcement has produced in Sind a deeper sensation of sorrow, or a greater feeling of horror, than that which burst upon us on the morning of Saturday, the 19th inst.—that Arthur Noyelle de Fleurimont had destroyed himself by a shot in his heart from his own hand. The reports afloat as to the circumstances which led him to commit the fatal deed are various and most conflicting; but those who knew him intimately declare that he was much perplexed lately, owing to his inability to pay an amount due to Mr. Ragoonath Krishnajejee; and there is no doubt that the threats of the latter tended to unhinge his mind, and during a paroxysm of insanity he put an end to his life. He was discovered dead in a chair in his bedroom, with a double-barrelled gun by his side, and a slip of paper on his desk with the following words written thereon:—"This is terrible, but it must be.—Write to A. Nelson, Esq., M.D., Canada." Few knew the story of Noyelle de Fleurimont's early life. From what I can gather from various sources, it appears he came to India in the ranks of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, in which step by step he rose to the grade of quartermaster-sergeant. In 1862 he purchased his discharge, and came to Kurrachee to assume the editorship of Our Paper. The able and effective manner in which he conducted this journal soon attracted the attention of the authorities, and an appointment was offered him under Government in the Punjab, but the deceased had no predilection for the "service," and so he gratefully declined it. On the resignation of the editorship of the Sindian by Mr. Jacob, de Fleurimont was prevailed upon to succeed that gentleman. After a time he purchased the paper, and conducted it, unassisted, until he bought the Sind Kossid, the Summachar, and the Imperial presses, as also the journal known as the Sind News. Both the Sindian and Sind News had a wide circulation under de Fleurimont.

POONA, Dec. 25.—As I anticipated, the programme reported to you on Wednesday, as being one which the Earl Mayo and Lord Napier of Magdala would follow out during their brief stay in Poona, was considerably modified. In the first place there was a mistaken impression abroad that Earl Mayo was going to hold the levee yesterday; whereas it was Lord Napier of Magdala, of whom it should have been reported. Earl Mayo, as yet, cannot presumably act in any official capacity; and a levee could, therefore, hardly have been held in his name. But we will begin where the preceding chronicle left off. The distinguished party left the Commander-in-Chief's house on Wednesday afternoon, about four o'clock, and proceeded to inspect the Deccan College, where they were received by Mr. Wordsworth, and the other officials of the college, as well, of course, as also by the whole body of sky blue undergraduates; I mean undergraduates clad in sky blue. They went over the whole building, which, if not triumphantly beautiful, is substantial and convenient, as well as commandingly situated, and inspected the various class-rooms and halls, making many inquiries into the system, &c., which prevailed in the college. From thence they drove to the Engineering College at the Sungum, where a nearly identical ceremony was gone through. On Thursday morning the whole party rode to the Ghorepore barracks, inspected them, thence to the Bund, whence carriages conveyed them to the powder works and other public matters at Kirkee, thence they proceeded to the gaol, and finally home to breakfast. Afterwards Lieut. Buckle (Colonel Fife's first assistant, who has charge of the Khadakooslah works) waited on Earl Mayo to show him the plans, estimates, drawings, &c., of the project, there having been found no time to pay it a personal visit, it being, in fact, a good three and a-half hours' drive there and back. Afterwards, at twelve o'clock, H.E. Lord Napier of Magdala held a levee in the great drawing-room of the Commander-in-Chief's house, which was attended by all the official and civil residents of the two cantonments, as also by several native gentlemen and native officers. It was a very brilliant affair. Brigadier General Raines, C.B., introduced the guests to H.E. Lord Napier, by whose side stood Earl Mayo in plain morning dress, but with the star and ribbon of the Order of St. Patrick on his breast. As each presentee filed by, Lord Napier kindly introduced, in a special manner, those who were his old companions in arms in Abyssinia, many of whom had last seen him in full campaigning costume, of dirt and old clothes at Zoula, and other points on the homeward route in that delightful land. All his old friends say that he is looking remarkably well; not that it demands any tremendous amount of penetration to discover the fact. In the afternoon, at four o'clock, the entire Poona and Kirkee brigades assembled upon the grand parade ground, which people in private life call the race course. The troops present consisted of the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry under Colonel Graves, C.B., H.M.'s 2nd Queen's, under Lieutenant-Colonel Addison, C.B., H.M.'s 7th King's, under Lieut.-Colonel Woods, H.M.'s 96th Regiment, under Lieutenant-Colonel Barnard, H.M.'s 2nd B.N.I., under Lieut.-Colonel Baugh, H.M.'s 23rd B.N.I., under Lieut.-Colonel Waddington, H.M.'s 24th B.N.I., under Lieutenant-Colonel Kemball, two troops of Royal Horse Artillery, and two batteries of Royal Artillery, under Colonel Fuller, R.H.A. In the rear were several Khan Bahadoors, i.e., elephants and camel corps. They were drawn up from the Sholapore road to Ghorepore band-stand, under the command of Brig. General Raines, C.B. The ground was kept by the recruits of the various native corps. There was an immense assembly of people, while the Grand Stand (I do not know why it is called "the grand," seeing that, in the first place, there is no other; and, in the second, that it is not grand); but on Thursday afternoon, if grandeur can be conferred by bright dresses and pretty faces, it was grand enough. Lord Napier and Earl Mayo rode on the ground at 4-40 P.M. The proceedings commenced (and I may here remark that if ever I go into action against overwhelming odds, I trust very much that the battle may be conducted on grand parade principles, which would allow of one's running away at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute with the greatest success). The proceedings, I repeat, commenced by a general salute, during which, followed by a large staff, the two visitors rode down the whole line. Marching past at slow time followed, then the guns and the cavalry went by at the trot; then at a canter (that somehow does not sound professional, although it is perfectly true). Finally, the whole division took up ground to the left, and sternly prepared to do its very extremest.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR JAMES FERGUSON, the newly-appointed Governor of South Australia, was amongst the passengers who arrived at Bombay by last mail steamer, and became the guest of H.E. the Governor at Parell.

MAJOR J. H. HENDERSON.—The Deccan Herald understands that Major J. H. Henderson, Superintendent of Police at Poona, has applied for two years' furlough to Europe under the new regulations, and that he will leave for England by the first steamer in January.

BOMBAY POST-OFFICE.—Major Battye, the Postmaster General of the N.W. Provinces, only recently rejoined from furlough, has been, we are given to understand, transferred to Bombay to succeed Mr. F. R. Hogg in a similar capacity. Mr. Dove will return to us, we suppose; he should at any rate.—Delhi Gazette.

LORD MAYO AT ELEPHANTA.—On Dec. 29th, after the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the University was over, his Excellency the Governor, accompanied Lord Mayo, Sir James Fergusson, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, and others, to Elephanta. A party had proceeded thither in advance, in order to make the preparations that would be necessary for inspecting the sculptures by night. The caves were beautifully lighted with blue lights at the entrance, and the figures were thus brought out splendidly. Dr. Wilson explained the details of the sculptures and their mythological import. The party returned about one o'clock next morning.

MILITARY.—Lieutenant Colonel Westropp, Commandant of the Poona Horse, having in G.G.O. been granted a furlough to England for two years, we hear it is probable that Colonel Loch, 2nd in command of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry, will be appointed commandant of the Poona Horse at Secroor during Colonel Westropp's absence in England. The detachment of the Poona Horse, lately arrived from Jacobabad, and now on escort duty, under the command of Captain C. D. LaTouche, to Lord Mayo in Bombay, will march during the course of the week en route to Secroor to rejoin headquarters.—Poona Observer.

A ZEALOUS ANTIQUARIAN.—For some time it has been known that Mr. George Terry has been engaged in the arduous and dangerous duty of exploring the ruins of an ancient temple at Ambarnat, near Calian. The place proved so unhealthy that several of the natives under his orders were attacked by fever, and Mr. Terry himself was obliged at one time to suspend his labours. But he was buoyed up by his own warm zeal, and he has had the satisfaction, not only of bringing out the beauties and character of the old building, but of discovering an inscription, and sending a copy of it to the Royal Asiatic Society, where it now lies.

THE LATE MAHARAJAH OF EDUR.—We exceedingly regret to hear of the death of his Highness Sir Jowan Singjee, K.C.S.I., Maharajah of Edur, a member of the Bombay Legislative Council. His Highness died on the 26th Dec., we believe of cold contracted during the celebration of the marriage ceremonies of his daughter. The late Rajah was in the prime of life, being only thirty-six years of age, and was one of the most enlightened of the native princes of India. He gave his warm support to the cause of female education, and established a female school at his own capital. Maharajah Jowan Singjee was the son of the late Gumbheer Sing, who, when he felt that his end was approaching, and reflected that his State was in the greatest disorder, made over care of his son to the British Government, rightly judging that this was the only way by which the machinations of his chiefs could be subverted, and the integrity of his son's possessions preserved. The late Sir Jowan Singjee owed much to General Lang for the precepts and example set him in his youth, and this obligation he never forgot.

THE POONA DIVISION.—The following division order has been issued by General Raines, C.B., commanding the Poona Division:—"Brigadier-general Raines, C.B., commanding the division, has received the instructions of his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala, to convey to commanding officers of regiments, and through them to the men of their corps assembled at the review parade on the 24th. the Commander-in-Chief's appreciation of the fine and soldier-like bearing of the troops, and the celerity and steady manner in which the several manœuvres were carried out. The Right Hon. the Earl of Mayo, K.P., was also pleased to express to the Brigadier-general his satisfaction at the martial appearance of the several regiments, and to compliment him on the precision with which the review parade had been conducted and executed by the several brigadiers, and the troops composing the three brigades."

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to nominate the following gentlemen to be Fellows of the University of Bombay:—Atmaram Pandoorung, G.G.M.C.; Bhikajee Amrit Choba, G.G.M.C.; Bellasis, A. SIR JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHAY PARSEE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—The Countess Mayo, with Mrs. Fitzgerald, accompanied by Lord Mayo's aid-de-camp and Captain Maine, Commandant of the Guard, visited the Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Parsee Benevolent Institution on December 24th. On the way to the Fort the Countess called at Mazagon Castle to visit Sir Jamsetjee's family, and also visited the Dowager Lady Awabae, widow of the late Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., at her residence in the Fort. The pupils of the various schools of the institution were assembled on the ground-floor of Sir Jamsetjee's mansion in Hornby-row—the girls, to the number of about six hundred, filling the large hall, and nearly eight hundred boys were seated in the rooms opening from the hall and in the verandah. The distinguished party was received by Sir Jamsetjee, Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee, and other members of the committee. The Countess expressed her interest in the schools, making many inquiries of the principal as to the studies both of the boys and girls, their progress, aptitude for study, &c. She then requested to hear some of them read, and a class of boys was brought forward who read a short piece of prose; a few girls then recited, or rather sung, a piece of Gujarati poetry in praise of her Majesty. The Countess noticed the specimens of Berlin wool work laid on the table and hung about the hall, and was pleased to accept some of them as a memento, as was also Mrs. Fitzgerald. Afterwards the party went up-stairs to visit Mr. Rustomjee's family; and on leaving were heartily cheered by the children.

From Bombay—3 officers, 1 lady and 4 children; 1 staff sergeant and wife, 46 men, 6 women and 5 children—total, 37 officers, 9 ladies and 25 children; 53 staff sergeants and 7 wives; 372 men, 38 women and 68 children. The following are the names of officers:—Officers of the 101st Fusiliers, Col. F. A. Salisbury, C.B., Major E. Brown, wife and 3 children, Major H. E. Delafosse, wife and 4 children, Surg. J. BOMBAY HARBOUR.—Lieutenant-Colonel Trevor, Consulting Engineer for Reclamations, has forwarded to Government a memorandum by Major-General Trementheere, Chief Engineer of Bombay Presidency, in company with a letter from himself, of which we quote the following passage:—"There is no evidence whatsoever that the harbour of Bombay is not as good and as deep an anchorage ground for sea going vessels now as at any former period during the present century. But there is equally little doubt that the construction of the Sion and Chimboor Causeways has led to the formation of a considerable deposit of mud in the angle between the Islands of Bombay and Trombay, and there are reasons for apprehending that the rate of accumulation of mud in this locality will, in future, be accelerated by the great contraction of the channel between the town and Cross Islands that has been caused by the projection of the works of the Elphinstone Land Company. I do not think, however, that the deposit arising from the action of these causes will ever be carried forward to an extent that will, in any appreciable degree, diminish the value of Bombay as a harbour for shipping. But I am ready to admit that persons interested in the wharves and docks on the north of the Malet Bunder are in danger of having the value of their property much lowered by the formation of banks in the portion of the harbour opposite their premises. It seems to me to be doubtful whether this risk of individual loss is a question with which Government are bound to deal. The wharves and docks have, I think, with one exception, been made since the Chimboor and Sion Causeways were constructed, and it would be cheaper for Government to pay compensation for any ancient rights that could be shown to have suffered from the construction of those causeways than to attempt now to remedy the evils that have arisen by a series of works whose expense will be great, and whose action will be uncertain." The Government has answered approvingly on the points discussed by the two engineers.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ALLOWANCES—MILITARY FURLONGHS.

Financial Dept., Fort William, Dec. 14.—No. 3,554.—Read a letter from the officiating deputy accountant general, Bombay, No. 2,167a, dated Nov. 12 last, inquiring with reference to the financial resolution of Oct. 14 last, directing that in calculating the furlough allowances of a military officer on the average salary of the previous three years, all acting allowances should be omitted, whether the order should have prospective effect from the date it was passed.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that the ruling of Oct. 14 was not intended as an alteration, but as an interpretation of a portion of section 5 of the rules for the grant of leave of absence to military officers, published in the G.O. of the military department of June 19 last, and it should therefore affect all cases, whether they occurred before or after the ruling was issued.

AUGMENTATION OF THE PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.

CIVIL SALARIES ON LEAVE.

Dec. 15.—No. 3,571.—The following resolution is published for general information:—

Read papers regarding the conditions under which salaries are drawn in India by officers of the civil department on leave.

Resolution.—Some diversity of practice having arisen as to the conditions under which salary may be drawn in India by officers on leave, the following rules are prescribed in supersession of all others on the subject:—

1. If the officer signs the salary bill himself, he shall, unless he presents the bill personally for payment, attach thereto a life certificate signed by a covenanted civil servant, or an officer exercising magisterial powers.

2. If the salary be drawn through an agent, such agent must be formally authorised in that behalf, and must execute a guarantee to refund over-payments.

3. When the salary bill is drawn, as in the case of ministerial officers, by the head of the department or office, the drawer of the bill will be held primarily responsible for any overcharge, and no other security will be necessary.

No. 3,579.—The following letter to the address of the officiating accountant-general, Bombay, is published for general information:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,065a, of the 3rd ult., inquiring whether the resolution No. 2,703, passed in this department on Sept. 29, applies to uncovenanted servants on salaries of less than Rs. 100 per mensem, and, in reply, to refer you to the order of this department No. 3,420, dated the 2nd ult., which has been published in the Gazette of India, and to state that the spirit of the resolution of Sept. 29 last, as of other leave rules for uncovenanted servants, is applicable to servants on salaries of less than Rs. 100 per mensem.

2. I am desired, however, to add that whenever privilege leave is granted arrangements should, if possible, be made for the performance of the absentee's work without extra charge to the State; because it was by no means intended, when the resolution of Sept. 29 was passed, that on every occasion of an uncovenanted servant being allowed privilege leave, a substitute should be formally appointed to act for him.

OPENING OF THE DELHI RAILWAY.

Fort William, Dec. 3, 1868.

Government of India.—Public Works Department.—Railway.

Delhi Railway.—Official Opening of the Meerut-Umballah Section.

Resolution.—On the 14th ult. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India inaugurated, on the invitation of the agent for the Delhi and Punjab lines of the Scinde Railway Company, the opening of the section of the Delhi Railway between Meerut and Umballa, expected to be in a fit state for public traffic in a few weeks.

2. Attended by the company's officials, the local civil and military authorities, and a large number of the residents of Umballah and others, also by the Maharajah of Puttiala, the Rajahs of Jheend and Nabha and the Nawab of Mulair Kotla, and other Cis-Sutlej chiefs, the Viceroy proceeded by special train to Saharanpore, stopping to inspect the large bridges over the Markunda and Jumna rivers. At Saharanpore the train was met by residents of that station, of Meerut, and of Delhi. After a brief stoppage, his Excellency returned to Umballa, and on arrival was present at a public entertainment given by the agent of the company.

3. The Viceroy availed himself of the occasion to express his satisfaction at the steady progress towards completion of the system of railways undertaken by the Scinde Company, and his appreciation of the labours of those by whom the construction of the Delhi line had been so far and so rapidly advanced.

The Viceroy particularised the agent, Major gen. Saunders Abbott, the chief engineer, Mr. Harrison (on whom for a long time had devolved the arduous and responsible duties of agent), the contractors (especially their able managing partner, Mr. Charles Henfrey), and the Government consulting engineer, Lieut. col. Drummond, of the Royal Engineers.

His Excellency paid a passing tribute to the memory of Mr. Henry Stone, an engineer of repute, who lost his life last year by an accident to the works.

4. It was with peculiar gratification that Sir John Lawrence presided at the official opening of this extension far into the Punjab of the Grand Trunk Railway of Upper India, to the important military station of Umballah; and the prospect which the present state of the works holds out of the early establishment of an unbroken line of iron road, 1,341 miles in length, between Lahore, the capital of that distant frontier province, and the metropolis of the empire on the sea-board, enhanced his Excellency's gratification.

5. The Gov. gen. in Council now desires to record the cordial acknowledgments of the Government of India of the good service rendered to the State by the gentlemen already mentioned, and to add that the persevering and successful labours of the members of their respective staff, though necessarily not particularised, are also fully appreciated.

MEDICAL ALLOWANCES.—CASE OF SURGEON CUTCLIFFE.

Dec. 17.—No. 3,635.—The following resolution is published for general information:—

Read office memorandum from the Home Department, No. 4,248, dated Oct. 23 last, and its enclosure, regarding the allowances of Asst. surg. H. C. Cutcliffe, as the officer in medical charge of the camp of the Lieut. Governor of the N.W.P. from March to Oct., 1867, and as officiating superintendent of the Government Press, and Curator of Government Books in the N.W.P., from July 1 last.

Resolution.—Dr. Cutcliffe is permitted to draw an allowance of Rs. 100 per mensem, in addition to the pay and allowances of his rank, for the period for which he was in charge of the camp of the Hon. the Lieut. gov.

With regard to Dr. Cutcliffe's allowances as Superintendent of the Government Press and Curator of Government Books, from July 1 last, it appears that under the second of the rules contained in the resolution, No. 1,490, passed in this department on the 30th idem, regarding the allowances of military officers acting in civil appointments, the Deputy Accountant General, N.W.P., has passed to Dr. Cutcliffe a subsistence allowance of Rs. 250 per mensem in lieu of the military pay and allowances of his rank, in addition to an acting allowance of 50 per cent. on the salary of the superintendency and curatorship, but that the Government of the N.W.P. doubts the applicability to the case of the resolution of July 30 last, because Dr. Cutcliffe is a medical officer.

As the appointment in which Dr. Cutcliffe was officiating was one which may be held by a medical or by any other military officer, the resolution of July 30 last is certainly applicable to the case; but the Deputy Accountant General has apparently misconstrued the second of the rules recontained in the resolution of July 30 last. The intention of that rule was not to interfere with any military officer's claim to the pay and allowances of his rank, but to restrict the aggregate of his emoluments to the amount which would be drawn as subsistence allowance and acting allowance by a covenanted civil servant of corresponding rank in his position. Under that rule, therefore, Dr. Cutcliffe is entitled to his military pay and allowances, and such an acting allowance as would raise his total emoluments to the aggregate of a subsistence allowance of Rs. 250, and an acting allowance of 50 per cent. on the salary of the offices in which he is officiating; but as the resolution of July 30 last was not intended to reduce the allowances which any officer was drawing at the time of its promulgation, Dr. Cutcliffe is permitted, as Officiating Superintendent and Curator, to draw after June 30 last the allowances he was drawing on that date.

POLICE APPOINTMENTS.—The following assistant superintendents of police are promoted to the 1st grade:—Messrs. B. Rattray, A. H. James, and C. P. Crouch.

Home.

THE NEW PATTERN SHAKO has been issued to the 33rd Regiment at Portsmouth. It is quite possible, from its appearance, that the inhabitants may some morning be startled by a rumour of a French invasion, so nearly does it approach the head-dress of the French line regiments.—Broad Arrow.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The steamer Delta took on the 24th inst. £148,228 in specie for the East. Subjoined are the particulars, viz.: For Galle, gold, £5,000; Madras, gold, £993; Calcutta, silver, £15,400; Hong Kong, silver, £24,635; Shanghai, silver, £7,500; and for Bombay, gold, £14,500, and silver, £80,200.

SOLDIERS' KITS.—Mr. Cardwell, while visiting the camp at Aldershot, some days ago, expressed a wish to examine one of the infantry soldiers' kits. Accordingly, one was laid out for his inspection in a barrack-room, and, having minutely examined it, the Secretary of State is understood to have expressed his opinion that a soldier's kit might be considerably diminished, both in weight and quantity.—Broad Arrow.

RELIEFS FOR INDIA.—We stated last week that the 1st battalion 17th, 66th, 63rd, and 65th Regiments from Ireland, and a battalion from the Mediterranean, would probably form the Indian reliefs for the winter of 1869-70. Some change in this arrangement, however, has been made. The 39th Regiment, which was to have gone out next month, will now remain in Ireland till the autumn, owing to the dislocation of the transport service on this side of Egypt, caused by the breakdown of the Crocodile, and the 59th Regiment, from Ceylon, will probably complete the strength of the Bombay Presidency if required. The 39th will then head the list of regiments to be sent out next winter. The 1st battalion 17th and 66th will follow, but, instead of the 63rd and 65th completing the batch, these regiments will remain at home, and the 89th, from Ireland, and 83rd from Gibraltar, will go to Bombay—the last named regiment being relieved at the Rock by the 81st from Ireland.—Army and Navy Gazette.

A SELF-ACTING PUNKAH.—The services of the punkah-wallah, whose manual work in the barracks, hospitals, and private dwellings of India is often unsatisfactory as well as dear, will soon be superseded by a very ingenious piece of machinery, the invention of Lieutenant Turnbull, of the 6th Royals. This apparatus was on Thursday shown at the United Service Institution, and was approved by several distinguished Indian officers, as well as by the engineers, civil and military, who saw it in operation. The mechanism is simple even to elegance, and its perfect noiselessness will be one of its chief recommendations, the faint ripple of the linen punkah being heard amid the profound silence of the wheels that move it to and fro. A lead weight turning a horizontal shaft gives the desired motion to a slender fly-wheel with four spokes, a slight jerk of the punkah being caused at each revolution by the plan of making one spoke heavier, at the end next the nave, than either of the other three. This peculiar action imitates with admirable nicety of effect the movement of the wrist when the punkah is worked by an attendant. There are 12,000 revolutions of the fly-wheel, and consequently as many forward pulls of the fan, in eight hours; and this statement will exemplify the great saving of manual labour which the machine accomplishes. It is said, on the authority of a general officer, that the cost of such labour for a month has been, in the case of one regiment, more than a hundred pounds. Portability is another of the valuable qualities of Mr. Turnbull's apparatus, which, being taken to pieces, will fit into a shallow box two feet square. Heat vying with that of the tropics is not unknown even in this country, and the adaptation of the self-acting punkah to the wards of our home infirmaries would be no bad idea.

THE 39TH REGIMENT.—A correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette writes:—"This regiment, having been ordered to embark for India in February, and all arrangements having been made, such as supplying the men with sea kits, sending out heavy baggage by long sea round the Cape, &c., has suddenly been informed that their departure will not take place till October. The reason of this alteration is not apparent, as the regiment would have arrived in Bombay in March, whence it was to have proceeded to Poona, only seven hours by rail, so that it would not have been exposed to any great amount of heat, and the order for October shows that the authorities do not intend to commence the reliefs any earlier next year. It can hardly be for economy that a regiment of the Indian strength—1,000 strong—is retained on the home establishment, although it is said that the cause is the dislike of the Indian Government to pay for a second voyage of the Adelia in place of the Crocodile, to counterbalance which saving a little money will probably be expended at home by moving the regiment from Fernoy, where they have been concentrated about two months, near their port of embarkation, to the Curragh, where they will be further off. The hardship and inconvenience to all under the new arrangements is excessive, as all the officers have provided themselves with Indian outfits, and some have already got rid of their home kits, which must be repurchased at a great loss. Worst of all, a large number of the men, greatly in excess of the home establishment, have married, on the strength of the increased allowances in India and the larger number allowed to be borne on the strength there, and how they will manage it is hard to say, as there is no room in barracks for them, they are not entitled to lodging money, and the men's washing will not go far in support of the increased number. I trust these considerations will induce the authorities to change the present arrangement."

THE CONSPIRACY AGAINST SIR JUNG BAHADOOR.—(From a letter addressed to Colonel W. H. Sykes, M.P., dated Nepal, July 20, 1868.)—The following narrative is from the pen of a gentleman resident in Nepal, enjoying the confidence of Sir Jung Bahadoor, the de facto ruler of Nepal:—

You have desired me to write an account of my reminiscences of Nepal. I presume you refer to the treatment of the parties that conspired against the Maharajah while he was in England. The facts of the case are as follows:—Jung Bahadoor is one of a family of seven brothers, and when he went to England about twenty years ago, accompanied by the youngest two, he left his second brother, General Beem Bahadoor, as his locum tenens, and the third, General Budri Nur Singh, as commander-in-chief. The latter is a man of a restless and grasping disposition, and he determined to undermine Sir Jung's power while he was away. To effect this he circulated the most malicious reports of his doings in England; the younger brother of the King of Nepal, and a cousin of the Maharajah, were his confederates, and they made use of Kazeo Kurbher Khutree as a tool. This old man was one of Sir Jung's suite in England, and he said that the Maharajah had put his caste in his pocket, and had eaten beef and drunk wine. Sir Jung was unconscious of the plot maturing against him, and on his return to Katmandoo he received his brother and cousin with all affection and favour. The conspirators were sorely disappointed at his safe return, for they had placed assassins on the road by which he was to have passed, but he took another road, very providentially, and thus escaped. The conspirators then took the second brother, General Beem Bahadoor, into their counsels, and proposed to him that the King and Sir Jung should be murdered, and the younger brother of the former be placed on the throne, with General Beem Bahadoor as his minister. To this the latter feigned compliance, and when the plot was matured informed the Maharajah of it. The day following General Budri Nur Singh was to have shot Sir Jung at a private interview. The Maharajah ordered the houses of the conspirators to be surrounded at dead of night and themselves apprehended. This was done, and the men taken to the King's palace in irons; the "Assembly" was sounded, and the officers and troops were under arms at the palace, where a council of the chief officers of the State, presided over by the King, condemned the prisoners to have their eyes put out. To this Sir Jung would not consent, declaring that torture was a relic of barbarism. He recommended that the men should be expelled from the country; and, to prevent their being able to do any further mischief, that an application be made to the Indian Government, through the resident in Nepal, to have them incarcerated as State prisoners for life at the fort in Allahabad, the durbar providing for their maintenance. This was done, and the three chiefs were sent to Allahabad, where they remained in durance for five years; but the Maharajah's cousin dying in the fort, he interceded with the King, and had the other two released. The brother of the King returned to Katmandoo, where he was treated as though nothing had happened, and General Budri Nur Singh was appointed governor of the western provinces of Nepal, with a yearly salary of Rs. 40,000. Both of these men are alive and well. With regard to the old Kazeo, who was reported to have suffered death, the only punishment he received was a fine of Rs. 5,000, and compulsory loss of caste; but this latter punishment was commuted, and he was permitted to go to Benares and purify himself. When the conspirators were being tried at the Assembly, Sir Jung turned round to the Kazeo, and said, "I have nourished this snake in my bosom, and he has tried to destroy me. He placed my life in imminent peril, and by the laws of the country he has forfeited his own, and should suffer confiscation of his property. He justly merits this fate, but with the reminiscences of England fresh in my memory I will not allow him to suffer thus. He is an old man, and I shall have a regard for his years, and not condemn his family to servitude." The Kazeo's son was present, and he (Jung Bahadoor) ordered him to go to Calcutta as the Nepalese representative. "Go," he said, "and learn what the English are, and give your father and your friends the benefit of your experience." This young man was appointed to the post of representative from Nepal with the Governor-general on a salary of 10,000 rupees a-year, and for many years held the appointment with great credit. He subsequently became a colonel in the army, and was present with the Goorkha force at the taking of Lucknow. The old Kazeo, after a short stay at Benares, returned to Katmandoo, and was pensioned off with an allowance of 6,000 rupees a-year. He was here till June, 1867, when he made another visit to Benares, and died in August last, at the age of 72. Such are the facts of the case. The death of the Maharajah's cousin, in the fifth year of his imprisonment, has evidently given rise to the report so unjust to the Maharajah, and he directs me to say that he will be very grateful if you contradict it, as I told him you did.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

INDIAN SERVICE.

The Army and Navy Gazette refers to the impression which appears to prevail that, among the new schemes of the Government, will be one to favour a shorter term of enlistment by keeping a certain number of infantry battalions always at home and a certain number in effect localised—in short, never relieved—in India. This would have a very beneficial effect in easing the relief, and we do not think there will be any serious practical difficulty in carrying out such a plan. We have now, or we very soon shall have, fifty-two battalions at home, as against fifty-two in India and thirty-seven in the colonies; or eighty-nine altogether abroad. The colonial strength will, no doubt, be speedily reduced by five or six battalions, and if we put eighty-five as the number of battalions to be provided for we shall not err on the wrong side. Now, if we took the twenty-five double-battalion regiments, kept one battalion of each always at home in time of peace in a high state of efficiency in the event of war, leaving the other battalions always in India, we should have only sixty battalions abroad to provide for in the way of ordinary relief. For this purpose we should have thirty battalions at home on the roster for service to provide for the due return home after ten years of twenty-seven battalions in India and thirty-three in the colonies. Our infantry strength would thus be made up—at home, twenty-five first battalions not liable to foreign service except in war time, and thirty battalions liable to serve in India and the colonies, or fifty-five in all; abroad, twenty-five second battalions not entitled to relief, and twenty-seven to be relieved in India, or fifty-two altogether, and thirty-three entitled to relief in the colonies.

CAPTAIN CAMERON.

The Pall Mall Gazette is sorry to hear that Capt. Cameron is still suffering from the effects of his prolonged imprisonment in Abyssinia. The misery, privations, and anxiety of a captivity of more than four years, a considerable portion of which was passed in heavy chains, have completely shattered his originally vigorous and robust constitution. Two doctors who have recently examined his condition—Dr. Blanc, his fellow-prisoner at Magdala, and Dr. Walker, of Reading, who has attended him since his return to England—agree, we understand, in the opinion that at the best he cannot hope to resume active employment of any kind for some considerable time to come, and that there is reason to fear he will be permanently disabled. Under these circumstances, Captain Cameron has certainly a strong claim to the consideration of his countrymen, on whose behalf he suffered. The small pension assigned to him is only what he would have been entitled to after so many years of official service; and, consequently, no reparation has been made to him by the Government for the peculiar misfortunes which befell him during his consulship. The papers laid before Parliament clearly show that it was in his official capacity, as the representative of a Power by whom Theodore conceived himself to have been ill-used, that he was persecuted by that monarch, and although we are all agreed now that he should never have been found "in that galley" at all, it is only fair to remember that this was not his fault. He went up from Massowah to Abyssinia because his instructions prescribed the study of current Abyssinian history on the spot, and if he is to blame for anything, it is for having been too keen and zealous in discharging this duty. The whole business has, no doubt, been very troublesome and costly for us all. We have a long bill yet to pay, but, on the whole, we have escaped from what seemed at one time a very serious difficulty on much more easy terms than was ever expected; and there is, therefore, a strong reason why we should be not merely just, but generous to those who were the victims of a mistaken policy on our part and of the lawless ferocity of a savage prince, with whom we ought never to have had anything to do. Captain Cameron is clearly entitled to compensation both for his past sufferings and his present helplessness, and this compensation ought surely to be reckoned distinct from the usual pensions granted under ordinary circumstances for consular services of a certain duration. His memorial to the Foreign Office is at least entitled to sympathetic consideration.

CLAYTON, SHUTTLEWORTH, and Co. are NOW PREPARED to DELIVER PORTABLE ENGINES of MOST SIZES on RECEIPT of ORDERS.

CLAYTON, SHUTTLEWORTH, & Co.

At the Triennial Trials of the ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND, held at Bury St. Edmunds, July, 1867, received the following Awards:—

For Single Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Double Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Horizontal Cylinder Fixed Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £20.

For Double Blast Finishing Threshing Machine, THE PRIZE OF £15.

ALSO

The SOCIETY'S SILVER MEDAL for ADJUSTING BLOCKS for MACHINES.

The duty performed by all C. S. and Co.'s Engines on this occasion considerably exceeded that of any others. C. S. and Co. refer with pleasure to the fact that the duty of their "Commercial" or single valve Engine at Chester, so long ago as 1859, was not equalled by any "ordinary" Engine at Bury.

LINCOLN, AND, 78, LOMBARD-STREET, LONDON.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Indisputable remedies for bad legs, old wounds, sores, and ulcers, if used according to the directions given with them. There is no wound, bad leg, ulcerous sore, or bad breast, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Numbers of persons who have been patients in several of the large hospitals, and under the care of eminent surgeons, without deriving the slightest benefit, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin, there is no medicine that can be used with so good an effect. In fact, for removing the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, the medicaments are irresistible.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

CHLORODYNE

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, 1864. from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINI-MENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMA-
TISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CON-
TUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS,
&c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal cough, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPA-RILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

"INDIAN BAEL," for Diarrhoea, Dysentery, &c. Imported by J. G. GOULD, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 193, Oxford-street, corner of Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body.
It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.
TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guarantee

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FO
ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being so and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection
impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Den-

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228,

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.

It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d.,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 9; Agra and Calcutta, January 5; Madras, January 4.

Lord Mayo reached Bypore on New Year's day, and Madras on the evening of the day following, in company with Lord Napier (not of Magdala), who had gone to meet him at Bypore. The Viceroy elect and his lady were welcomed at the terminus by the chief officials of the place and the two sons of the Nawab of Arcot. Their subsequent progress under triumphal arches, along crowded streets, made gay with lines of troops, was all that his lordship's well-wishers could desire. Believers in omens might have been gratified with what happened as Lord Mayo passed by the statue of Sir Thomas Munro. "A glorious rainbow," says the Madras Times, "shot across the sky and formed a triumphal arch across the head of the Viceroy elect." An obstinate croaker however might read the omen his own way, on the plea that rainbows sometimes indicate bad weather.

FOR all their enthusiasm the Madrassies were not all violently taken with Lord Mayo's outer man. "He is portly"—says the Athenæum—"and has a good general appearance, but by the side of Lord Napier he does not show off to advantage; he lacks many things which people fancy should belong to a representative of the Queen in India." What things, and in whose opinion? We are glad however to find that Madras has a Governor whose attractions are not to be eclipsed by the presence of so illustrious a visitor.

LORD MAYO at Madras, as at Bombay, declined to hold a public levée, in view of the respect due to the still reigning Viceroy, Sir J. Lawrence. But he declared himself ready to receive any number of private visits, and no doubt made good use of the four days that came between his arrival and departure. On the 7th Lord Mayo and his party proceeded in the Feroze to Calcutta.

THE famine, as usual, fills a prominent place in the Indian journals. From the North-West and the Punjab tidings come of a more hopeful nature. Thirty thousand head of cattle have died near Delhi, and distress is great in Jhansie and Lullutpore; but rain has been falling heavily in some, and slightly in other districts, and the prospects of a fair rubbee crop have therefore much improved. In Gwalior and Central India there is much grain stored, though prices have risen greatly. If rain would only fall there, the worst of the crisis would be soon over. The local Government in the North-West has appealed for aid from private charity, to be backed up by an equal share of public co-operation. The Supreme Government however declines to stickle about fixed proportions. It avows "its own full responsibility for the support of the really helpless," and insists that no expense shall be spared by the local Government for the prevention of suffering, even though in some cases the aid so given "may be wasted on those for whom it was not primarily intended." Relief works on a large scale have been set on foot throughout the North-West, the Engineers being absolved for the time from the duty of cutting their estimates as close as possible.

FROM Marwar and Rajpootana scores of emigrants are daily crossing over into Sindh and Guzerat. The work devolved on the officials in aiding the passage of these poor people and looking after the sick and aged is necessarily far from light. No epidemic however has yet broken out; but beyond the British border crime is said to be increasing, so that in some places a man's life is reckoned to be worth a seer of flour.

THE Broach Exhibition was closed on the 2nd of January. With regard to the show of cotton much disappointment seems to have been felt. Owing to the time of year, no samples of this season's growth were to be found. On the other hand, there was no lack of samples from last year's crop as supplied by all the surrounding districts. One sample grown by the Governor himself in Sholapore was "quite equal to any specimen of native cotton produced." Of wools and vegetable fibres there was a great deficiency, and but one sample of the China or Kangra grass. Of machinery the display was not bad, and in silver-work and carved woods the Exhibition was rich enough. There was a full collection of oils and aromatics, contributed by a native doctor at Broach, and a still larger one of seeds, roots, and grains, sent in by the civil surgeon of Ahmedabad. A very good loan Exhibition of models, machines, pictures, photographs, and manufactures was opened at Kurra-chee on the 24th December.

THE Bengal Chamber of Commerce has been writing to the Bengal Government on the subject of the present famine. In view of the growing distress, it wants to know whether the time has come for a call on the private charity of Calcutta; considers that, if so, "a movement with that object should be initiated by Government," the Committee helping to the best of their power; and suggests the publishing of full and trustworthy information from month to month, on "the probable outturn as compared with the average of the crops" in the most suffering parts of the North-West Provinces. In reply, the Lieutenant-governor promises to consult the Governor-general in Council on the subject, hopes that it may not become necessary to appeal to the public in respects of the districts named, but states that in some parts of Behar the increasing distress has already led to the employing of sufferers on relief works, and to the raising of subscriptions by native gentlemen for the benefit of the weak and aged. Charity, hints the Lieutenant-governor, may as well begin nearer home than the North-West. The final answer from the Supreme Government has not yet been published.

THE Indian Government has made a move for which the press may or may not have to feel grateful, according to the way in which the move is followed up. Deeming the maintenance of a "well-regulated system" of publishing official documents in the newspapers a desirable thing both for the Government and the public, it has ordained that in each department one or two clerks shall be told off at Rs. 50 each, to "prepare daily, or as occasion may arise, a precis of intelligence for the press." Copies thereof will be sent with all practicable despatch to the various editors, due regard being had to the "prior necessity of the prompt issue" of its orders by the Government itself. This looks a large concession, but it may mean nothing more than a cheap show of liberality without the substance. Everything depends upon the kind of information thus placed at the disposal of the press. "Reti-cence"—fears the Indian Daily News—"is too deeply ingrained in Indian officialism to admit of a liberal working" of a measure which at first sight seems so reasonable.

WHILE the Bengal Government makes so little progress in its dealings with the wild tribes of Chittagong and Assam, one of Colonel Fyfe's subalterns, Mr. Davis, has succeeded in delivering the Arakan Frontier from the inroads of lawless neighbours. By means of a large police force he encouraged our native tributaries on the Upper Koladan, and frightened the Khong and Koontso tribes into sending in their chiefs and releasing the captives of their many raids. No black-mail is paid to the wild tribes of Arakan, in whose neighbourhood Mr. Davis has established a large bazaar. These hill-tribes are not Buddhists. Without idols or a regular priesthood, they retain the old worship of the spirits of the woods, and hills, and streams. Like the Paharries further north, they are described as frank, truthful, and hospitable. Their languages are all unwritten.

NEWS from the Andaman Isles comes but seldom and interests few. We may note here however that three hundred Berberie sheep have been imported thither from Aden for breeding purposes. All attempts in that direction have hitherto failed, but this one is "expected" to answer. We hope it will.

THE planters and ryots of Tirhoot are once more at issue on the old question, Indigo. The old discontent "threatens to break out with renewed violence this year." It is the old story of masters and workmen disagreeing about the value of their several shares in the results attained. In the present case even the Englishman allows that the ryots "have felt seriously the pressure, caused by the large extension of indigo cultivation during the last few years," and suggests the wisdom of some concession to their demands, in the shape of land rather than money.

ACCORDING to a telegram received last Saturday, Sir Richard Temple expects a surplus of £200,000 from his coming budget.

OTHER telegrams mention a sad accident on the Bhoire Gaut incline of the Central India Railway. It was misty; the wheels would not bite; and the train ran away, dashing against a wall at the end of the reversing station. Fourteen native passengers were killed and more than thirty wounded. An inquiry will, of course, take place.

WE are informed that H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh will reach Calcutta in the course of his present cruise about the 10th December next. The officer destined for the honour of attending him during his stay in India will most likely be Sir Neville Chamberlain, who is now in Europe on leave. All old Indians will hail the offer of the appointment to such a man as no more than a fitting tribute to one of the most deserving and hitherto worst rewarded of Indian worthies. Sir N. Chamberlain's modesty has always stood in the way of the public recognition due to his many signal services on the Punjab Frontier, before Delhi, and during the Sittana campaign. Perhaps his turn of luck may be coming now.

WE understand that Colonel Harley Maxwell, of the Royal Engineers, an officer well known for his energetic services in India, retires from the 31st December, 1868. This promotes Lieut.-Colonel Edward John Lake, C.S.I., late Financial Commissioner of the Punjab.

It has often been suggested that our British regiments in India should, as far as possible, be cantoned in the hills; and the Daily News has lately repeated the suggestion. The arguments in its favour lie on the surface. The hills are healthier for white men than the plains. There would be an immense saving of life and money consequent on the keeping of our soldiers in the healthier climate. With the recent growth of railways British troops could be brought down from the hills at very short notice, in the highest state of efficiency, to any point in the plains. Such an arrangement, let us add, would help to make Indian service more popular among officers than it is now. There is no use in blinking the unpleasant fact that officers of regiments ordered out to India will not, if they can help it, go out to so ill-famed a place of exile. They dread the heat, the diseases, the distance from home, the absence of all their wonted recreations. Those officers who do go out to India are slow to qualify themselves for the Staff Corps, and so cut themselves off from all the agreeable possibilities connected with service in the British army. This being the case, would it not be as well to try and make Indian service a little more popular by turning to better account the capabilities of the Indian hill-ranges as stations for the great bulk of our European garrison? The Sanitary Commission long ago recommended the quartering of at least a third of that garrison in healthy hill-stations. Sir John Lawrence seems to have been of a like opinion. But the military authorities, from Lord Strathnairn down to Colonel Norman, could not see their way to so large a transfer of troops from commanding places in the plains, some of which were declared to be as healthy as Dugshai and Sabathoo, while others were deemed indispensable for strategic purposes. And thus it happens that only twelve per cent. of the British forces have hitherto been stationed in the hills. To our thinking such a proportion is much too small for present needs, in a country intersected with pleasant ranges of hills that afford every variety of climate and position. Places like Allahabad and Mooltan would still have to be held by European garrisons, and it may still be prudent to keep a few British troops within easy reach of the Deccan and other independent States. But when railways shall have linked the hill-ranges with all the great centres of native life, it will hardly be necessary to tell off regiments here and there for the purpose of watching cities like Lahore, Agra, or Benares. With the bulk of our troops massed in hill stations for the chief part of the year, and camps of exercise formed in the plains during some part of the cold weather, there would be all the less reason for keeping up our English army of occupation at its present strength. Why, too, in stations on the coast or beside great rivers, should not the regulars be replaced by marines?

THE discovery of the Timour MSS. mentioned in the papers happened some months ago. They seem to have been sent home from Beejapore some forty years before Dr. Hall found out their true value, which is undoubtedly great. Most of the MSS. are in Arabic.

THE British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company have just issued their prospectus of a scheme for connecting England with India by means of a cable from Suez to Bombay. The main particulars will be found in another page. We shall be glad to see an undertaking for which Government aid has so long been asked in vain, carried out successfully by a private company. Under right conditions it ought to answer in the long run; but shareholders needing quick and regular returns must remember that hitherto undertakings of this kind have not reaped the commercial success they seemed to merit. One element of success, low charges, naturally wars with the hope of early profits. The experiment however is worth the making for many reasons.

THE NEW FORM OF THUGGEE.

THE practice of Thuggee, which at one time seemed to have virtually died out, has once more turned up again with a new face. Instead of strangling, the votaries of Bowani have taken to poisoning their victims. The rumal of other days has been replaced by the more refined datura. Poisoning, indeed, was not unknown in the days when Sleeman laboured for the suppression of Thuggee; but it remained for a new generation of Thugs to exchange the coarser processes of yore for one that might be applied with comparatively small risk of discovery. According to competent judges the former preference for strangling was due in the main to a stricter observance of caste rules among travellers, as betrayed in their unwillingness to accept food at the hands of strangers. Be that as it may, the fact remains that for some years past a good many people have been poisoned to death by bands of robbers carrying out their murderous intent under the guise of religion or hospitality. On one occasion the servant of a Jain priest at Bhagulpore plots with a well-known Thug leader to poison his master with the view of carrying off the accumulated treasures of a popular shrine. Our English robbers have a wholesome fear of adding murder to felony, but in India the two crimes continually go together. In this case the plotters present their offering of sweetmeats at the idol's shrine. The priest, according to custom, would divide the offering between himself and the worshippers, but the latter politely request him to make over their share of the feast to his own servants. What follows can easily be guessed. The priest and his followers eat and fall into a lethargy. The former is forthwith strangled, and the latter awake at last to find the temple ransacked of its treasures, and their master's body at the bottom of a well.

At another time the victims are a poor woman and her daughter on their way home from Mecca. Passing through Jaunpore they fall in with a fellow-traveller, who gives the mother a portion of his own meal and treats the daughter to a smoke from his "chillum." When both are insensible, the Thug helps himself to the few rupees he can find about them and disappears, serenely careless of their fate. The poor mother died from the poison mixed with her food, and the police could find no traces of the murderer. This seems to be the commonest mode of dealing with the intended victims. The robber joins himself to one or more unsuspecting travellers, and persuades them sooner or later to accept his fatal present.

One poor native declined the proffer of a smoke from the hookah of a stranger sitting beside a well. At the next halting-place the same man offered him a drink from his own vessel, which was also refused. But the stranger's importunity was not to be baffled, and his new friend finally accepted a piece of goor from the hands that were longing to ease him of a gold chain and earrings to match. Luckily for him they were too near a village when the poison had done its work, and he escaped alive with the loss of his precious trinkets. Scenes like these are said to be continually recurring throughout Hindostan. The police as a rule have signally failed in hunting out the criminals. It is even asserted that in many cases the failure arises from their own complicity with the ruffians they are set to look after. Even the more zealous among them perversely set their faces against the co-operation of other departments, such as that for the suppression of Thuggee and Dacoity. Government also is said indirectly to hamper the feet of justice by its unwillingness to make use of criminals for the discovery and repression of crime. It will have nothing to do, if possible, with approvers, and practically disowns the principle of setting a thief to catch a thief. That the crime of "administering drugs" has increased and needs diminishing seems to be confirmed by the returns lately received from the North-West and Central Provinces. In the former we find fifty-five cases of robbery by means of poison last year, against fifty the year before. The latter shows eleven cases of drugging in 1867, against nine in 1866, and three in 1864.

EARLY INDIAN ARCHITECTURE.

SPECULATION on primeval forms of worship must long continue to be as much a matter of guesswork as speculation on the races of men that peopled the world in the days before fable began to wear the shape of history. No ethnological Owen has yet made much progress in piecing out the skeleton of those dim forgotten ages. Whence came the Basques of Spain? Were the Pelasgi a Celtic, or a Turanian race? What sort of people built Stonehenge? Do the non-Aryan races of India all belong to the Turanian type? How came Serpent-Worship to prevail among the Semitic races of Judaea? Scores of such questions remain to answer with anything like certain knowledge. Meanwhile however not a few earnest students are exploring these twilight regions, and amassing facts which may hereafter be generalised to good purpose. In India, for instance, Mr. Hunter is doing for the non-Aryan races what Bopp and Max-Müller have already done for the Aryan all over the world. And working from another starting-point, Mr. James Fergusson has just been throwing a flood of strange light over the architectural monuments of the people whose origin Mr. Hunter seeks to decipher through the lenses of comparative philology.*

We need not dwell on Mr. Fergusson's claims to speak with authority on all points connected with that art to which he has devoted a lifetime of hard labour. His great "History of Architecture" every one knows—at least by name. Students of Indian art must have reaped both profit and pleasure from his work on the Jain Temples of Western India. In the present volume—a magnificent monogram on the sculptures of two great Buddhist "Topes" at Sanchi and Amravati—the same writer has been aided by the liberality of the India Office in producing a work rich in antiquarian lore, and massive with photographic illustrations of two rare and characteristic monuments of Indian art. Out of nearly a hundred plates there is hardly one technically imperfect, and not one which the reader interested in such things would willingly pass over. Even they who know nothing about "topes," and "dagobas," and five-headed Nagas, and care little for the true meaning of any particular illustration, will be struck with the quaint beauty, the marvellous wealth of ornamentation, the rare efflorescence of exquisitely-carved details, visible in most of the plates. No * "Tree and Serpent Worship: or, Illustrations of Mythology and Art in India in the First and Fourth Centuries after Christ." By James Fergusson, F.R.S., M.R.A.S. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1868.

Greek frieze was ever fretted with such a crowd of figures as those which cover every inch of the strange, gridiron-like gateways at Sanchi. These marvels of minute, yet effective carving, suggest at first sight a greatly magnified edition of the carved ivory boxes and card-cases wrought by Indian and Chinese artificers. Time and chance have sometimes effaced the sharp outlines, or broken off whole fragments of the stonework; but enough remains to show us what sort of artisans they were who could chisel so freely, with so true an eye and a taste so appreciable, the stone pictures here reproduced. These sculptures seem to come midway between Greek and Egyptian art; they are less conventional than the latter, and less classically correct than the former. Here and there indeed are figures, and even whole scenes, which, for easy grace of attitude and truth of outline, might have done no discredit to Greece herself. Often, too, we come upon pillars and capitals and arches that might have been designed by Norman or old English architects. Other of the sculptures are more grotesque, reminding one now of Egyptian, now of early Italian art. In the main however these samples of Indian workmanship betray no doubtful evidences of artistic feeling and plastic power, whether in the grouping of figures or the treatment of details.

The history of these photographs is interesting. Some of the sculptures from which they were taken had lain in the India Museum at Fife-house ever since 1820, when Colonel Mackenzie first sent them home. Twenty-five years later a large collection of marbles from the same monument at Amravati were sent down to Madras by Sir Walter Elliot, then Commissioner of Guntoor. After lying for ten years exposed to wind and rain, they were finally brought to England, and stored, for want of room, in the coach-houses of the India Museum. A few of these were sent off bodily to Paris for the Exhibition of 1867. Select specimens of both sets were photographed for the present work, of which they form the latter half. For the earlier portion, illustrating the Sanchi Tope, Mr. Fergusson was indebted to "a beautiful set of drawings made in 1854 by Lieutenant Colonel Maisey," and to a set of photographs of the same monument supplied by Lieutenant Waterhouse, R.A. These have been made the text for a brief yet sufficient running commentary, prefaced by a thoughtful dissertation on the Tree and Serpent Worship of olden days.

In this introduction the author takes a survey of all the countries in which traces of that primeval worship seem to have been found. In Egypt it prevailed only as one among many forms of worship. Judæa practised it more or less generally until the age of Hezekiah. From Greece it began to pass away with the return of the Heraclids. Rome adopted it for a time from Etruria. Germany, guiltless of Snake-worship, confined herself to adoring Trees. Scandinavia on the contrary long cherished both forms of superstition. Among the Slaves of Eastern Europe they flourished far into the Middle Ages. The Celts in Gaul and Britain seem to have worshipped trees only. In Scotland however the traces of Serpent worship are to be found on the sculptured stones of the Eastern coast, north of the Forth. May we venture to add that the story of St. Patrick driving all the snakes out of Ireland most likely implies the prevalence of Snake-worship in the Green Isle before its conversion to Christianity, just as Hercules strangling the snakes points to a like war of creeds in Greece?

In most parts of Asia and Africa Mr. Fergusson finds traces of the same superstition, always coincident, he avers, with human sacrifices. But he insists that the worship, however common among Aryan and Semitic races, was essentially a monster of Turanian birth, engendered probably by "the mud of the Lower Euphrates, among a people of Turanian origin," and spreading thence "to every country of the Old World in which a Turanian people settled." What the Lower Euphrates has to do with aught Turanian, we cannot tell, any more than we can take for granted the Turanian—that is, Mongolic—descent of the Pelasgi or the Etruscans. Nor does it seem at all clear that Serpent-worship sprang from one source only, and that a Turanian source, however readily we may allow that the aboriginal Khonds and Bheels, and other Indian tribes of Turanian origin are given to that worship even in the present day. That India was once the scene of a wide-spread belief in the divinity of serpents no one can doubt who has read Miss Frere's "Old Deccan Days," in which the Snake plays as prominent a part as the Fairy does in a book of nursery legends.

As filling a gap in the history of Indian architecture, the great Buddhist monuments of Sanchi and Amravati are well worth the study bestowed on them by Mr. Fergusson. From the Great Tope of Sanchi, built in the first century of the Christian era, dates the vigorous outgrowth of stone architecture in India. Before that time wood alone had been used for building, and some of the stonework at Sanchi bears witness to the workmen's inexperience of the new material. Thenceforth the new style of architecture, borrowed in part from Greece by way of Bactria, grew in beauty and distinctive force on to the day when the last of the structures surrounding the Tope of Amravati was finished, about the middle of the sixth century. After that date the progress of Indian architecture is represented by the Jain temples and the rock-cut Caves, until with the decline of Buddhism the art which sprang from it declines also, and the glory of the Hindu temple dies out before the development of the Mohammedan mosque.

The sculptures reproduced in this splendid volume, with the able co-operation of Dr. Forbes Watson, of the India Museum, teem with illustrations of the tree and serpent-worship described in the text. At Sanchi the worship of trees seems most in favour, for on the Eastern Gateway of the Tope we find all the beasts of the field doing homage to the Sacred Tree, and at the head of these strange worshippers walks the five-headed Naga himself, as chief of the serpent kind. At Amravati however the serpent reigns supreme, though tree-worship has by no means gone out of fashion. His serpentine majesty, the Naga, is here continually to be seen spreading his seven-headed hood over Rajahs and Ranies and the august Buddha himself. But these fine sculptures are much more than a mere hand-book of an old-world superstition. To those who would study them by the light of Mr. Fergusson's excellent commentary they furnish a full and faithful picture of life and manners in Southern India during the height of the Buddhist reaction from the old Vedantic philosophy.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I saw in your paper some time ago that officers of the Indian Army were going to petition Parliament about the Bonus Compensation grievance; can you or any of your readers inform me whether the petitioning about to take place is confined to those officers who have already retired, and whose grievances (setting forth the miserably small sums allowed them by the Indian Compensation Committees) have been ventilated in your columns? Or is the matter really going to be brought before Parliament? From the representations of officers about their claims being ignored and curtailed, it would be a boon were a fixed sum allowed, even 10 per cent. of what but for the amalgamation he could have got. But those palmy days for retiring are gone, when a major could sometimes get £4,000 as a bonus and his pension. As things are at present officers cannot retire, and do not retire; but it is the interest of Government to supply the inducement to retirement lacking by the extinction of the bonus system. I do not suppose that Government will ever part with hard cash to give a bonus; but they might induce a number of officers to retire by shortening the periods of service for pensions. For instance, let a Staff Corps captain of fifteen years' service be allowed to retire on a major's pension, a major in the Staff Corps be allowed to retire on a lieutenant-colonel's pension, a lieutenant-colonel on a colonel's pension, and a brevet-colonel on £600 a-year. If Government would only try this plan they would effect a great saving by getting rid of a number of officers (doing duty at stations) who are not wanted, and who are unwillingly a drag on the revenues of the country. Then we shall, I believe, before long, see young officers (who did not join the Staff Corps) get their lieutenant-colonelcies after a service of fourteen years, or even less. To induce such young lieutenant-colonels to retire allow them the pension of their rank, however short may be their service. I believe that nothing less than this will break the deadlock which exists at present, and which is entirely owing to the extinction of the Bonus system.—Yours truly,

AN OFFICER.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Lord Mayo's assumption of the office of Viceroy and Governor-general of India appears to me an appropriate time for re-opening the question whether during the greater portion of each year the Government of that country should be conducted from Simla, or from Calcutta, which is still nominally the capital of the Empire. The subject has been much discussed; but, as I venture to think, not exhausted.

The question has hitherto been treated mainly from a sanitary point of view. Those in favour of the annual migration allege that the climate of Calcutta has been proved to be exceptionally hurtful to officials of high standing, and that the administration from Simla, while it secures less frequent change among the personnel of the Government, is quite as efficient as from Calcutta. The accuracy of these allegations is denied by those who hold the opposite view. I do not propose to renew the discussion solely on these issues, though I cannot refrain from calling attention to some facts which have, as far as I know, been hitherto overlooked, and which may fairly be considered as telling as much in favour of Calcutta, as the cases specified by Major Chesney in the note at page 168 of his "Indian Polity" do against it on the score of its unhealthiness. I would here remark that of the cases mentioned by Major Chesney two if not three do not illustrate his argument. The illness of which Mr. Ritchie died was not produced by anything exceptional in the climate of Calcutta. Sir James Outram's death may more fairly be set down to the arduous nature of his whole Indian service, and I have always understood that the disease which caused Lord Canning's untimely death was contracted during his journey to England. There is one circumstance which ought to be allowed due weight when isolated cases are adduced to prove the unhealthiness of Calcutta; it is, that all the three gentlemen who have held the appointment of Lieutenant-governor of Bengal are still alive, and that two out of the three are in active official life. Sir F. Halliday, the first appointed, and who retired in 1859, has lately been made a member of the Council of India, and Sir J. P. Grant, who succeeded him, was selected for the appointment of Governor of Jamaica at a time when the English Government were obliged to be more than ordinarily careful in their selection. Calcutta being the capital of the Government of Bengal, the Lieutenant-governor ought, except when travelling on tours of inspection, to reside at it; and neither Sir F. Halliday nor Sir J. P. Grant can be accused of neglecting his duty in that respect. Sir Cecil Beadon, who was less in Calcutta than his predecessors, was in but indifferent health when appointed. The case of Sir G. Yule, too, tells against the necessity of the move to Simla; the climate of Simla, not of Calcutta, caused his retirement from the service shortly after his appointment to the Governor-general's Council.

The view from which I regard the question is the financial one, and this may be considered under the two heads of—

I. The salaries of the Governor-general and of the high officials of the Government.

II. The expenses connected with the journey to and from Simla, which are debited to the State.

The members of the Government of India and those who are attached to it in the various secretariats draw high salaries, which were fixed not only with reference to the responsible and, in many cases, onerous duties attached to the appointments, but also with regard to the fact that those duties had, as a rule, to be performed in the Plains, not in the Hills, during the unpleasant part of the year; and I venture to suggest that if it is settled that the migration from Calcutta to Simla is to be an annual one, a reduction of salaries (say all above one thousand rupees a month) should be an essential part of the scheme. The principle of comparatively lower salaries for work performed in the hills during the hot weather is not new in India. I would instance the case of the district of Dehra Doon; the district is one of small area, but, except so far as they are affected by that fact, the duties are similar to those of ordinary districts in the N. W. P., and are indeed heavier than in some districts of considerably larger area. The hill station of Mussoorie is however situated in the district, and is the place at which the officer in charge of it resides during each hot season. On this ground the pay of his appointment is but £100 a month, while officers in charge of districts in the Plains receive £225. The justice of this arrangement is so apparent to the service that not four years ago, when there was a scheme for revising civil salaries, and it was proposed to raise the pay of the officer in charge of Dehra Doon to £120 a month, the general feeling was strangely against the proposition—and not many years ago an officer, who was enjoying £250 a month as a judge in the Plains, offered to take the appointment at Dehra Doon if it was guaranteed to him during the remainder of his service. I repeat, then, that the reduction of all large salaries of officials belonging or attached to the Government of India ought to be appended to any formal sanction of the migration to the hills.

2. No one, I fancy, will dispute the abstract justice of the proposition that those expenses connected with the journey to and from Simla which are debited to the State ought to be simply the necessary travelling allowances; and that there is no reason why officials, because they are attached to the Government of India, should be placed on a different footing, as regards travelling allowances, from other officials who are ordered on the public service from one place to another. The case of the Governor-general and of the members of his Council requires to be treated separately; there can be no question as to their being entitled to be conveyed at the public expense in a manner fitting their rank; but there is no reason why, except in the case of the Governor-general, the families of the members of Government should also be carried free. The Governor-general's way should be smoothed for him; and in the case of the members of his Government the fairest plan to the Indian taxpayer would be to reimburse them at the end of their journey for all personal travelling expenses. At present, if report speaks true, they receive allowances for the journey, which vary with reference to the number of their families, and are besides compensated for breaking up their Calcutta establishments.

As regards the officials who are attached to the Government of India there is, as far as I can see, no reason why they should be treated exceptionally from other officials who are transferred or who have to travel on the public service from one station to another. In such cases there is a fixed mileage allowance, which covers, or is supposed to cover, only the actual expenses of the official himself. This allowance and no more should be made to every official attached to the Government of India, who has to accompany it to Simla; and the reduction of all large salaries, if effected, would go some way towards meeting the expenditure on travelling allowances.

I have treated this subject under considerable disadvantage, because, so far as I know, no detailed statement of the expenditure connected with these annual migrations has been published by the Government of India; and it is impossible to say to what extent it was intended that officials should pay for the transport of their families and household goods; but it is notorious that the concession, whatever it was, has been greatly abused, and that many officials have carried up to Simla as personal baggage at the public expense, beer, wine, and oilman's stores, with the view of saving themselves the difference between the prices at Calcutta and those at Simla.

The whole subject of the expenses connected with the annual migration to Simla, in the interest of the Government as well as of the Indian taxpayer, requires thorough ventilation; and I hope that some member of Parliament will move for a detailed return of all expenses connected therewith during the last five years.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, A BENGAL CIVILIAN.

BURMESE RAILWAYS.

The Englishman thinks that the Kiang-Hung line has several serious disadvantages. It would pass for some 400 or 500 miles through a most thinly peopled country, a country covered with what we might call primeval forest, and of so rugged a character as to induce the majority of the Yunnan traders to prefer the longer route to Canton, rather than commit their goods to its perils. Then again its natural terminus, Maulmain, is inconveniently situated for the purposes of a trade of such vast proportions as that which the line would tap. In fact this line would have to contend with those physical obstacles which have hitherto prevented the efficient construction of a Grand Trunk Road between Arakan and the Irrawaddy valley, and which render the work of keeping up telegraphic communication between Calcutta and the seat of administration a matter of extremest difficulty. We might, therefore, set it aside for the present as impracticable. The choice of routes then lies between the valley of the Cambodia and that of the Irrawaddy, between Rangoon and Saigon. The distance to the Chinese marts in the case of the French settlement is greater; the belt of wild country to be traversed is also greater, and finally the sea voyage to Europe is both longer and more dangerous. We may safely say then that a railway starting from Rangoon would have all the chances of success in its favour. Such a railway has been proposed by Dr. Dawson, and supported by Colonels Fytche and Fraser. Dr. Dawson, in the first instance, would confine himself to the construction of the section of 180 miles between Rangoon and Prome, between two large centres of trade, the one having a population of 70,000 and the other of 24,000 souls. In deciding on the merits of these schemes it must be remembered that the valley of the Irrawaddy is the only really settled line of country, that it is rapidly increasing in wealth, and that its commercial wants are expanding year by year. A line between Rangoon and Prome would certainly pay, because it would minister to the wants of a population of a million and a quarter, already largely engaged in trade, and would offer advantages, which they do not now possess, to another million chafing under the rule of the King of Ava. Nor is this all, it would materially strengthen our military position in Burmah. At present if an outbreak were to occur, it would take some ten or twelve days for the Chief Commissioner to strengthen the frontier post of Thyet Myo, a period which the railway would abridge to the interval between sunrise and sunset. To estimate how greatly the power of re-enforcing Prome at a day's notice would add to our strength, we must bear in mind upon how frail a tenure the King holds his throne, and how hearty is the wish of his people for annexation. The engineering difficulties to be met with on the line from Rangoon to Prome are of a very unimportant nature. The whole country is an almost perfect level, and labour is plentiful. The only obstacle to be overcome, in fact, is the river Hlyne, which carries off the spill water of the Irrawaddy. The whole line of 180 miles might, it has been estimated, be constructed for a sum of one million sterling, and for this the projectors ask a guarantee. The Government ought to have little hesitation in granting such a concession to such a line, as the embankment of the railway would save a large tract of country from being flooded by the Irrawaddy, and might ultimately be used "in part of a general reclamation scheme for the country embraced between the Penling Creek to the south, Prome to the north, and the Irrawaddy and Hlyne rivers to the west and east."

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Englishman discourses on the effect which the large withdrawal of funds from India has on Indian finances, and the absence of all benefit to India in the arrangement by which immense sums are retained by the Secretary of State for India in London. Whatever the advantage may be to England, or still more, whatever influence it may give to the Secretary, or power it places in the hands of the British Cabinet, for evading the stringent firmness with which the House of Commons holds the purse of the nation, it is ruinous to India. That such a state of things should for a moment exist can only be explained by the indifference with which the House of Commons, the nation, and the press of England view all questions regarding India. If any one obtains a glimpse of the truth, it is a truth too unpleasant to ventilate. As the House of Commons once received the information that the debt to India for the Chinese war was still unsettled with a shout of sardonic laughter, so would the information be received that the Chancellor of the Exchequer must have more millions, because the Indian funds, hitherto at his command, were shut off from him. There is still another important question involved in this system of withdrawing from India every available rupee, to add to the immense balance in England. This is more local, but its effects are detrimental to the interests of India in a high degree. Whilst the Secretary of State is drawing on India, the Government is compelled to borrow money from its banker—that is to say, it is obliged to overdraw its account. When famines and droughts severely limit the income from revenue, and the necessity for feeding a starving population is imperative, the State has no other resource; the funds held in the Presidency Bank to meet the wants of commerce are withdrawn, whilst India has four millions sterling lying useless, so far as India is concerned, in London. The State is now compelled to overdraw its account with its banker in Calcutta to the extent of nearly two millions sterling to meet its absolute liabilities. The system is bad. We cannot accuse the Bank of Bengal of allowing every one and any one to overdraw their accounts as the Bombay Bank did. We cannot hint at the absence of commercial morality, but we must observe that the fault is the same. The principle is as objectionable. Commerce has scarcely recovered from the severe blow of 1866, and in the last year, when a slow process of improvement had set in, the action of the Secretary of State for India paralysed all improvement. The Government being compelled to weaken the Presidency Bank by constant withdrawals of money, it followed that the slightest demand of the local banks or merchants on their deposits obliged the bank to raise its rates of interest. Consequently, we have it rapidly raising its rate of interest week after week from 6 to 9 per cent., filling merchants with tribulation, and causing all the improvement lately gained to be lost. All this mischief, this confusion and loss arises out of the system which we so strongly condemn; the system by which the Secretary of State retains the sinews of India in his own hands for purposes secret and discreditable to its supporters.

THE HORSE GUARDS AND THE LATE BOMBAY ARTILLERY.

The Bombay Gazette brings forward a grievance of no insignificant kind which the Bombay Artillery have long had to endure. Any one who will open the Army List will see a most singular sight. It will be found that the name of Major-general Sir William Coghlan remains a fixture under the head of the effective colonels in the list entitled "late Bombay." There he figures as a colonel, having the rank of colonel commandant; but if the inquirer turns to another page he will find the name of Sir William on the fixed establishment of major-generals. Consequently, he is a major-general, a colonel, and has the rank of colonel commandant of Artillery. Now, the retention of his name on the list of colonels, without benefiting that officer in the slightest degree, acts injuriously as a bar to promotion. There are six effective colonels, and this major-general is reckoned as one! Consequently, it follows that the non-removal of his name on his promotion to the rank of major-general has ever since arrested promotion in the lower ranks, and defrauded the veterans of the Bombay Artillery of that rise to which they had and have a right to look. Now the name of Sir William is retained on the list in defiance of the well-known Royal Warrant of June, 1864. There it is laid down that—"The Colonels of Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, late of the Indian army, who had attained that rank previously to 18th Feb., 1861, will continue to rise to the rank of general officer in the Indian List; but when the last of such Colonels of Artillery or Engineers, as the case may be, is promoted to the rank of major-general, the promotion of officers in that branch of the service to the rank of general officer on the Indian list in each case shall cease." Now Sir William Coghlan is actually a major-general of April 14, 1863, and yet his name has been retained ever since on the list of Colonels R.A., "Late Bombay." We could understand why, as a matter of distinction, his name should remain as Colonel Commandant, but why it remains on the list of effective colonels requires explanation. Will the Major-General be eligible to command the 21st Brigade as an effective colonel when it lands in England? Perhaps the true explanation may be found in this little fact. If Sir William's name had been removed at the proper time Lieutenant-Colonel Hatch would have been senior to all the colonels of 1868 in the list of the old Royal Artillery; and if it had been removed a few weeks ago two lieutenant-colonels of the old Royal Artillery would have been passed over. Although, apparently, there is no objection to old Royal Artillery officers stepping over Indian veterans, there seems to be a marked objection to old Indians stepping over old Royals.

NATIVE TROOPS.

The Som Prakash refers to the question regarding native troops. The editor complains of their not having proper arms, as the European soldiers have. The Sepoys' "Brown Bess" is, in the writer's opinion, on a lower footing than the unseemly weapons of the frontier tribes. No ruler, like Sir John Lawrence, has so dishonoured India as to distrust her sons. It is owing chiefly to this that the Sepoy regiments are not better armed, or organised on a larger scale. Is it supposed that the English will be able to defend themselves with 60,000 European soldiers against the combined forces of Russia, and of those countries subjected by her? No! unless England can turn the natives of India to some account as soldiers, and place greater confidence in them, she will be unable to accomplish her purpose. Let England beware. For when she finds she has over-estimated her strength as compared with Russia, she will in vain look to Indians for help; for those who have been rendered powerless by their rulers, from a foolish fear of mutiny, will be in a poor condition to afford support.

COMPARATIVE VALUE OF NATIVE AND ENGLISH LIVES.

The Samachar Chandrika draws a comparison between the European and the Native as regards the light in which they appear to the Government. The editor believes the former class is without doubt the favourite, deducing his opinion from ostensible proofs, of which the following is the most forcible. "Two murders were committed at the Neigherries. In one, two European females were the unfortunate victims of the assassin; and the other two native females and a child. The reward offered for the detection of the perpetrator of the former was Rs. 200, and that of the latter Rs. 50. Now, we leave our readers to judge of the value of a native life in comparison with a European. On investigation it will be found to be as 6 : 1 :: European : Native. Is this not sufficient to show that partiality exists? We would advise the Government to abolish this distinction, for it cannot otherwise than generate evil. Now, the nineteenth century is at hand, and the eyes of the people have been opened to good and evil; so if the Government wish to instil loyalty into the minds of the subjects it behoves it to behave judiciously by destroying the offending distinction.

THE BENGAL ARMY IN 1867.—The average strength of the European troops was 34,603 men. In the months of November and December 6,000 were withdrawn, and in calculating the admissions and death-rates the returns of the first ten months only have been regarded. The average daily sick was 1,803, or 53 per 1,000. The admissions into hospital were 48,876, or an average of 1,412 per 1,000, showing a favourable result in comparison with former years. The deaths were in the proportion of 30.95 per 1,000, representing a loss of life greater than any that has occurred in any year since 1861, but explained by the occurrence of an epidemic of cholera. The total deaths numbered 1,071, and 479 of these were from cholera—that is, among the European troops. Last year it was noticed that the ratio of deaths among cases of dysentery had been very materially reduced; that, from having been 8.60 per cent, in 1859, it had gradually, and almost without any check, fallen to 4.19 in 1866. In 1867 the results were not so favourable, since for every hundred cases treated 5.33 died. The admissions from serious liver disease show a decrease of 8 per 1,000 as compared with the previous year. The admissions from fevers were 16,113, or 465 per 1,000, the same as in 1866. No less than 144 cases of delirium tremens, in a ratio of 4.2 per 1,000, were treated. The admissions from venereal disease were 166 per 1,000—a lower average than in any of the eight previous years; in fact, within that period the diminution has been one-half. In Oude the rate of admission was only 121 per 1,000. The loss by invaliding amounted to 47.28 per 1,000; somewhat less than in 1866. The total loss from invaliding and death together amounted, as regards the European army, to 78.23 per 1,000. The employment of soldiers on public works is favourably reported upon. In a wing of the 88th, out of 400 men of all ranks, there was not one case of illness for 29 consecutive days. The daily average sick during five months was only 0.42 per 1,000. The native army numbered 39,114 men; the deaths were at the rate of 16.77 per 1,000; the daily number 1,834, or 46 per 1,000. The native enjoyed a remarkably immunity from cholera as compared with the European troops; 240 cases occurred, and 184 of the attacked died. Fevers were very rife—29,100 admissions, or 744 per 1,000; the death-rate being 3.04. In the gaols there were 54,962 prisoners in 1867, or 2,500 less than in 1866. The sick-rate for these was 32 per 1,000; the death-rate 38.32, or 24 per 1,000 less than in 1866, and 72.49 less than in 1860. These are satisfactory results. The mortality and sickness from dysentery and diarrhoea are still large; 10,929 cases occurred in the year. Fever was abundantly present again.

MILITARY.—We (Delhi Gazette) learn from the Punjab that a change in the disposition of troops in that province is under the consideration of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. It is contemplated making the Peshawur Brigade an independent command, and moving the head-quarters of the division to Sydn-Bowlee. Nowshera is to have two regiments of the Indian army cantoned there; and at Jhelum there are to be three, unless, which is not improbable, the 29th N.I., en route to Jhelum, be directed to proceed to the new cantonment to be formed in the Salt Range as a support to Bunnoo. The garrison of Jhelum, in the course of the change about to be made, will likely enough fall under the command of the Brigadier commanding at Sealkote, and thus be removed from the command of the Major-General Commanding the Peshawur Division. —After the break-up of the Hazara Field Force, the 24th Punjab Native Infantry and two squadrons of the 9th Bengal Cavalry were retained in Hazara as a check on the tribes. This force has now been recalled, and will march, the cavalry to Rawul Pindiee, and the infantry to Meean Meer.—Englishman, Jan. 1.—The 26th Punjab Native Infantry having been released from quarantine at Mohana, Central India, were expected to reach Agra on 4th January.—The Delhi Gazette mentions that a party of the 92nd Gordon Highlanders will be sent to work on the Dalhousie-road during the ensuing hot season, the Inspector-General of Hospitals having overcome Sir John Lawrence's persistent objection to the British soldiers leaving the plains.—Brigadier-General Maxwell, C.B., will complete his time of service on the Brigade Staff of the Army on the 24th inst., and will be succeeded by Colonel A.H. L. Wyatt, of her Majesty's 11th Foot.—Englishman.—Her Majesty's 77th Regiment, en route to Agra, were at Pindiee on the 25th Dec. The probable date of their arrival at Meean Meer is the 11th January.

CASHMERE.—We learn from Indian Public Opinion that the Maharajah of Cashmere, anxious that his eldest son should be rendered qualified for the task of governing, has recently intrusted him with special functions in the administration of his dominions. The lad has been put at the head of a Council of Omeras, comprising Wazir Poonnoo, Sirdar Utter Singh, and others, and it has been resolved that the decisions of the new council can only be reversed by the Maharajah himself.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 30.—In Calcutta we have a number of very old people, and it is a wonder how well they stand the climate. One old lady paid the debt of nature on the 28th. She was called Mrs. Smith, and resided at the Water Gate, in Fort William. She was conscious to within an hour of her death, and had walked about the previous day, and attended service and taken the sacrament. She stated that she was born on Michaelmas Day, 1770, and was consequently in her ninety-ninth year. Though pretending to be poor, and living on the offertory funds, she had more than seven hundred rupees concealed amongst her clothes. She had been through the campaign in Egypt and the Pindaree War, and had been twice wounded. As she has lived for many years under an assumed name, no one knows anything about her. Her name was Agnes, and she called herself Smith. A correspondent of the Englishman, some short time ago, mentioned that there were 103 European and East Indian pensioners on the funds of St. John's Church, whose united ages amount to 6,664 years, giving an average of sixty-four years and eight months each. The eldest is ninety-two and the youngest twenty-eight years. Say what people may, Calcutta is not the worst station by many in India, as I can testify, having been nearly all over the country. Those who decry it live in filthy neighbourhoods, or are interested in abusing it. I do not believe that any one death has taken place amongst the military attributable in any way to the unhealthiness of Calcutta, and that is saying a great deal.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

FUTTEHGHURH, Dec. 28.—The companies of the 41st quartered here will shortly proceed to join head quarters at Agra, their places to be taken by a detachment of the 105th Foot from Dinapore. The stay of the 41st has been but short, viz, since the end of October, and the sudden departure of the officers and men is much regretted by all the residents of this station. What an endless moving of troops has been going on, without any object, as far as lookers on can discover, and causing serious expense and inconvenience to officers and soldiers; this will, however, perhaps be attended with eventual benefit in so far as it may bring about a consideration on the part of Government of the whole subject of the needless moving of troops; the matter is not so very simple, as the relief is now very much regulated by the military authorities in London, who are not likely to care how people ten thousand miles off are affected by their orders. This is one of the many troubles brought about by that job-muddle business known as the amalgamation. Old Indians, a class who are fast disappearing from the scene, say that prior to the annexation of the Punjab, corps could reckon almost with certainty upon remaining three years at a station; if this was possible then, why not now? Some rain fell on the 17th; it was a heavy drizzle rather than rain, and not a drop has fallen since. The dearthness of grain continues to be the subject of much complaint, but there is not a famine here; still the present rates cannot but weigh heavily upon people having small incomes whether fixed or fluctuating. It has been suggested that some relief works should be set on foot, for the benefit of those who are able and willing to work but cannot get work; and also that something should be done for those unable to work; the latter class seem to be legion here as elsewhere; how they keep body and soul together is a puzzle.

BUNDEECUND, Dec. 29.—We cannot sufficiently thank Providence for sending down the longed-for rain, which I believe has to all intents and purposes been adequate to the necessities of the season; though rather a day after the fair, yet I think it is better late than never, for the fields that were, owing to the timidity of the owners, lying uncultivated for want of sap, have derived no advantage whatever, that being the share of the cultivated ones only, whose crops were being scorched for want of rain, which I cannot say has been so very welcome to every one, as I have just learnt that a bunneah, who had during the drought purchased a very large quantity of grain, has lost his wits and is now on his road to a lunatic asylum, because a day after his large investment in grain a copious shower of rain reduced the exorbitant rates at which he had made his large purchase. Mr. Lang, the Deputy Commissioner of Jhansie, is on a visit to Lucknow, whither he has gone to spend the Christmas vacation. Some of the police subordinates have, I understand, come to grief at an adjacent station, and are candidates for admission into No. 1 Chowringhee. A trio of three colonels was assembled a short time back at Orai in the Jaloun district, consisting of Colonels Lloyd, the Commissioner, Ternan, Deputy-Commissioner, and Swiney, Superintendent of Police, for the purpose of devising some feasible plan to afford relief to sufferers from the drought, and while thus deliberating on the pros and cons of the question and thinking how to relieve others, they were themselves relieved of the task by a timely shower. Colonel Ternan left the district on the 23rd ultimo on a month's leave, his duties being taken over by Mr. J. Alone, Assistant Commissioner, who is, I believe, out in the interior of the district with the Commissioner and Colonel Swiney. Smallpox is raging most furiously in several parts of Bundelcund, its results being mostly fatal.

MEERUT, Dec. 30.—For days back the clouds have been threatening. Full and dark have they been, with every appearance of a speedy disposition to empty themselves, but as usual have cleared away before sunset, leaving behind them prospects of disappointment. Had I written two days ago I would have assured you that Meerut was expecting to be deluged every moment. Indeed I never was so much disappointed; every moment seemed to bring the clouds closer, and the sullen appearance of the heavens, the density of the atmosphere, and the perfect stillness that prevailed, combined to help us into the belief that more rain than was wished for would fall and spoil the expectations of the agriculturists. With all those symptoms, however, only half-a-dozen drops or so fell, and in fifteen minutes' time every thing above and below became as bright as ever. The military have temporary accession to their strength by the arrival from Dinapore of the 105th Regt. A fortnight ago five companies of them reached this and camped behind the station cemetery; the other five have since arrived, and the whole regiment is now comfortably housed; whilst the 3rd Buffs have moved into camp and are making preparations to leave this station by the 2nd or 3rd proximo by train for Umballa, where it is expected they will make a stay of two or three months, owing I suppose to the scarcity prevailing in the districts through which they are to pass en route to Dugshai. The 105th to all appearance seem a well-behaved body of men. Time, however, will show what they are, and whether any of them will give us cause to complain. The 3rd Buffs have the regret of all who have had anything to do with them. Their departure from the station will be very much felt, for, with very few exceptions, their conduct during their short stay here has been the very best. Both officers and men have, by their kindly intercourse and social disposition, earned the goodwill of the station, and, go where they will, each one will have our warmest and hearty wishes for his welfare and happiness.

ALLAHABAD, Jan. 2.—It has surely been raining somewhere to the west, for the weather here has again become delightfully cold. The sky has been quite clear for the last few days, and all hopes of the "Magh" rains have been given up. The Central Famine Relief Committee has met twice since its appointment; at the last meeting the report of the honorary secretary to the effect that he had issued circular letters directing the formation of local committees, and that the suggestions of the previous meeting had been carried out, was heard; other members were enrolled, and suggestions made regarding returns of fall of rain and prices current being called for weekly from districts; it was also suggested by a native member that native noblemen and gentlemen be addressed individually for assistance. I am glad to find that the Municipal Commissioners have abolished octroi duty on grain, and in its stead have imposed a "wheel tax." If I am not mistaken, the residents of the new civil station fought very hard some time ago for the introduction of this tax in lieu of a "site tax" that the then Commissioners contemplated imposing, but with very little effect. It appears that the present non-official members are of a different type, for I am told that the official members again proposed a sort of "house tax," but the proposal was rejected. By the way, how is it that an account current of the municipal fund is not published every month in the local paper? We pay all manner of taxes, but do not know how our hard earned money is disposed of. The Government should insist on this being done, for there is scarcely any check on the expenditure incurred by the Commissioners, and the way business is done by them is not altogether satisfactory, for I have reason to believe that the more independent members are often browbeaten if they oppose any motion put forward by the official members; at all events the fact of the "officials" always having the majority on their side on account of the native members who simply "obey orders," renders the "non-officials" almost useless to their electors. Mr. Baly, I hear, is to be the Archdeacon for Allahabad. I am glad of this election, as Mr. Baly is a good, pious man.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE BANK OF BENGAL on the 7th January reduced its rates 1 per cent. all round.

RANGOON.—Mr. Housman, barrister-at-law, has been appointed Recorder of Rangoon.

CHOLERA.—The Calcutta papers state that cholera of a severe type has broken out in Tirhoot and Mozufferpore.

DELHI.—We learn from the Mofussilite of the 31st Dec. that the small-pox epidemic at Delhi was abating, and that there was no sickness in the garrison.

CIVIL.—The Pioneer believes that Colonel H. Daly, C.B., will succeed Lieut.-Colonel R. J. Meade, C.S.I., as agent of the Governor-General in Central India.

ACCIDENT TO MAJOR DELANE.—We regret to learn from the Pioneer that Major George Delane, commanding the Viceroy's body-guard, has met with a severe accident at Calcutta; the buggy in which he was driving being upset, he was thrown out and his arm broken; the bone has, however, been set, and Major Delane is progressing favourably.

WE (Englishman) are informed that Mr. R. B. Chapman will be succeeded in the Presidency Division by Mr. Rivers Thompson, and that Mr. H. Bell, Magistrate of Nuddea, will officiate for Mr. Thompson, as Legal Remembrancer.

INDIGO.—The Statistical Department, after having allowed indigo to stand at Rs. 160 for some time, have now raised its value to Rs. 300 per maund. This will make a difference of over a million sterling in the estimated value of our exports.

RANGOON.—The Rangoon papers announce the death of Mr. Thomas Warner, a well-known advocate in that city. They also speak of the likelihood of Captain Sladen leaving Mandalay on sick leave. Captain Watson, now Deputy-Commissioner at Shoaygyeen, will act for him.

TRADE AT PALAMPORE.—The Yarkundi traders at the late Palampore Fair offered for sale gold, musk, live yaks, Bokhara silk corahs, China grass, nettle fibre, Hilt ponies, nutmegs, cinnamon, rhubarb, and woollen cloths. They bought 40,000 lbs. of green tea at an average price of Rs. 1.5 per lb. The next fair in March will, it is anticipated, prove very successful.

KANGRA.—A report on the Kangra Valley shows how much a little care on the part of Government for the interests of the planter will smooth over the difficulties between planters and ryots, and dispose both parties to be conciliatory. The report states that there are 8,910 acres in the valley held by 32 planters, and of this area no less than 3,786 acres are under tea.

CANNING COLLEGE.—We learn from Lucknow that the students of the Canning College there have put in a good appearance at the University examination. Of twenty sent up to the entrance sixteen have passed—four being first class. Of the three who went in for the first arts, all passed. This result is most favourable, and very creditable to the principal and professor of the institution.

WATERWORKS IN THE PUNJAB.—We are told that the long contemplated works for diverting the waters of the River Beas into the channel of the Barce Doab Canal are about to be, if not already, commenced. These waters will add very considerably to the power of the canal (on which, we are also told, navigation is soon to become a fact), and extend its valuable operations to the lower parts of the Doab, now, or at least some of them, perfect types of "howling wildernesses."

DOING DUTY.—The Pioneer tells rather a good story of the late frontier campaign. As a guard was being marched past two officers for picket duty, one of them observed that a soldier had his gun ready capped and on full cock, and suggested to the other, to whose regiment he belonged, that the man would most likely do mischief to himself or some of his comrades. His friend's reply was—"Full cock is it? Ah! That's nothing to do with me you know; I'm only doing duty with the regiment!" So much for the interest officers under the present system possess in the soldiers they command.

THE VAGRANCY BILL.—All the political officers who have been consulted are in favour of the introduction of the proposed Bill "to Provide against European Vagrancy." Those most qualified to judge of the evil effects produced on native and European interests in the interior by the spread of European vagrancy are of opinion that the enactment is calculated to afford a practical remedy to the present state of things. It appears that some States in Central India are very subject to visitations from the class of persons whom it is the object of the Bill to check and reform.—Pioneer.

CASHMERE AND ITS CUSTOMS' OFFICERS.—Dr. Cayley concludes his report for the month of November as follows. That is the last month of the trading season, and there will be little or nothing doing for the next six months:—"I have brought to the notice of the Cashmere Government," he says, "numerous complaints against the robberies and extortions practised in the Cashmere Customs' offices, and in every case redress has been given, and the offenders are to be punished. The evil is, however, so great and so universal, that nothing short of the most complete reform in the whole system of levying duties in Cashmere will eradicate it. The effects are that trade is now all driven from the Cashmere to other routes, and the Maharajah's interests chiefly suffer."

THE MAHARAJAH OF JOUDPORE.—The Maharajah Tukht Shigh of Joudpore at last, it is said, recognises the danger which threatens his throne, and shows a disposition to abandon the influence of slave girls for the advice of wise men. So protracted and fierce has been the feud between him and his nobles that it would have been vain to expect any good result from direct negotiations. The mediation of British officers has accordingly been invoked, and it is probable that Colonel Keatinge and Colonel Brooke are by this time on the spot. They have a difficult task before them, for though the Thakoors have real grievances to complain of, it is none the less apparent that many of them have purposely ignored their duty to their suzerain, have encroached on his lands, and whilst calling for justice to themselves have omitted to accord it to their own people. If an honest reconciliation can be effected, and the evil of following up famine and pestilence with the sword be avoided, there will be great reason for thankfulness. Both parties have an interest in coming to terms, seeing that the continuance of the present state of affairs suggests the loss of his position to the Maharajah and the cost and indignity of intervention to his subjects.—Friend of India.

EXECUTION OF MEER HAJEE.—The convict Meer Hajee was executed at Delhi on Tuesday, the 29th Dec., at 8 o'clock A.M., in front of the Lahore gate of the city, facing the apartments which were the scene of the murders of Captain Douglas and others in 1857, for which he suffered death. The prisoner was brought from jail to the place of execution about 7.30 A.M. under a strong police guard, and was apparently quite unconcerned; he mounted the scaffold with a firm step; while the rope was being adjusted he muttered in a low voice, "Brethren, remember your kulma," and then repeated in the same low tone two or three times "La Illa," &c., &c., soon after which the drop fell, and all was over, almost without a struggle. After hanging the usual time the body was made over to the friends of the convict. The execution was not attended with any sign of disorder. The crowd, which appeared to be composed chiefly of Hindoos, behaved with the greatest decorum. We are sorry to learn that there were a number of European children in the crowd of spectators. A gentleman was so overcome by the scene of something else, that when he first caught sight of the culprit on the scaffold he fell down in a sort of fainting fit.

THE CROPS AND THE WEATHER.—Heavy rain, we learn from an Agra contemporary, has fallen at Jhelum. Rain commenced to fall on Christmas night, and it continued to fall heavily the whole of the following day. Grain had risen to a high price; it is said, however, that the local grain dealers have supplies in abundance stored in their granaries, which possibly will be speedily opened now.—A correspondent in Oude writes to a contemporary:—"We have had a couple of days' shooting some miles in the interior. The country is in a deplorable state; not a drop of water. Herbage there is hardly any, and not a vestige of cultivation. Game very scarce and very wild. Lots of grey wolves knocking about, but at a safe distance."—A good fall of rain occurred at Lahore on the 25th December, and there was every appearance of a week's rain. It fell pretty heavily for about eight hours over a large tract of country, but was not enough to penetrate far into the burnt-up soil. It will no doubt, remarks the Delhi Gazette, be of service so far as to increase the food for cattle.—The Mafussilite (Delhi) says that, "the mortality amongst the cattle in a district close by amounts to no less than thirty thousand head." The principal cause of this heavy loss was the scarcity of fodder and water; and it is believed the worst has yet to come.—According to the Pioneer, Gwalior, and Central India generally, is spared the suffering which prevails so intensely in Rajpootana and parts of the North West. There is abundance of grain stored up, though of course the price has risen very considerably. The great anxiety is, lest if no rain should shortly fall, the wells should fail, and the cultivation dependant on well irrigation be suspended.—The Englishman's Hyderabad correspondent, writing on the 16th December, says that the Madras monsoon has been a total failure, as far as the country about Hyderabad is concerned. The prospects of the country are, therefore, gloomy.

Madras.

LADY NAPIER.—It is said that Lady Napier (of Madras) accompanied by the Honourable Mr. Napier, will return to England in March, and make a sojourn there for a few months.

LORD NAPIER'S MOVEMENTS.—Lord Napier (says the Deccan Herald) is shortly to proceed on a tour of inspection through the southern Mahratta country, from whence he will go direct to Mahabaleshwur, so that Poonaites may not expect to see his lordship till June next.

MAJOR FRASER.—Major Hastings Fraser, of the Madras Sappers, has, we learn from the Madras Mail, been appointed Military Secretary to the Resident at Hyderabad, vice Briggs promoted. Major Fraser is the author of the interesting work entitled "The Nizam: Our Faithful Ally."

THE ACCOUNTS OF THE LATE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE.—We hear that the accounts of the late Maharajah of Mysore have now been nearly all settled. Some 6,000 dependants of that open-handed but deluded Prince have been pensioned off. Some have received full pensions, others half, others gratuities at the rate of one month's pay for each year's service. The gratuities alone amount, we believe, to about two and a half lakhs, and altogether some six lakhs have been spent on those who were in the service of the Maharajah. The Government of India left the settlement of these accounts to Mr. Bowring and Major Elliott, who have done their work expeditiously and in a manner that appears to have given satisfaction even to the pensioners themselves.—Madras Mail.

FAILURE OF CROPS IN SOUTH ARCOT.—The state of the crops in South Arcot is reported as being "as bad as could be," owing to the failure of the north-east monsoon. Almost all the tanks in the inland Taluq are already dry, and most of the paddy and late dry crops are reported "shavy." The collector has, we are informed, stayed all collection of "khists" in the Trinomaly Taluq, and heavy remissions will doubtless be necessary to enable the people to tide over another season of want and high prices. Unless we have a late fall of rain, as has sometimes occurred in January, there is little doubt that this season will in the eastern districts prove worse than the last, the distress being of course enhanced by two, or we might say, three bad years following in succession. There is, we are glad to hear, one saving clause as far as South Arcot is concerned, namely, that in the adjoining district of Salem the crops are, as a rule, good. We should like to hear how many of the irrigation schemes proposed last year have been sanctioned; and of these what percentage have been completed or even put in hand.—Madras Mail, Dec. 26.

THE ARRIVAL OF EARL MAYO AT MADRAS.—Earl and Countess Mayo arrived at Madras on Saturday evening, Jan. 2. The Coromandel, in which the Viceroy elect and his suite sailed from Bombay, arrived at Beylore at dusk on the evening of the 1st, and it was dark when the illustrious passengers landed. They were received by Lord Napier, who had come thither to welcome them. Lord Napier having presented a few gentlemen to the Earl, the party dined at the Railway-station Hotel, and at ten o'clock left for Madras in a special train. At Salem, where the train arrived at six o'clock, there was a halt of an hour and a quarter, and the Earl, who, it will be remembered, viewed part of the Ghaut scenery on his way to Poona from the locomotive, got on the engine at Mullapooram and continued there till the train arrived at Samulputty. After various stoppages the train arrived at Madras at 4 55 P.M. on the 2nd January. The station was decorated with flags, scrolls, and mottoes, and the platform was covered with red cloth. The party was received with respectful silence by those who had assembled to witness their arrival. Besides the European gentlemen present on the platform were Muziz-ood-dowlah Bahadoor, second son of his Highness the Nabob of Arcot (who had with him his sons), and Oomduh-ood-dowlah Bahadoor, another son of the Nabob, and a number of other native gentlemen. Lord Napier presented the sons of the Nabob and the principal members of the Madras Government to the Earl and Countess. After a short stay at the railway terminus, the party drove off to Government-house, the guard of honour presenting arms and the band playing the National Anthem. The streets from the station to Government-house had been rendered as pretty as it was possible to make them, by having the roads well watered, several of the houses newly whitewashed, and triumphal arches and other decorations in different places. The road for some distance from the station was lined by the Madras Volunteers, and troops lined the remainder of the way to Government-house-bridge. The party reached Guindy park shortly before seven o'clock. Arrangements had been made for the holding of a levee by Earl Mayo during his visit to Madras, but his lordship intimated, as at Bombay, that "he deemed it more consistent with the respect due to the present Viceroy that all presentations of an official character should be deferred until after his installation at Calcutta," and so the projected levee was countermanded. The Earl and Countess left Madras for Calcutta at daylight on the morning of January 7.

THE COTTON CROP IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

Mr. Rivett-Carnac, the Cotton Commissioner for the Central Provinces and the Berars, has forwarded to the Bombay Chamber of Commerce a statement, dated December 12, showing the area under cotton cultivation this season. The cotton-growing tract of the Central Provinces, as most people know, is the country lying south of the Sautpoora range, between that range and the River Wurdah, including the Nagpore, Chandah, and Wurdah districts. Much of the cotton grown there is taken up for consumption by the looms of the Nagpore, Chandah, and Bhundara districts, yet it is from that quarter that the chief exports are made. The Jubbulpore division includes the hilly districts of Seonee and Mundlah. The area sown with cotton there is small, and Mr. Rivett-Carnac thinks, hardly likely to increase. Famous as the country along the Nerbudda and the Raepore division is for its grain crops, there has for a few years been a tendency to extend the cultivation of cotton in the tracts to the eastward. The exports, however, are still small. During the present season there are 662,129 acres under cotton cultivation in the Central Provinces, viz., 293,359 acres in the Jubbulpore division, 96,886 in the Nerbudda division, 200,257 in the Chutteesgurh division, and 560 in the Godavery district. The Nagpore cotton goes to the markets in the Wurdah district, Hingunghat, Deolee, and Arvee, where the local consumption is considerable; and a large quantity was last year despatched to the North-West Provinces. The Jubbulpore and Nerbudda cotton now comes to Bombay, by way of Khundwah. That of Chutteesgurh goes partly to Cuttack, via Sumbulpore, and partly to Mirzapore across the hills.

These returns correspond pretty nearly, says Mr. Rivett-Carnac, with those of last season. It is noteworthy, however, that in the great cotton-growing tract of these provinces, the Wurdah district, where the Hingunghat cotton is grown, an increase of upwards of 18,000 acres is shown. The districts of the Chutteesgurh division also show an increase, but this, he thinks, is chiefly attributable to more accurate statistics consequent on the advance of the land revenue settlement in these districts, rather than to any considerable extension of the cultivation. Taking the cultivated area of the Central Provinces at 15,205,760 acres, cotton occupies about 5 per cent. of the cultivated land, its stronghold being still the Wurdah district, where upwards of 40 per cent. of the land reserved for the autumn harvest is sown with this crop.

Turning now to the Berars, we find that there are in these provinces 1,156,192 acres under cotton cultivation, very nearly the same as last year. The cotton of East Berar is taken to Oomrawuttee and Karinjah; and some portion finds its way to the markets beyond the Wurdah. The cotton of West Berar goes to the markets of Khangaum and Akote.

With regard to the prospects of the crops, drought has told more or less on them throughout the Central Provinces. Want of rain has, however, been but little felt throughout the Wurdah district, where Hingunghat is chiefly grown, and the crop there is much superior to that of last season. In the Berars the drought has reduced the crop below the average. Captain Huddleston, the Deputy Commissioner of Akola, writes: "Last year I estimated the yield per acre at 80 lbs. of cotton. But in parts of the district, where the soil is very light or where the position of the fields is on high land, some injury has resulted from the very small rain fall during the last rains. The best cotton ground in the district has not indeed suffered to any extent, although the out-turn from inferior soil will be below the average. I have lately seen fields where the cotton plant is but fifteen inches high, with a yield hardly one-fourth of the usual produce, and others, where it is not even worth while to pick the apology for cotton on the plants. This is, however, quite exceptional, and if the yield be taken at 75 lbs. per acre all round, which is five pounds less than last year's estimate, the whole district out-turn will be 30,000,000 lbs., or taking the Bombay candy at 784 lbs., about 40,000 candies."

In Booldana the crop on black soil is doing well; that on hard soil is not very promising. In Ellichpore and Oomrawuttee the crop is exceedingly good. Speaking with reference to the crops generally, Mr. Rivett-Carnac concludes by stating that "the cotton sown after the first burst of rain, which fell more than a fortnight earlier than usual, has not felt the want of the latter rains so much, but I fear that the cotton which was not put into the ground until July must be more or less affected by the drought. Luckily, however, the cotton sown late bore but a small proportion to the whole crop."

STATION TALK.

NEEMUCH, Dec. 29.—The detachment of the Royals from Nusseerabad came into camp on the morning of Christmas-day. It consisted of Captain Teal and Ensign Kennedy, with the head-quarters of the two companies to be formed out of the detachment already here, two at Nusseerabad having been broken up for this purpose. They brought with them the arms for the men here, so that now the protection offered by the presence of European infantry in the station is no longer a sham. A corresponding detachment leaves this for Nusseerabad next week. They were to have gone earlier, but there is an old order to the effect that except in cases of emergency troops are not to be marched during Christmas week. It cannot be said that we are at all bigoted in our religion up here, for on Christmas-eve more than a dozen officers, including our Brigadier, attended midnight mass at the Roman Catholic Chapel, at the special request of the Rev. Father Mariannes, R. C. C. The next day, also, I observed that the only Catholic officer we have in the station—I hope he will excuse my mentioning him—returned the compliment by being present at the Protestant church during mid-day service. The way in which the altar in the Catholic Church was “dressed” (that is the correct term, I believe), excited some surprise, as one does not usually see anything so handsome in up-country stations, and in this place until very lately there was not even a priest, the Roman Catholics having to be content with flying visits three or four times a-year from the Nusseerabad chaplain. The way in which the service was conducted, also, was remarkably good, owing to the co-operation of a number of the Christians in the band of the 28th N. I. The next day one had an opportunity of observing the result of the combined labours of several fair hands for some days past in the decorations of the English Church, and very pretty and tastefully executed they were, though I don’t know what that stern anti-ritualist, the late “John of Bombay,” would have said about the numerous repetitions of the cross that one perceived.

AHMEDNUGGER, Dec. 31.—Our little station (which, since the departure of the Dragoons, and the exit into the districts of the civilians, has been almost deserted) will soon resume its usual lively and gay appearance. The first detachment of the 3rd Hussars comes in to-morrow, being followed after a couple of days’ interval by a second—the headquarters (which will be the last) coming in about a week’s time. The regiment comes out very strong in officers (having upwards of thirty with it), and I hear there will, in consequence, be a great paucity of houses. It has often struck me how strange it must appear to a casual observer, that while Government is spending lacs of rupees (and very wisely, too,) in providing every possible description of comfort and barrack accommodation for the soldiers, the officers have to shift for themselves the best way they can, and in many cases have to crowd three or four together into a wretched bungalow rented at an exorbitant rate; while on the other hand their men are marching into a cantonment, find barracks, furniture, &c., and everything ready for them. The want of suitable accommodation for officers, which is increasing daily, owing to landlords contenting themselves with patching up instead of properly repairing the houses they make such an enormous profit out of, has been so often noticed in the public press that it is almost needless for me to recur to the subject here, but it is to be hoped that some day the authorities (whoever they may be) will have the necessity forced upon them of building suitable houses for officers, which they could afford to rent as well as to live comfortably in. The expected arrival of so many cavalry officers has caused a great rise in the horse market as regards Ahmednuggur, and every one who possesses an animal with four legs expects to get at least four figures for the same! There are horses of all kinds for sale here—good, bad, and indifferent; so at all events there will be a variety to choose from.

RAJCOLE, Jan. 1.—We are now in the height of the cold weather. The thermometer at six in the morning stands at 58 deg. and at mid-day at 65 deg. By letter received from some of the attendants of the chiefs of this province now at Broach it would appear that they enjoyed themselves well, and were heartily pleased with the reception given them by his Excellency the Governor. Some of these chiefs and Kooors must have cut pretty figures, the Koor of Joonaghur especially. The address of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald to the chiefs of Kattywar appears most appropriate, and it is to be hoped they will profit by it, and bring themselves to remove the heavy load of oppression which they are causing thousands of their subjects to bear, solely through their apathy and indifference. These chiefs to be known must be seen in their own province—they are at home here, and an observant eye will not find it difficult to read the stuff of which each one is composed. We expect a gathering on or about the 18th, and it would be worth the while of such gentlemen as can afford the time and expense to pay us a flying visit. I am not yet acquainted with all the fun that is to come off, but shall inquire and furnish you with a programme in a day or two.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR JAMES FERGUSSON, the newly-appointed Governor of South Australia, left Bombay for Agra en route to Calcutta on Monday, the 4th January.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—The Convocation for conferring degrees in connection with the University of Bombay was to take place on the afternoon of the 12th January.

COTTON.—The cotton shipped from the port of Bombay during the month of November last amounted to 9,328,911 lbs., or a little over 11,899 candies, valued at Rs. 29,92,084.

KURRACHEE.—Owing to the expansion of trade in Kurrachee the Government of India (says the Indian Daily News) has sanctioned the establishment of a bonded warehouse at that port, and has authorised the engagement of the building belonging to the Scinde Press Company for the purpose.

WESTERN INDIA RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—His Excellency the Governor has notified his intention of giving a cup, value Rs. 200, to be shot for at the meeting of the Rifle Association of Western India.—Townley Filgate, Esq., Captain Bombay Volunteer Rifles, has stated his intention of giving a cup, value Rs. 100, to be shot for by volunteers only.

A BOMBAY CELEBRITY.—We regret to announce the death, yesterday morning, of Mr. Cullianjee Sewjee, at his garden-house, Matunga, after about a fortnight’s illness. Cullianjee was an intelligent and enterprising man, and although unlettered, had risen by the force of character to the rank of the prince of native contractors in Bombay. He had reached a good old age, and married more than one wife, but leaves behind him no child to inherit his reputed great wealth.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 9.

AHMEDABAD.—We are given to understand that the constitution of Rev. Taylor, of the Irish Mission, is so broken down by his uncommon labours in the field he has chosen that he intends to proceed to England for a change of air in a short time. The mission-school at Ahmedabad is mainly indebted to him for its present prosperity, and he has conferred a great obligation upon the scholars of Guzerat by his elaborate grammar of the Guzerathi language, which, with all its shortcomings, promises to be the best text-book for some years to come. We hope this kind-hearted gentleman will soon return to our shores in better health to continue his useful career.—Guzerat Mitra.

MUSCAT.—By the steamship Mahratta, Captain Scott, which arrived at Bombay on the 1st January, we learn that affairs continue quiet at Muscat, though Azan-bin-Ghes is enforcing his supremacy with no mild hand, and the people do not seem to acquire any love for his rule. Syud Salim was at Bunder Abbas when the Mahratta left, and it was expected that he would make an early attempt to regain his throne, it being reported that he had some three or four thousand followers ready for an attack on Muscat. The Vizier was on a visit to Bushire, and it had been arranged that he should sail as a passenger in the Mahratta to Bunder Abbas, there to see the ex-Sultan. He was, however, too late in returning, and so lost his passage.—Bombay Gazette.

“AS DRUNK AS A LORD.”—On Saturday last a European, who called himself Lord George Gordon, was placed before Mr. R. H. Showell, Second Magistrate of Police, and charged with being drunk and incapable of taking care of himself in Breach Candy-road on New Year’s-day. It appears that on the morning of Friday a native policeman found Lord George Gordon lying drunk on the Girgaum-road, and had him taken to the chowkey close by. Lord George had nothing to urge in defence, and only requested his worship to send him to Tanna. In convicting him of the offence named, his worship reminded the prisoner that he was not unknown to him; but as it was about thirteen years since he (the prisoner) was brought before him at Tanna on a similar charge, he would only order the ordinary fine on this occasion, but he warned Lord George Gordon not to come before him again. He was fined half a rupee.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 9.

THE “ST. ABBS.”—The question of the captivity in Somali land of any survivors of the crew of the St. Abbs has received a somewhat singular turn by the deposition before Captain Goodfellow, First Assistant Resident at Aden, of Hajee Othman bin Abdalla, a native of Brawa, near Magadoxa. Hajee Othman was interpreter to Mr. Kinzlebach, who was sent to inquire into the fate of Baron Von de Decken. On the death of Mr. Kinzlebach the Hajee set out on his return to Aden, but whilst on the voyage from Zanzibar he was driven to take refuge at Hushul, a port on the Somali coast. Here he met with a man who spoke no Arabic, but who was able to converse in the Somali tongue. The stranger is described as of a reddish colour, of a moderate stature, and with the right ear bored. The account he gave of himself was that he was a Banian, that some twelve or thirteen years ago he was wrecked on the Somali coast, at Howeeyah. The Somalis attacked the party and killed all but three of them, of whom he was one; the other two were in the interior. They were made to tend cattle, and had neither changed their religion nor married into a Somali family.—Englishman.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—Her Majesty’s troopship Jumna was to sail on the 12th January for Suez, with invalids and time-expired men from Bombay for England, and would also take two homeward bound batteries from Aden. The arrangements were as follows:—The details from general depot (strength 2 officers and 44 men) would be brought to Bombay by ordinary train, arriving at the Carnac Bunder at six o’clock on the morning of the 11th, and would be taken with their baggage at once on board. The invalids and time-expired men (strength 18 officers, 3 ladies and 4 children, 644 men, 56 wives, and 109 children) expected from Kurrachee on the 11th January in the steam transports Dacca and Punjab, with sailing transport Windsor Castle in tow, would on arrival be, with their baggage, transhipped at once to the Jumna. Any details that might be in Bombay awaiting passage by the Jumna would embark at six A.M. on the 11th from the Apollo Bunder, where boats and coolies were to be in readiness. The 1 and 4 batteries 21st Brigade, also proceeding to England by this opportunity, were to embark at Aden. The strength of the two batteries was as follows:—4 officers, 98 men, 7 wives, and 19 children.

RETIREMENT OF DR. ARNOTT.—The Bombay Medical Establishment is about to lose a distinguished ornament in Dr. Arnett, C.B., Inspector-General Indian Medical Department, Honorary Surgeon to the Queen. He has sent in his resignation, and will quit India next month, having, within a few weeks, completed forty years of service. His appointment as Assistant-surgeon dates from the 19th of Feb., 1829, and we believe he intends to sail for home on the 20th Feb., 1869. The following official record of his services speaks for itself:—"Inspector-General F. S. Arnett, M.D., C.B., Honorary Surgeon to her Majesty, served in medical charge of the 1st European Regiment (Fusiliers), with the Bombay Column Army of the Punjab of 1848-49; at the siege and surrender of Mooltan, battle of Goojerat, and pursuit and surrender of the Sikh army (medal and two clasps). Served as Superintending Surgeon of the Central India Field Force under the command of Major-General Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., from the commencement to the termination of the campaign, and was present at the capture of Rutgurh, the relief of Saugor, capture of Garacotta, forcing the pass of Muddenpoor, siege and capture of Jhansi, battle of the Betwa, the action of Koonch, battle of Galoolwee, capture of Calpee, battle of Moorar, capture of the Lushkur and city of Gwalior (medal and clasp and C.B.), served as Superintending Surgeon of the Gwalior Division till the suppression of the mutiny." Dr. Wright, Deputy Inspector-General, now with the Poona Division, will probably succeed to the post of Inspector-General Indian Medical Department. He was appointed Assistant-Surgeon at the end of 1837, (and has seen a great deal of active service.—Bombay Gazette.)

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CIVIL FURLONGS.

No. 3,728.—The following letter, addressed to the Accountant General, Bengal, and the extract referred to therein, are published for general information:—

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of the letter from the officiating examiner of claims, Calcutta, No. E 1,777 of Nov. 23, and in reply to forward an extract (para. 3) from a letter, No. 3,727, addressed this day (Dec. 21) to the Accountant General, Madras, from which you will observe that in calculating the amount of furlough admissible to covenanted civil servants under the rules of June 16, 1868, the period of any junior furlough taken by them under the rules in force prior to 1855 should be regarded as dies non."

Extract from a Letter from the Secretary to Government of India, Financial Department, to the Accountant-General, Madras, No. 3,727, dated 21st December.

Para. 3, Paragraph 5.—At the time the new leave rules were promulgated, an officer, who had been compelled by ill health to take, under the rules in force before those of 1855, what was called a "junior furlough" previously to having completed the residence entitling him to an ordinary furlough, was entitled to the full three years' furlough when he had completed such residence, and could also obtain leave on medical certificate up to a limit of three years; and the declaration in rule II. of the new rules that "the maximum period of furlough which can be granted to any officer during the whole period of his service is limited to six years," is qualified by the declaration in rule XXIX. that "whatever aggregate amount out of the three years' furlough and three years' sick leave under the rules until now at force at present remains to be taken by an officer under the old rules, shall remain to be taken by him under the rules now promulgated." It seems clear therefore that "junior furlough" does not form a part of the maximum of six years' furlough admissible under the new rules, but it should be treated as dies non, i.e., that it should neither be credited in an officer's account as actual service qualifying for furlough, nor debited as furlough taken. Accordingly the entry in the fifth column of your statement against the name of Mr. Robinson should be one year, nine months, and twenty-two days, and the entry in the eighth column should be supplemented with the remark that Mr. Robinson's leave may be extended up to the 4th April, 1870, on an allowance of Rs.1,000 per mensem, and may be further extended on medical certificate up to the 4th April, 1871, on a subsistence allowance of Rs.400 per mensem.

FURLOUGH APPLICATIONS.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Poona, Dec. 10.—No. 1,133.—The provincial C. in C. is pleased to notify that officers hereafter applying for furlough to Europe may send in their applications to army head quarters 90 days before the date of their intended departure. (Vide G.O.C. No. 7, of May 25, 1859; G.O.C. No. 878, of Aug. 17, 1860; and G.G.O. No. 554, of Aug. 25, 1868.)

Jan. 6.—The limit now placed on the number of officers to be absent on furlough makes it needful to regulate precedence of applications.

The C. in C. will use his own discretion as to the length of time beforehand within which applications for furlough will be received and recorded in the Adjutant-general's office; but the applications should not ordinarily be forwarded by the Adjutant-general to Govt. more than three months before the time of intended departure on furlough.

If applications be forwarded at one time in excess of the limit, precedence will ordinarily be given to the officer who has the longest period of furlough due to him. But the Government will use its discretion according to all the peculiar circumstances of each case.

Furlough once granted will not be withdrawn if the vacancy be anticipated by officers going on furlough under medical certificate.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

At the evening meeting of this society, on January 25, Sir R. I. Murchison, President, in the chair, an interesting communication was read on the "Effects on Climate of Forest Destruction in Coorg, Southern India," by Mr. George Bidie. Coorg was described as lying near the centre of the Western Ghats, chiefly on the eastern side of the range, and at an average elevation of about 3,000 feet above the sea level, but divided into a number of hills and valleys, gradually subsiding into the table-land of Mysore. Formerly it appears to have been covered with forest, but the lower slopes are now nearly denuded, and the rainfall is said to decrease with the thinness of the arboreal vegetation. As regards the elevated crests of the Ghats, which intercept the rain-bearing winds of the south-west monsoon, they would cause an abundant precipitation, whether they were covered with trees or not, but the water supply and fertility of the lower slopes and plains to the east are seriously diminished by the clearing of forest on the hills, and the result is brought about in the following way:—The natural forest acts as a check on the too rapid evaporation and carrying off by streams of the rainfall on the surface of the land. As the rain descends, it is gradually conveyed by the leaves of trees to the dense underground of shrubs and carpet of dead leaves, and below this encounters a layer of vegetable mould, which absorbs the water like a sponge. By these means, and aided by the roots of trees, the moisture is transferred to the depths of the earth and the reservoirs of springs, and thus is kept up a perennial supply of water to the lower lands; whereas rain falling on the bare surface of cleared lands runs off at once by the nearest watercourses, and none is retained to keep up the flow during the dry season. Besides which, evaporation is so much more abundant from a surface exposed to the sun than from land screened by a clothing of forest, and the flow of surface water tends to sweep away the clothing of soil and render a district utterly barren. The area of forest cleared during the last few years for coffee cultivation in Coorg amounts to 20,000 acres. Dr. Bidie's conclusion from his official tour in Coorg and Mysore was that tropical forest was the alma mater of springs and streams. Many facts were adduced in confirmation of this view, and on the influence of forests on temperature, on the composition of the air, and on animal life. Species of plants characteristic of barren soils were spreading rapidly over the cleared districts. He recommended that a belt of jungle should be preserved, at least fifty yards wide, on each bank of the upper course of the Cauvery and its tributary streams, and that the forest on the crests and slopes of hills in which important streams arise should be also carefully preserved. In the discussion which followed, Dr. Cleghorn, Conservator of Forests in Madras, testified to the care and accuracy of Dr. Bidie's report. He thought that the results of forest clearing, on the rainfall and on the drainage, were two entirely distinct questions; to the latter alone his own observations led him, under the peculiar position of Coorg, to attach serious importance. He believed after examining the water-returns of the Cauvery, that more water flowed down during the monsoon, and that the flow ceased a little earlier than it did before the late extensive clearings on the hills, but it was not sufficiently marked to warrant interference with the progress of coffee cultivation. It was of great moment that the meteorological register at Mercara should be kept with care, and the water returns of the irrigation officers in Tanjore and Coimbatore should be carefully compared with those of past years, that the earliest tendency to physical changes might be brought to the notice of Government. The frequent consultation of forest officers and executive engineers is essential to the proper management of the forests. The facts mentioned by Dr. Bidie as to the increase of insects and insectivorous birds are remarkable, and the naturalisation of certain plants from the Plains appeared to indicate local desiccation, and was worthy of notice. The proposed remedies were:—1. Conservation of forest at the head-waters of the Cauvery; 2. Broad belts along the highways, particularly on the upper side; 3. The lofty wooded crests and eastern slopes facing the plains it was especially desirable to preserve intact. Mr. George Campbell was opposed to any interference with cultivation, and advocated the construction of tanks as a means of storing up the rainfall of the monsoon in preference to stringent retention of the forests. He bore testimony to the improved management of the forests in the Central Provinces, and to the skill and energy of the departmental officers. Mr. C. R. Markham had witnessed a reckless destruction of forest in more than one district of Southern India, and believed that some Government control was desirable. The President believed that the storing up of the superabundant product of rainfall as a provision for seasons of drought was necessary even in England. A second paper was read, "on the Island of Rapa," by Captain Vine Hall. Rapa was a small island in the South Pacific, situated directly in the track of the mail steamers from Panama to New Zealand, and of great importance to us, as the only island in its vicinity possessing a good harbour. It was already used as a coaling station, and the author reproached the supineness of the English Government in allowing so desirable a station to pass under the protectorate of the French. It was distant 700 miles south-east of Tahiti, and the French took possession of it only after learning that it was selected as a coaling station of the English steamers. Captain C. W. Hope, R.N., and Sir George Grey made some observations on this paper. The following new fellows were elected:—Henry Blaine, W. L. Buller, F.R.S.; H. E. Buxton, B.A.; Colonel Elsey, R.E.; Lieutenant G. F. Harris, John Howard, C.E.; John Knox Laughton, Captain W. R. Llewellyn, R.A.; R. J. Moser, P. Rylands, M.P.; Thomas Sutherland, J. R. Sedgwick, Captain C. E. Stewart, I.A.; Colonel E. Smyth, Warrington Smyth, F.R.S.; Captain F. Trench, Lieutenant Henry Trotter, R.E.

It is also rumoured that the clothing of the army will be re-transferred to the regimental agents; this will be another saving in the right direction.

ARMY REORGANISATION.—A great Central Council is about to be established at the War-office, to which all important questions in artillery and engineer matters will be referred, instead of the decision being left, as heretofore, to individual heads of departments. The Council will consist of Lord Northbrook as President, Sir Henry Storks, the Inspector-General of Engineers, the Director-General of Ordnance, Captain Vivian, the War Lord of the Treasury, and others as members, with Colonel Milward as Secretary. We trust the Council will enjoy a longer life than the brief one sustained by the last committee which Colonel Milward was instrumental in creating.—Broad Arrow.

THE MANCHESTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The following resolution was passed at a meeting held on Friday last of the committee of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, to consult with Mr. Bazley, M.P., on the subject of mercantile representation in the Indian Council:—"That this committee is of opinion that the interest of Great Britain and India would be greatly promoted by there being on the Indian Council several representatives of the commercial interests of both countries, such members to be selected from gentlemen who are intimately acquainted with the trade of India, and can devote their time to the duties of the office." With this view the committee resolves that a deputation be organised to proceed to London early after the meeting of Parliament in order to press the subject on the attention of her Majesty's Government.

MANAGEMENT OF RECRUITS.—Under the new regulations issued from the Horse Guards, recruits sent up to Chatham from the various recruiting districts to join the Indian and other regimental depots are no longer to be accompanied by a recruiting sergeant, as has hitherto been the practice, but are to proceed entirely unattended. This new arrangement has been ordered by the authorities with the view of rendering the recruits more independent, and, at the same time, of showing the public that recruits are under no coercion, but that they have spontaneously entered an honourable profession. The first recruits coming up under the new system arrived at Chatham yesterday, and marched into the garrison unattended, and in the most orderly manner, for the purpose of joining the various regiments into which they have enlisted.—Army and Navy Gazette.

INDIA VIA BRINDISI.—The Duke of Sutherland, while on his way to Egypt with other members of the Prince of Wales's suite, has been visiting Brindisi, and seems to have examined with some attention the extensive works which are in progress at that port. After completing his inspection he was entertained at a dinner given in his honour by the authorities of the town. In proposing prosperity to Italy, his Grace said that Brindisi must undoubtedly become bon gré mal gré the port for the arrival and departure of the India mail. In a letter to the Nazione he praises very highly the management of the Southern Railway Company, and says that he and his friends were surprised at the rapidity with which the journey to Brindisi was accomplished. The Duke appears to think that special arrangements were made for him, or at all events that the servants of the company had been instructed to treat him with special attention; but the Nazione says that such was not the case. He travelled by an ordinary train, as an ordinary passenger, and it was an ordinary saloon carriage that was placed at the disposal of himself and his friends.

REARRANGEMENT OF INDIAN DIOCESES.—The Government authorities have decided on the following alterations in the dioceses of India:—1. The Central Provinces, the district of Ajmere, and the English congregations in the Central Indian Agency (except in Gwalior and Bhurtpore), and in the native States of Rajpootana, Baroda, &c., are to be placed in the Bombay diocese. 2. The Madras diocese will be increased by the addition of British Burmah, the Andamans and the English congregations in Cochin, Mysore, Travancore, and the dominions of the Nizam, including the Hyderabad Assigned Districts. 3. The Straits Settlements, now detached from India, and erected into a colonial government, will be transferred from Calcutta to the charge of the Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong. Four additional archdeacons have been sanctioned, which are to be filled by chaplains of the several dioceses on the appointment of the bishop, each archdeacon to receive 250 rupees per mensem, in addition to his chaplain's pay. The following are the new archdeacons:—Allahabad, for the North-West Provinces and Oudh; Lahore, in charge of the Punjab; Nagpore, for Central Provinces and Central India; and Rangoon, for British Burmah. The expected Lahore bishopric is indefinitely deferred, and the despatch of the Imperial Government does not even mention the appointment of coadjutor bishops as suggested by the late Bishop Cotton, and recommended by the Government of India, to be appointed without expense to the State.

ARMY REDUCTIONS.—The Army and Navy Gazette is in a position to state that the arrangements for the army, as it is to stand in the ensuing financial year, are not yet finally settled. All that has been decided upon is the withdrawal of troops from certain of our colonies, in reduction of the garrisons to be maintained in them, and a reduction in the rank and file of regiments not on the Indian establishment. Among the measures which are contemplated and most likely to be carried out are—The reduction of two subalterns at the depot of each regiment in the colonies. The reorganisation of the cavalry on the squadron system. The abolition of the grade of cornet and ensign, and the reduction of a number of subalterns. A large reduction of horses and drivers in the Artillery by means of the abolition of one line of ammunition waggons. A considerable curtailment of the staff in the colonies, and, in all probability, of that at home. The disbanding of the 4th West India Regiment, a company being added to each of the three West India Regiments remaining. The reduction of the Canadian Rifles and the Ceylon Rifles by four companies each. The new arrangements about the depots will, no doubt, cause a reduction in depot battalions. All this is most probable, but nothing is finally decided upon save the numbers to be reduced—from 9,000 to 10,000 men—and the general policy to be carried out. It will be observed that no cadre of a regiment or company of the line disappears. The reduction of officers will probably be effected by absorption, and with as little injury as possible to the interests of those concerned.—The Broad Arrow asserts that, notwithstanding the forthcoming reduction of the army, recruiting will be carried on as usual, but the number of enlistments will be checked from time to time, as may be found necessary, by raising the standard of height for recruits. This decision has been arrived at after much consideration. It would be altogether unwise to bar the army to able-bodied men by any total suspension of recruiting, even for a short period.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS OF INDIAN OFFICERS, &c.—The will of Major-General Ramsay, formerly of 1, Sussex-gardens, Hyde-park, and late of 46, Bryanston-square, who died on December 26 last, has been proved at the principal Registry of the Court of Probate by his widow Harriet Charlotte Ramsay, the sole executrix, to whom he has bequeathed all his real and personal estate. The personal property is sworn under £60,000. The will of Sir Robert William Howner, formerly of Kurrachee, K.C.B., a Major-General in the Bombay Army, who died on November 8 last, at Staunton's Hotel, Lower Berkeley-street, has been proved in London by E. C. Jones, Esq., one of the executors, power of proving the will reserved to Colonel A. Manson, the other executor. By the will he confirms the gifts of his horses and vehicles already made to his friends, Colonel Whitehill, of the 23rd N.I., Major Cornegy, Assistant Adjutant-General to Captain Nicholetts, 1st Belooch Regiment. sisters—Col. Augustus Cotgrove, Howner Emily Rowley, widow of the late Major Rowley, and Caroline Jones, wife of the said Edmund C. Jones, late of the Bombay Civil Service. Personal estate is sworn under £35,000. The will of Sir John Shaw, late of 17, Sussex-gardens, Hyde-park, Bart., who died on November 19 last, has been proved by John Lang, Esq., his nephew, David McLaren, Wm. Harvey. The personal estate is sworn under £100,000. The principal legatees are his nephews and nieces. To Wm. Muir, of the Indian Civil Service, is bequeathed the sum of £11,000; to John Muir, late of the Bengal Civil Service, £6,000; to Major-General Lang, Bombay army, £6,000; to Colonel Lang, Indian army, £6,000; to Major Woodburn, Madras army, £2,000; and to each of his servants who shall be in service at the time of his death, £100.—The will of Major-General Sir Herbert Benjamin Edwardes, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., C.B., D.C.L., LL.D., &c., late of Holles-street, Cavendish-square, has been proved at the London Registry of the Court of Probate, by his widow, Lady Emma Edwardes, to whom is bequeathed all his real and personal estate. The personal property is sworn under £16,000.—The will of Lieut.-General A. T. Maclean, Colonel of the 13th Hussars, was proved on the 14th ult., under £16,000. The gallant general had seen much service in India. He died on the 9th December last, at the age of 77.—The will of General William Henry Scott has been sworn under £40,000.—The will of Field-Marshal Sir Hew Dalrymple Ross, G.C.B., Lieutenant-Governor of Chelsea Hospital, has been sworn under £12,000.

BONUS COMPENSATION.—A correspondent of the Broad Arrow writes as follows:—What I do wish briefly to explain is this: That, dotted amongst the towns of England, Scotland and Ireland, or planted amidst their rural districts, numerous families of Indian officers exist, to whom the settlement of this question is of great, sometimes of vital importance; and that the future of many an unconscious child depends upon the success or failure of our efforts—efforts which, at all events, are supported by a thorough conviction of the justice of the cause they are exerted for. Magna est veritas et prevalebit, and corrupt though the internal administration of England may be—and I maintain it is so—such an abuse as that to which I refer can only require to be properly brought forward and explained—ay, there's the point, explained—to the House of Commons to be redressed. Retrenchment and economy are undoubtedly desirable in our affairs, but I have yet to learn that the first ought to be carried out by appropriating paltry funds belonging to the widow or the orphan, or the latter to be observed at the expense of individual members of the community. The worst of it is, that nobody understands Indian affairs; like "Cosas de España," they are things which, as Lord Dundreary puts it, "no fellar can make out." Ireland and its woes are not much-loved topics in the House of Commons, but Indian grievances are a thousand times less so; hence, unlike his colleagues, the Indian Secretary has it all his own way—no one takes the trouble to concern himself with his administration. Should the Admiralty or War-office, however, be guilty of acts of omission or commission which bear hardly upon the services under their control, their respective heads are instantly confronted in our representative house by a number of indignant members personally interested in the matter, and redress is certain. Is this fair to the Indian service? and does it not rather point to the necessity of that body being more largely represented in Parliament? But I am wandering from my subject and my object—which is not to discuss politics in the abstract. Before concluding I would remark that the matter to which I have alluded is to be brought before our "reformed House of Commons" on an early date—when I trust the infusion of new blood in that body, and the influx of members, unfettered by antique prejudices, who represent, or are supposed to represent, constituencies remarkable for social progress, will operate to obtain a fair hearing for our cause; and that members will not be wanting to support it, although it relates to a body of fellow-countrymen who cannot be present in person to do so. If this is the case, I do not despair of substantial justice being at last awarded and the matter fairly set at rest, as it ought to have been years ago, even when Lord Cranborne wrote (would that he had acted on the principles he enunciated), "I think it clear that if your servants have been largely damaged by any sudden or unexpected act of yours, the principle that is or ought to be observed in every branch of the public service is, that we ought to do something to compensate them."

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's)
ESSENCE OF FLUID EXTRACT OF RED
JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.
"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."— Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.
CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.
It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea,
daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raging fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.
Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

SAUCE—LEA & PERRINS.—SAUCE. THE "WORCESTERSHIRE,"

Pronounced by Connoisseurs,
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."

Its use improves appetite and digestion.
UNRIVALLED FOR PIQUANCY AND FLAVOUR.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

LEA and PERRINS, on all Bottles and Labels.
ASK FOR "LEA AND PERRINS'" SAUCE.

Sold by all dealers in Sauces throughout the World.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—AGUA

AMARELLA restores the human hair to its pristine hue, no matter at what age. JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have at length, with the aid of one of the most eminent chemists, succeeded in perfecting this wonderful liquid. It is now offered to the public in a more concentrated form, and at a lower price. Sold in bottles, 3s.
each; also 5s., 7s. 6d., and 15s. each, including brush.
JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have been appointed Perfumers to H. R. H. the Princess of Wales.—Angel-passage, 93, Upper Thames-street, London.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.
Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

NESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PUL-MONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India,
I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 16; Agra and Calcutta, January 12; Madras, January 11.

The Bombay papers announce Lord Mayo's arrival at Calcutta on the 12th January. The Feroze steamed from Madras at three A.M. on the 8th—his lordship having good-naturedly agreed to stay and meet "a select party" at Grundy-park on Wednesday evening—anchored on the 10th off Saugor, reached Diamond-harbour at noon of the 11th, and the new Viceroy landed at Chandpal Ghat on the evening of the 12th. A "brilliant assemblage" greeted him as he stepped on shore, and the road to Government-house was "lined with spectators." At Government-house his lordship was received by Sir John Lawrence, the Hon. Mr. Grey, and the Members of Council. The whole of the troops in garrison were under arms. The firing of a second salute of twenty-one guns from Fort William ere long announced that the Earl of Mayo had taken the oaths of office, and that his predecessor had ceased officially to be.

BEFORE leaving Madras, the new Viceroy had given an encouraging answer to a deputation from the Madras Chamber of Commerce. On the question of railways and irrigation works he avowed himself quite at one with Lord Salisbury. Public opinion was now ripe to spur on the Government to great undertakings in that direction. His lordship spoke hopefully about railway extension in Madras, and thought that the Indian Government had better consult the most eminent engineers at home on the subject of a harbour and breakwater for the city itself. He also discussed the cotton prospects of the Presidency, and hinted his dislike to interfering with the course of trade in the manner exemplified by the Cotton Frauds Act. Altogether, his visit gained him a large supply of homage from the residents of Madras, to whom the presence of a real Viceroy must have seemed like the fulfilment of a wild dream. Ever since his departure they have been wondering whom he resembled most in face and figure. Paul Bedford, Prince Napoleon, Sir R. Peel, Sir J. Lawrence, besides others of less note, have each in turn been quoted as his personal counterpart.

THE date of Sir John Lawrence's departure was postponed to January 19, when he purposed leaving India as a private passenger in the P. and O. Company's steamer Candia. The Feroze being out of repair, and no other Government steamer ready to replace it, this was Sir John's only alternative to engaging a separate steamer at great cost to the State. It seems strange that a spare vessel could not have been found for the late head of the Indian Government. But Sir John never cared for display, and his voyage home will harmonise all the better with the quiet current of his last days in the Indian capital. Hitherto he has received but one farewell address—from the bishop and clergy. Another however was being signed by the "non-official community." The members of the Services gave him a farewell dinner on the night of January 11; Sir W. Mansfield, as chairman, toasting the late Viceroy in a brilliant speech, to which Sir John made an effective answer, greeted with frequent bursts of cheering.

SOME of his last official acts are worth recording. He has just doubled the standard weight of an ordinary half-anna letter. At the last sitting of his Legislative Council, held for the passing of the Bill to define the rights and privileges of the Oudh Talookdars, he announced the purpose of the Government to lend money to Talookdars in debt or difficulties, on the principles already applied in Bombay to the owners of burdened estates. He has also crowned a number of statesmanlike measures for mitigating the famine with an order for the suspension of octroi duties on grain in all those parts of the North-West Provinces, Oudh, the Punjab, and Central India, where scarcity or high prices prevail. No tolls are for the present to be levied at any ferry, bridge or road, without the Lieutenant-governor's express sanction, on carts or animals employed in carrying grain. The railway charge on grain destined for the famine-stricken provinces has also, by Sir John's order, been reduced one-half.

THE final passing of the Oudh Bill took place before a strong deputation of Talookdars, headed by Sir Man Singh himself. The Rajah of Bulrampore, as premier Talookdar and member of Council, avowed himself thoroughly satisfied, both for himself and his companions, with the new law. In reply to some kindly sentences spoken by Sir W. Mansfield, the departing Viceroy expressed his sorrow at leaving India, but owned that breaking health and advancing years warned him after his long services to seek timely rest from the cares of State.

In his speech at the banquet of the 11th Sir W. Mansfield quoted the saying popularly ascribed to Lord Hardinge, that during the Sutlej campaign John Lawrence was the man to whom his Lordship chiefly looked for supplies. We had a notion that Jotee Pershad was our rock of trust in those days; but the remark, whether precisely true or not, bears witness to the prevalent belief in Sir John's administrative energy so far back as 1845. Sir John's own speech in answer was a frankly modest review of his past career, in which the tenderness underlying a rough exterior showed itself in the kindly references to his fellow-workers and the people of India. A storm of sustained cheering proved the force of his appeal to his two hundred and fifty hearers for justice and kindness towards the natives. In defending his foreign policy he declared that he "had never kept back from war when honour and justice required it," but protested against continuing a war after its true end had been accomplished, as in the cases of Bhotan and Hazara.

A RECENT telegram from Calcutta mentions the likelihood of Sir D. Macleod's coming down to that city to arrange with the new Viceroy the terms of an alliance with Shere Ali. Some of the Indian papers indeed have settled part of the question for themselves, affirming that the Ameer is to get six lakhs of rupees and 20,000 stand of arms. By a still later telegram we learn that a meeting may after all take place at Peshawar between the Ameer and Lord Mayo.

WITH regard to the famine, no efforts seem to have been spared by the Indian Governments to mitigate the suffering they could not have averted. Public works are progressing everywhere without regard to expense; committees are gathering subscriptions for the relief of the more helpless; and the Central Government is working the telegraphs for the purpose of issuing orders and getting in the latest reports. While the Indian papers however are full of these matters, the telegraph has brought us much later and more cheering news. Rajpootana must still we fear be a heavy sufferer, but most of Upper India has in all likelihood been saved from a like misfortune by the timely rainfall towards the end of January. In the most distressed portions of the North-West Provinces "a very sufficient fall" had occurred before the 30th. Rain has also brightened the prospects of the Punjab, and even in parts of Rajpootana heavy showers have fallen, with the promise of more to come. The standing crops in the Central Provinces may yet come to good, and the wells about Nagpore have probably been filled. The rain in the North-West has already lowered prices and replenished the canals. There is time yet, we learn, to re-sow the fields with quick-growing crops, while those now standing have been saved from certain ruin.

THE reduced rates of telegrams in India have already borne fruit. In the first month of the new rates—a rupee for every ten words—there was naturally a loss of Rs. 8,000. But the returns for the very next month—November—show a gain of Rs. 3,500 on paying messages. A still larger profit is expected for December. There is nothing like low prices in the long run, if our English railway companies would but see it.

THE Calcutta papers speak of two smart shocks of earthquake there on the 10th ult., between four and five P.M. A series of "sharp vibrations" was followed by "a strong undulatory movement" a little to the north of east. Then came another series of vibrations. Altogether it was "the severest shock of earthquake known for many years. People at once looked for "bad advices from the east," which presently came in the form that reached this country a fortnight ago. No later news has yet been received from Silchar and Cachar, where the worst damage was done.

THE Bengal Government has named 1871 as the time for taking a census of the whole province or set of provinces called Bengal. Preliminary measures and calculations will be taken at once, with the aid of zemindars, putneedars, and village headmen, in order to familiarise the people with the process. A memorandum explaining the real aim of these measures and disclaiming all covert designs against the people's pockets has also been published.

ACCORDING to another recent telegram, the Coolie tribes on the Sylhet and Cachar frontiers have broken out into revolt. We were not aware of the existence of Coolies as a tribe, whatever may be said of them as a class. Perhaps for "Coolie" we ought to read Cole. The Coles and other hill tribes may again be troublesome, though it is not long since we heard of their final pacification.

THE Bombay Government have at length appointed a commission to consider how Bombay shall be properly drained and watered, with special reference to the plans of Captain Tulloch and Mr. Russell-Aitken.

WE are sorry to see from the letter of "Miles," which appears in the present issue, that the locomotive fever which has long been raging at the War Office in this country has spread of late years to India also. Once on a time, under ordinary circumstances, a regiment in India remained in the same cantonments for three or four years together. Officers and men knew that, apart from special emergencies, they might lay their account with the spending of a certain time in one place—an assurance of very great moment to every officer, to all the married men of whatever rank, and to the great bulk of the native troops. Now however all this is changed. Sir William Mansfield has caught the infection from this country, and regiments in India are ordered about with a frequency not more expensive to the State than ruinous to numbers of those immediately concerned. What is the use of it we cannot see. These annual movements are bad alike for regimental discipline and for the pockets of officers and men. They also defeat the objects for which soldiers' gardens, workshops, and reading-rooms have been set on foot by the late and the present Commander-in-Chief. The only people who benefit by them are the station tradesmen, who buy in from one set of officers at an almost nominal value the goods they can sell back to another set at an enormous profit. Officers, it may be said, have no business with much furniture; but officers' wives can hardly be expected to make shift with a charpoy, a camp-table, a chillumchee, and a pair of pit-tarabs, nor can their children revel in the nakedness that comes natural to native householders of the poorer class.

WHILE only two or three of the great English prisons have gone far to solve the problem of making prisoners earn their keep, British India can show some cheering instances of success in the same direction. In the jails of the North-Western Provinces the average earning of each prisoner engaged in industrial labour in 1867-8 was Rs. 50-6-6½, or a trifle over five pounds, which reduced the average cost of each prisoner for that year to Rs. 39-7-1½. In the Central Provinces each prisoner's average earnings for the same year amounted to £3. 4s. 9½d., leaving a balance against the State of about the same sum, or £3s. 7s. 10½d. The Bengal jails show a higher average of net cost—£5. 6s. 6½d.—for each prisoner; but even here the total cost of Rs. 15,16,417-11-2 was reduced by the total earnings of the prisoners to Rs. 10,75,179-4-11½. Much of this higher average in Bengal is probably due to the expenses of the European Penitentiary at Hazaribagh, where each prisoner costs as much as £38. 6s. 6d. At Bancoorah, on the other hand, the outlay on each native convict is no more than £3. 10s. 3½d. In Alipore jail 392 prisoners employed in printing earned as much as £55. 6s. 9½d. each, or more than four times their average cost. Out of a daily average of 17,245 prisoners in Bengal jails only 2,819, or 4.79 per cent., were unemployed through sickness, old age, or other causes. Of the remainder 55.85 per cent. were engaged in remunerative and useful handicrafts; 2.27 per cent. as printers in the Alipore Jail, and 9.88 as jail servants, warders, work-overseers, and so forth. The women are usually employed in spinning, weaving, and knitting.

"A STRUGGLER FOR REDRESS" informs us, for the benefit of those concerned, that the memorial regarding bonus compensation is now lying for signature at Messrs. Grindlay and Co.'s, in Parliament-street. This specially concerns retired officers, but separate petitions to the same effect can always be sent in for presentation to Parliament by aggrieved officers who may still be in the service. The more petitioners there are, of course the better chance will there be of a successful issue. The two illustrations of hardship caused by want of due compensation for an acknowledged right could easily be capped by dozens more. When we consider that senior subalterns who, under the old system, would have received their seven, eight, or nine hundred pounds on retiring, have now, after many years' waiting, got back nothing at all, or next to nothing at the best, it is easy to imagine the loss entailed on many households to whom the few hundred pounds made all or nearly all the difference between competence and downright poverty.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, February 10, 1869.

WAIFS AND STRAYS.

No one accustomed to pass along the streets of London can have failed to remark, amidst the sea of white faces which everywhere meets his gaze, an occasional countenance of a different and more swarthy tint, appertaining to a figure clad generally in bizarre and incongruous costume; and almost every one, when he does so remark this, knows—for the sight has become a common one—that the owner of the face and figure is a native of India.

Nor, in these days, have many people much doubt of the nationality of the shivering, shrinking figure wrapped in dirty cotton rage, who, crouching beneath the shelter of some friendly wall, mutely appeals to our compassion as we pass him by—or of that of the crossing sweeper, with his bright Asiatic expression of face, so different from our own, who, dressed in hybrid garments, is no unusual object to be encountered in this mighty Babylon of ours. But do we, whilst regarding these poor waifs and strays upon the mighty stream of English life, ever pause to inquire what they are doing here, and how they come to have crossed the thousands of miles of ocean which divide their country from ours, merely, most of them, to need our charity? The subject is one for the consideration of which we believe the time has now arrived, and which, in the interests of humanity, we feel impelled to bring before our readers. When an English gentleman quits India for England he frequently takes with him as an attendant on the voyage, and with a view to his employment as a servant afterwards, some native of Hindostan, who often after a long course of faithful and meritorious service has become attached to his person and fortunes. So far so good. Master and man duly land at Southampton, and the experiences of English life forthwith commence. Supposing the man to behave himself decently well, there is no fear—provided the master is a person of integrity and conscience—that his interests will suffer; but suppose, as is sometimes the case, the employer is neither of these, or suppose that he die—ay, here's the rub—what becomes of the servant? With a few shillings in his pocket, probably, or perchance a few pounds, he is thrown upon the wide world, an Oriental stranger, alone amidst a people whose language, manners, religion, and ideas are totally opposed to his own. How is he to earn his daily bread? Who will employ him as servant? And he wails, and generally wails in vain for a reply to this question; ruin and starvation now stare him in the face; under the influence of despair he probably soon copies the vices of his pale-faced brethren, and takes to drink and other evil courses; the end is then not far distant, and he may for a season stave off the advent of the great destroyer by selling tracts or begging, but his gains are scanty, his Oriental constitution is undermined by the severity of our climate, and ere long he sinks to die, unknown or unnoticed, in a gutter. And if the reader think this picture overdrawn, let him attend the London hospitals, or seek information on the subject from the City Missionaries. One episode in the sad story of these stranger visitors to our shores we will give before concluding. Last year some English railway contractors, by means of representations and promises, which we have no hesitation in stigmatising as disgracefully false, induced a whole troop of natives of Cawnpore (men, women, and children) to leave the country of their birth to seek their fortunes in what they probably were told was a very Eldorado—this land of ours. These poor people, who were by profession and caste—for in India the terms are synonymous—jugglers and conjurors, duly reached our shores, and by the exercise of their professional skill amassed a considerable fortune for their employers. But, alas, ere long these latter, engaged in certain commercial speculations, which turned out disastrously for themselves, were arrested, and confined in Whitecross-street Prison. What then was to become of their unhappy employés? Thrown out of their occupation, they were left positively to starve. Had Sir Stafford Northcote not stepped forward at this juncture and authorised the grant of free passages to them to India, they must positively have done so. All honour to the promptness with which this was done, by which a fearful catastrophe was avoided.

We do not desire to conclude these remarks without throwing out a suggestion, by the adoption of which, we believe, the abuse alluded to may be alleviated, if not altogether removed. It is merely the resuscitation of an old regulation which was in force in Bombay between the years 1846 and 1855. By this it was enacted that any European taking away with him out of our Indian possessions a native of them, should deposit a sum of £50 in the hands of Government, such sum to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and to be returned to the depositor on the safe arrival within the shores of India of the native of it so taken away, or, failing this, on satisfactory proof being furnished of his death.

ONE SIDE OF THE CENTRAL-ASIAN QUESTION.

It is a good thing to hear both sides of the question, especially when it concerns Englishmen so nearly as does the question discussed in an excellent pamphlet now before us on the character of our Eastern policy.* Carefully reasoned and temperate in treatment, this new indictment of the policy pursued by Sir John Lawrence towards Afghanistan is evidently the work of no ordinary thinker, no rash assailant of the “masterly inactivity” observed by the departing viceroy in respect of his relations with the Powers on India's North-western Frontier. Its clear and coherent reasoning, set off by a style at once easy, sober, and dignified, has little in common with the extravagances and assumptions of a host of noisier combatants on the same side. Instead of wild declamations founded mainly on misty guesswork, the writer prefers fair argument from well-considered if not always sufficient premises. Believing firmly in the approach of a “day of trial” which shall decide the question of our supremacy in Hindostan, he has no wish to precipitate the issue by any rash movement on our part against Russia or Afghanistan. We are not bidden to occupy Quettah, Herat, or Candahar, by way of precaution against a danger which, under any circumstances, must still be far off, and which may even avert itself without our interference through the natural tendency of an overgrown empire to break asunder from its own unwieldiness. Neither as friend nor foe would he have us enter Afghanistan in arms, so turning into active enemies the very people whose help we need as allies against the Power that already sways the destinies of Central Asia. But he has strong opinions as to the failure of the policy we have for some years past been pursuing towards our Afghan neighbours, and deeply regrets the sleepy acquiescence of the British public in the theory that sees no danger to our Indian Empire from the slow but steady advance of our great Northern rival.

There are two sides to most questions, and this of Russian progress is clearly no exception to the rule. With Russian outposts skirting the Oxus and threatening the borders of Afghan Turkistan, we may well be exhorted to keep a sharp eye on the course of events in Central Asia, and to ask ourselves afresh what all these movements mean with reference to British India and the States adjacent. Even Mr. Grant Duff, who is anything but an alarmist, owns that the meeting of the Sepoy and the Cossack on the banks of the Oxus "has become a much less improbable contingency" than it was some years ago, before Russia had made her influence felt in Khiva, had swallowed up half Khokand, and got Bokhara "within her gripe." To him, indeed, it is not certain that such a meeting would be necessarily warlike. The rivalry, he holds, may be one of peaceful trade, and we may yet "hear of a co-operative policy in Central Asia, as we have heard already of a co-operative policy in Pekin." There is much to say for this reading of the future, which certainly accords with our own. But we are now concerned with another writer, who inclines to the opposite or warlike side of the question. He reminds us that Russia keeps on expanding, in accordance with the same natural law that made us masters of India. We are warned that the process which has brought her to the Oxus will some day bring her, if we make no effort to thwart it, to the gates of Hindostan. Her policy "has ever been and would still seem to be aggressive." She may have "no intention of immediately invading India," having first to consolidate her empire in Central Asia, to make Persia her obedient slave, and to gain possession of Afghanistan. All that will take time. Besides, the future rivals are still at peace with each other, England has still an ally in France, America is not ready to take part in a general war, and Russia herself has no idea of precipitating events. But she knows her strength, and has yet to learn by sad experience the danger of extending her frontiers "to any conceivable limit." A Russian invasion of India under right conditions is just as feasible as the invasion of India by Alexander two thousand years ago. The conqueror of Afghanistan would inevitably "dominate the whole of Central Asia and Upper India." "No troops that India Proper can send into the field could meet an army composed of disciplined Afghans and border tribes." The Sikhs are good soldiers, but scarce; while the bulk of our best soldiers are Mohammedans from Afghanistan and the neighbouring States. In the event of a war with Russia, what trust could we place in these?

Look too, says the author of the pamphlet, at the decrease in our own native army since the Mutiny, as compared with the number of troops maintained by native chiefs within our borders. Of these troops a certain proportion—10,000 in Gwalior alone—are as well drilled as our own sepoys. Are they to be trusted in time of need? Then the tribes within and beyond our borders can muster, according to Sir R. Temple and Mr. R. H. Davies, some 215,000 fighting men. Would not these also turn against us at the critical moment under the influence of Russian gold or of promised plunder? Many of them did so in the Sittana campaign at the first check received by our arms. The Persian army could furnish the invading Power with a contingent of 40,000 or 50,000 regular troops. From the three Khanates Russia could obtain a force of 40,000 men, while Afghanistan would contribute "100,000 splendid soldiers" for the purpose of avenging herself on English and Hindustanians alike. Once mistress of Afghanistan, or at least sure of Afghan co-operation, Russia would thus be enabled to launch against us a native army 230,000 strong, an army not less numerous and composed of far better stuff than any we could array against her in British India; our troops moreover being scattered over a vast area, and having not only to guard a very long frontier, but to keep watch on an equal number of troops employed by the native princes.

Be it remembered too that our native army, under the present system of officering and arming it, is wretchedly organised for aught more serious than a petty frontier war. It is armed with a weapon far inferior to the native matchlock, and the badness of its organisation on the irregular principle was proved as far back as the Bhotan campaign. Treachery is also active within our own dominions, for it is clear that the rising of the tribes in Sittana was "fomented if not actually hatched by Mohammedans in the heart of Bengal." That all these sources of danger may some day be found combining for our destruction is a likelihood foreseen by many military men in India who "have proved themselves to be as able politicians as they are brave and gallant soldiers." The tautology, be it observed, is not ours. The opinions of these "brave and gallant" gentlemen have influenced the tone of the Anglo-Indian press quite as much as the "military ardour" of their less intelligent comrades. "Where there is much smoke there is certain to be some fire," and the press of England would do well to heed the warnings of Anglo-Indian journalists, and try to ascertain how much fire may lie hidden beneath all that smoke. In view of Russia's recent progress people ought to revise their old opinions. What Sir H. Lawrence wrote before the Mutiny cannot fairly be applied to present circumstances, for he reckoned neither on the reduction of our native army, nor on a frontier rising "fomented by rebels in the heart of Bengal." Were Sir Henry alive now, he would probably have liked to qualify the expression of his firm belief that Russia "will never put her foot in Hindostan;" for even he saw the necessity of preparing "for a Russian army at Herat simultaneously with an American fleet at Bombay."

And what, asks the writer, has after all been the policy pursued of late years by the Indian Government? The late Viceroy's "masterly inactivity" has not even been consistently inactive. In Afghanistan, for instance, he did interfere at the wrong moment, in behalf of the wrong cause. The countenance long unwisely withheld from Shere Ali was actually bestowed on Afzul Khan, to the extent of acknowledging his sway over Kabul and Kandahar. At the same time Shere Ali was recognised as ruler of Herat; so that Sir J. Lawrence proved his "inactivity" by sanctioning the dismemberment of the Afghan kingdom. This threw Shere Ali into the arms of Russia, estranging him, of course, from his English neighbours, and convincing the whole nation of our bad faith. Had the lawful Ameer been aided betimes with English arms and money, he might have held his ground from the beginning as our grateful ally, instead of regaining his kingdom in our despite, after a struggle which must have left him our secret foe, ready to stir up against us the tribes on our North-Western frontier. Our ill-timed parsimony will yet cost us millions of money and thousands of lives. In India itself there prevails a natural belief in England's powerlessness to check Russia's advance. Nor has the Indian Government increased the goodwill of its subjects by its fiscal measures, its municipal commissions, its interference with the land-tenures of Oudh and the Punjab, and its well-meant but over-hasty legislation. Native princes have been frightened by the deposition of the Nawab of Tonk, and the late proceedings with regard to the will of the Kupperthulla Raja's father.

Thus ends our brief but not unfair summary of the Central Asian Question, as viewed from "an Eastern standpoint." Another week we may examine the writer's arguments, and see if others have not more to say on the opposite side of the question.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The memorial for presentation to Parliament regarding compensation to retired Indian officers for the loss of their regimental bonus is now lying at Messrs. Grindlay's, 55, Parliament-street, for signature.

Whilst working in the good cause, cases of peculiar hardship have come under my observation, amongst them the following:—

An officer who had his bungalow burnt down during the Mutiny, and was afterwards wrecked on his homeward voyage, losing with his property every document he possessed, was denied compensation by the Bonus Committee in Calcutta, because he could not produce proofs of his claim! although the rules framed for the guidance of each applicant set forth that he should state on honour the sums he had expended in purchasing out his seniors, thus apparently leaving a margin for such cases. It appears the more arbitrary to insist on proofs, as officers having no object in keeping them rarely did so, for whether one had paid tens, hundreds, or thousands of pounds in climbing the ladder, or had reached the summit without any outlay, it neither enhanced nor deteriorated from the sum he would have received on retirement—namely, the value of his step.

Another case illustrates the ruinous consequences accruing to the widow and orphan, if the extra pension (given for obvious reasons already explained in your columns) be allowed to stand in the false light of compensation for the lost bonus.

An officer (a loser of a regimental bonus), after drawing an extra pension for two years and nine months, died, leaving his widow with lessened means at a most critical period—namely, the education of her children. How can this extra pension, enjoyed for so short a period, be weighed against the tangible sum which would have remained for the benefit of the bereaved and struggling family? Though the reticent nature of the English gentlewoman shrinks from making a parade of her privations, hiding them with heroic firmness, even as the Spartan boy did the fox beneath his vest, her life is none the less sad or embittered by the concealed cares which surround her. Such instances are by no means uncommon, and many other families stand now on the same perilous brink of comparative poverty, stayed only by the frail tenure of human life; it therefore behoves us, whilst that life is spared, to let the thought of "the future of our children" be as a talisman to stimulate us to earnest and vigorous action, for if honour and justice are realities, and not empty sounds, failure is impossible. Believing in the discernment and single-heartedness of those who will hold the fates of ourselves and our families in their trusty hands, I feel that I shall prove no leader of a "forlorn hope," but resting under the flag of victory be no longer

A STRUGGLER FOR REDRESS.

"BANKRUPT OFFICERS."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The order lately issued by the Commander-in-Chief in India, on the subject of officers becoming bankrupt, may be an excellent one; but the question is, how far do the authorities, by their want of consideration, contribute to their becoming so? Any officer who has lately served in India must have observed how much more frequently regiments are moved about since the Mutiny.

When Sir W. Mansfield first took command of the Bengal Army he was actuated by a very laudable desire to keep every regiment as near three years as possible in the same station, thus saving officers, especially married ones, from many great expenses. He seems now however quite to have given way, and to order regiments about as much as any of his predecessors. I have heard many officers complain of the ruinous expense they are put to in constantly selling off at a great sacrifice everything they possess when compelled to march.

I can for myself state that during the last five years I served in the native army of India I was in seven different stations, although all the time with the same regiment. Rather a wonder you will say to be five years with the same corps in these days.

This constant moving makes many married officers prefer leaving their families behind them in England, at a great expense, to taking them to India to be knocked about all over the country every twelve months. Sometimes also, as we witnessed the other day, regiments are ordered to move in the "annual relief," and after they have sold off everything are directed to stand fast.

What with bands and messes, with only six officers to keep them up in the native army, and constant marching from station to station, the only wonder is that more officers do not become bankrupt.—Yours truly,

MILES.

THE LATE VICEROY.

The Bombay Gazette asserts, that high up among the men who have made England powerful and illustrious in the East, the name of Sir John Lawrence finds a conspicuous place. We are not now speaking of the rank he will take as a Governor-General, we abstain for the present from attempting to judge his five years' toil, but of his rank as a member of the Indian Civil Service. Criticism has a right to institute a minute inquiry into the acts of his reign, to measure what he has done, to point out what he has left undone, and to pass a verdict on that portion of his life; but on this day, at least, we prefer the larger to the microscopic treatment; and desire simply to record the estimate delivered by contemporary judgment when casting a retrospective glance along the eventful road which it has been his good fortune to tread. For twenty years his name has been familiar, not only to the English in India, but to the English at Home, and the Mutiny spread it abroad in all lands and in all tongues. And his acts justified a wide repute, shedding a lustre on the service to which he belonged. We say this, conscious that he never loved Bombay, never visited Western India nor this spacious port, never did justice to this Presidency. But injustice and neglect cannot blind us to the fact that he always did his work zealously, and that, in the main, he did it conspicuously well. He has won his laurel, in war as well as peace, and may he live long to wear it in a tranquil home.

MISRULE AT BARODA.

The Hindu Reformer can see no other cure for the misgovernment of Baroda than to place the country under British rule. Is the British Government—it asks—to be prevented from discharging its most solemn duty to the unfortunate millions of Baroda by any morbid fear that it will be charged with having cloaked ambition under a pretext of humanity? The past has clearly demonstrated what the Government of Baroda is to receive, in future, from her ruler. There is not a scintillation of hope of self-regeneration on the part of the Baroda Durbar; and it is our firm conviction that nothing short of the remedy we have above suggested can ever succeed in improving it. Has Sir Seymour Fitzgerald any ambition to leave his mark on the history of Western India?

NATIVE IDEAS OF ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM.

The Dacca Prakash exhorts the British Indian Association to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the election of a new Parliament, amongst the members of which the Liberals predominate. Now is the time for the British Indian Association to stand up for the rights of Bengal, especially since Messrs. Bright and Fawcett, who have before this spoken in India's cause, are among the Liberals. The primary requirement is permission to hold the Civil Service examination in India. The next request should be to have the power of nominating members of the Municipal Committee wrested from Government and vested in the people, who should be permitted to vote; or to re-establish the system of arbitration for the management of municipal works. The last is the demand for more money for the education of Indian youth. The time has not yet come when the people will educate their sons at their own expense, hence it devolves on Government to assist them. The fruits of this outlay will be reaped very largely at some future period. Bribery and corruption amongst the lower orders of police officials will never be prevented so long as travelling and diet allowance is not permitted them. When a constable is sent to investigate a case in some distant village, he has to pay his own boat hire, besides the feed of his horse; this sometimes amounts to twelve or fifteen rupees—a sum almost equal to his pay. To meet these extra expenses, he is induced to exact small sums from various parties; besides this, he is obliged to hurry through his business, in order to curtail his expenses, thereby often leaving a case partially investigated.

GOVERNMENT-AIDED SCHOOLS.

The Sumachar Chundrika holds that these schools are not accomplishing the good for which they were intended. The inspectors and their deputies, though they receive their legitimate wages, yet appear unmindful of their duties. It is their duty to appoint teachers and professors for the schools under their supervision, instead of which this responsibility is placed on the managers, who make it a point to assist their relatives to those offices, whether they are competent or otherwise. Again, the power of nominating these managers is vested in the zemindars, who are unfit for such a trust, for it will, in many instances, be found that these men are extremely lazy and illiterate, in fact even unable to conduct their own zemindary duties. Some managers are so deceitful as to pay the pundits less than that which has been sanctioned by Government. Even this reduced rate of salary is often permitted to fall into arrears for six months or more. The officials should thoroughly revise these institutions and keep them under strict supervision.

THE STAFF CORPS.

The Madras Mail takes advantage of the presence of Earl Mayo in Madras to place before him a few of the wants of that large, and often much neglected, and always despised Presidency. It commences with the local army. The great question of Indian Army Reform is one that must soon be grappled with, and Lord Mayo should at once advise the closing of the staff corps against any further admissions, and a return to the regimental system of promotion. The staff corps has served the purpose of those who were instrumental in creating it, and it is very probable that Lord Mayo will find on his arrival in Calcutta less opposition to a change on the part of his military advisers than might be expected from those who are responsible for having led the Home Government into this great blunder. Surely there cannot be a greater reproach to the military administration of the Government of India than to see in every large military station throughout this empire field officers by scores without employment, and disgusted at being forced to remain in India in idleness. It is said that at the large military station of Bangalore the general officer commanding the division has given up employing these doing-duty field officers in any capacity whatever, on parade, as he can never get an order carried by them correctly, and if these veterans once get out of his sight they seldom return. How can it be otherwise when field officers of thirty and five-and-thirty years' service have no other employment than to act as orderlies on parade? His lordship is recommended to study carefully the minute written by Major-general Sir William Denison on the army question, when the new organisation was forced on the Madras army in 1865.

NEED OF A RED SEA CABLE.

The Times of India, with regard to the projected line of submarine telegraph, submits that only by this scheme can the difficulties attending Indo-European telegraphy be reduced to a minimum. It has been objected to this route that it does not provide a "line free from end to end of all political complications." Well, it does not; but what route will? And whilst the Persian Gulf Telegraph is beset with difficulties of this nature, they are on the Red Sea line all but avoided. It must cross 180 miles of Egyptian territory; but the telegraph there is entirely in the hands of an English company, removed altogether from Government control. The French and Italian lines would, no doubt, continue to be used, for some time at least, for the conveyance of Indian messages; but France and Italy are by no means the inhospitable countries that large tracts of Russia and Persia are. Besides, it is not impossible but a direct submarine line may yet be laid between Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta, thus securing direct and independent communication between England and India. Another objection which has been advanced against this Red Sea line is its cost. A submarine cable must originally cost more than a land wire, the amount being greater or less according to the conditions under which each is constructed. We are not aware what the estimated cost of the submarine line from Suez may be, but it will certainly not be much greater than that of a line traversing wild and barren countries, such as Persia, the Mekran Coast, and the Runn of Cutch. Messrs. Siemens' capital is £450,000, and if to this is added the cost of the Persian and Indian lines, which alone make Messrs. Siemens' line of any value, surely the objection as to cost is disposed of. If the £80,000 expended yearly by Government as expenses and subsidies were guaranteed for a term of years to the Anglo-Indian line, should it prove itself more efficient than the other, we do not anticipate there would be any difficulty as to cost. Besides, the increased expenditure would soon be met by increased traffic. Speed has well been termed the life blood of telegraphy; and in reply to Mr. Crawford's question—"If you could get a message from the head of the Persian Gulf to England in half a day, the traffic you think would be very much increased?"—Mr. Walton replied, "The traffic would be doubled, no doubt," and stated his belief that the Government of India lose £60,000 per annum through the bad working of the Continental lines, which cause much delay. Moreover, the rates by the Red Sea Cable might safely be increased if the time of transmission could only be reduced, for in telegraphy more markedly than in any thing else, "time is money." Nor can we doubt that, direct and reliable communication once established between England and India, the system would soon be extended to China and Australia, leading to an enormous increase of traffic. From eleven to twelve days of postal service are saved by the Atlantic cable; twenty or twenty-one would be saved by the direct Anglo-Indian line, and a still greater proportion from places east of Bombay. Bearing this in mind, as well as the fact that the traffic between India and England is much in excess of that between England and America, it is impossible to point out a route more assured of success than that by the Red Sea. If then a Government guarantee cannot be obtained, private enterprise need not shrink from the undertaking. The line would in a very short time defy competition, and the present Indo-European Telegraph would soon disappear, as completely as have the lakhs required to construct and maintain it.

THE AFFAIRS OF PRINCE AZEEM JAH.

The Madras Athenæum suggests that there is an excellent opportunity at the present moment for the Governor-general elect and Lord Napier to come to some understanding on the subject of Prince Azeem Jah's claims. The wretched muddle that has inflicted such loss and suffering upon his Highness, and reflected such discredit on our rule, was due to a misunderstanding between the Government of Madras and the Government of India. The recommendations of the Government of Madras were of a fair and judicious character, and would have been willingly accepted at home had they not been opposed by the Supreme Government. Besides the discredit and delay it has involved, this opposition has cost already about ten lacs of rupees; still worse, the Government, in its anxiety to remedy the blunder, and preserve its consistency, contemplates committing the serious error of violating its engagement with the Prince. These engagements were entered into only two years ago, they were formally recorded and have been notified by the Secretary of State. By them the Prince is guaranteed a revenue of three lacs per annum. If Government now withholds from him one-third of that income in order to repay an advance made necessary by its own mistakes, no sophistry will be able to disguise the delinquency. The political engagements of the British Government should be held as sacred as if they were legally binding, more especially when they apply to persons who are wholly in its power. The shortsighted and expensive parsimony that has caused the ruin of Prince Azeem Jah by the measures intended for his benefit cannot be too soon reversed. Let the unanimously adopted recommendation of two successive Governments of Madras be adopted by Lord Mayo, and let this troublesome matter be set at rest for ever. To keep the sore open will prove as costly in the future as it has done in the past.

MILITARY.—H.M.'s 77th arrived at Jhelum on the morning of the 2nd, halted on the 3rd, and marched en route to Agra on the 4th. The 5th battery of the 25th brigade of Artillery, en route to Abbotabad, reached Jhelum on the 4th and marched on the 5th instant. The 9th Bengal Cavalry from Hazara en route to Mean Meer marched into the same station on the 5th. We understand that a squadron of the regiment has been left behind, one-half at Oghes, the other at Hurreepoor.—The 20th Regiment, Native Infantry, is to be held in readiness to proceed to Tellingang, the new station beyond the Salt Range; and we understand that the Government have at length resolved to maintain permanently one native cavalry and two infantry regiments at Jhelum, one infantry regiment at Tellingang, one cavalry and one infantry regiment at Naoshera. These arrangements will add considerably to the military strength of the Punjab.—The Englishman says that a committee will shortly assemble in Bengal to inquire into the state of the ammunition lately served out to regiments in this country, who are armed with the new breech-loading rifles.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—In consequence of a report from Madras that the boilers of the Feroze were leaking badly, and that she would not be able to make a return voyage to Suez, Sir John Lawrence had decided, according to the Englishman, to postpone his departure until the 19th January, when he would leave by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer the Candia. He was to embark with the usual ceremony on board the Sonamooke, and overtake the Candia down the river. His Excellency had, of course, the right to charter a private steamer, there being no Government one available, but as this would involve an expenditure of nearly a lac of rupees, Sir John declined to incur, on his own private account, so large an outlay against the public funds. He, therefore, submits to the delay and inconvenience which must attend him as a private passenger by the P. and O. Such an action is highly creditable to his Excellency, but it is certainly not creditable to the Government of India that upon such an occasion it should not have a single vessel of its own at its command. It appears from the same paper (of the 11th Jan.) that numerous applications had been made for interviews to take farewell of Sir John Lawrence, which, owing to the pressure of business and the state of his health, his Excellency was really unable to grant. Our contemporary was authorised to state that a day would be fixed and duly announced when all native or European friends of the Viceroy who might wish to say farewell would be afforded an opportunity of doing so. According to the Friend of India a somewhat large party was to accompany Sir John Lawrence on his homeward voyage. Besides Dr. and Mrs. Farquhar and Captain Kennedy, there were Mrs. George Lawrence of Allyghur and family, Captain Reddie, and Colonel D. Robinson, R.E.—the last going as far as Ceylon.

Bengal.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 4.

The Hon. Mr. Strachey moved that the Bill to facilitate the improvement of land in the North-Western Provinces be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in a month. It might be argued—although he thought such an argument untenable—that tenants at will ought not, in the absence of any agreement, be allowed compensation from the landlord for improvements made without obtaining the previous consent of the landlord. But the present law went further than this. Not only did it say that tenants at will should not claim compensation for improvements, but that the mere fact of their having made such improvements, even such as wells, without which they could not cultivate the land, and which would be of benefit to the landlord as well as to the tenant, rendered them liable to the cancellation of their leases and ejection from their holdings. Section 4 provides that the tenant shall cultivate his land in a husbandlike manner, and so protects the landlord. The Bill followed the Acts already in force in Oude and the Punjab, and also followed the provisions of Bills relating to Ireland. The Bill proposed to allow to tenants of all classes, even to tenants at will, a right to claim from the landlord compensation for buildings erected on the land, in the event of the landlord ejecting the tenant, even although these improvements were made without the consent of the landlord. It was the duty of the Government to frame a law to encourage to the utmost the improvement of the land. In India, and especially in Upper India, the duty was of high importance, for there the only works for the improvement of the land were irrigation works, which would be insufficient to irrigate the whole of the land. It would be folly for the Government to discourage, in any way, the execution of works which would tend far to protect the country from the calamities of famine. Some officials of high station held the opinion that the right of a tenant to claim compensation from the landlord should not extend to tenants at will, and in this opinion the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces concurred. This would require to be carefully considered by the Council.

The Hon. F. R. Cockerell deprecated the present state of the law, but the Bill went too far—further than the Punjab Act. If the Bill had the aim of allowing compensation to tenants at will for improvements effected before the passing of the Bill, he should oppose it.

The Hon. Shaw Stewart remarked that, when the Punjab Tenancy Bill was introduced, it was stated that no Bill in which landed interests were concerned should be referred to a Select Committee, until all the documents from the local Government on the subject had been laid before the Council. This principle had not been followed in this case, and he would appeal to his hon. friend to adjourn the motion he had made, until the letter from the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces had been circulated. To a certain extent his hon. friend had remedied this objection by reading quotations from the letter referred to, but this was not sufficient to enable the Council to estimate properly the opinions of the Government of the North-Western Provinces regarding the Bill. He was not prepared to vote in favour of the motion.

H.E. Sir John Lawrence would be sorry if the motion were not passed. All that the Council was asked to do now was to affirm the principle that it was wise, right, and politic that encouragement should be given to tenants to make improvements on their lands. He would have considered it to the honour and credit of his administration if this Bill could have passed during his incumbency as Governor-General, but as such could not be the case, he held it to be his duty to give all the force and weight he could to the propositions of Mr. Strachey whilst holding the position he now did. It would take years, and an enormous expenditure, before India would have a thorough network of irrigation, but a great deal might be done by individuals, by the labour of their own hands. It appeared to his Excellency to be right and just to give a tenant compensation for improvements which were effected by those from whom he had inherited it. What man of any forethought would effect any improvement in his land, if, the day after his death, all the value of the improvements would be lost to his family? His Excellency thought with Mr. Strachey that the rights to claim compensation should extend to tenants at will, as well as tenants with occupancy rights, and he believed that the rule would be found advantageous to landholders as well as tenants. In Northern India, in most cases, all the improvements on land were made by the cultivating proprietor or the cultivating occupier.

The motion was carried by a majority.

THE FAMINE.

After the close of the usual business of the Viceregal Council on the 4th Jan., the members formed themselves into a committee to discuss the subject of the impending distress in the North-West Provinces and Central India. After noticing the continued failure of rain, for which the Government of India had long been hoping against hope, and the probably wide incidence of the calamity, the Viceroy adverted to the circular lately issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, appealing to public charity, to which his Honour proposed to limit the support of the aged and infirm. With regard to this limitation the Viceroy observed that the Government of India fully recognised its responsibility for the relief of the aged and infirm as well as those able to work, and had, accordingly, directed a more complete measure of relief. It had been urged on the Government that local officers should be empowered to lay up stores of grain when required, but the Viceroy observed that such a plan would enhance the difficulty by increasing competition in the market. The question was then put to those present, whether, assuming the desirability of appealing to private charity, the Government should call a public meeting and ask for subscriptions, or whether, in reply to a communication from the Chamber of Commerce, it should offer an equivalent of all local subscriptions raised as proposed by that body. After discussion, it was unanimously resolved that the most satisfactory way of resorting to private charity would be to adopt the latter alternative, and promise the Chamber of Commerce the cordial co-operation of Government. It was also decided that, with a view of obtaining more reliable returns of prices, the district officers should be instructed to take their preparation into their own hands, instead of intrusting it to their subordinates, and that the returns should be simultaneously published by the Board of Revenue at Allahabad. It was further determined that orders should be issued to Municipalities in the famine districts to suspend the octroi duties on grain, and all tolls on carts laden with grain.

On the 2nd January the Secretary to the Punjab Government telegraphed from Lahore to the Government of India as follows:—"That there will be great distress in various parts seems certain. An emigration from Rajpootana has taken place largely, so the Lieut.-Governor thinks it will be well to invite general subscriptions at once. In the Punjab the pressure is not as yet very severe, but is daily becoming more so, in the southern parts especially. All signs of rain have disappeared."

On the 5th the following telegram was sent from Shekoabad, by the Secretary to the Government of the N. W. Provinces:—"Distress is yet partial and confined to four or five districts. Present wants supplied by Government works and charity of province. External aid will no doubt be required hereafter, but Lieut.-Governor would prefer appeal in Calcutta being deferred for a few weeks. The prospects of season and degree of pressure will then be more fully developed, and appeal will be more definite and effective. Christmas rain hitherto scant and partial, but not yet too late for certain degree of benefit and relief if rain were to fall soon."

In reply to the Bengal Government's letter, noticed by us last week, the Supreme Government wrote thus on the 28th December:—"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 4312, dated the 28th ult., and in reply to state that, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, the calamity is already of sufficient magnitude to make it right that preliminary measures should be taken for inviting the aid of the community for the relief of the distress prevailing in the Upper Provinces and in some parts of the territory under the control of the Lieutenant-Governor, and I am to request that his Honour will make the necessary arrangements in conformity with the precedents of former occasions. For the present, his Excellency in Council would suggest that the Lieutenant-Governor should invite the co-operation and assistance of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to take steps for the immediate formation of a Central Committee at Calcutta, composed of official and non-official gentlemen, for the collection of subscriptions, and for the proper distribution of the sums that may be forthcoming. His Excellency in Council feels, however, that he may properly leave it to the Lieutenant-Governor to make any arrangements that he may think best. At the same time I am directed to enclose copies of telegrams from the Governments of the Punjab and of the North-Western Provinces. With reference to the statement contained in the latter as to the present absence of any general distress, I am to observe that it does not seem expedient just at this moment for the committee to issue any very urgent appeals for subscriptions. What is now chiefly wanted is that a committee should be formed, and be ready in all respects to invite subscriptions from all parts of the country immediately the clear necessity may be declared to have arisen. Meanwhile, it might be announced that there is no doubt that all subscriptions that may be offered can be usefully expended."

Famine will be seen in its severest forms in Rajpootana, half of which is a desert, while the other half enjoys but few communications. Colonel Keatinge and Major Forlong, the Superintending Engineer, are working nobly, as are all their subordinates and the Scotch missionaries. Since October last Major Forlong has had relief works in the Burr Pass, which forms the only great obstacle to the trade between Ajmere and Bombay. From six to eight thousand poor, with three hundred cattle, are daily employed there, at a cost of Rs. 800 a-day, on labour which is profitable. There are sufficient funds to maintain on the Pass all who can work till July next. Two years' supply of material for all roads constructed and sanctioned was collected in good time, and all, young and old, who can scrape a little earth or collect a few stones are employed on them. A road is being made over the Pokur Ghat, in the hills which divide the Ajmere Valley from the Joudhpore State. Two link lines have been sanctioned to connect Nusseerabad with the great north and south road from Agra through Jeypore to Deesa, a distance of thirty-three miles. The main line from Ajmere for thirty miles to the north-Jeypore frontier is also in hand. To relieve the south-east districts Major Forlong has ordered the construction of a road from the military out-station of Deolee to the Nusseerabad and Mhow line. In addition to all this a sum of £75,000 has been sanctioned for immediate expenditure on works of irrigation. The very old and feeble are to be employed in gardens and plantations around cantonments. Finally, Government is advancing Rs. 5,000 a month to the Oodeypore State for the construction of the forty-five miles of the Mhow and Nusseerabad road which pass through Meywar. The superintending engineer cannot be too highly praised for ordering and preparing works in anticipation of sanction. When the famine is at an end Rajpootana will discover that it has proved a blessing. Meanwhile, severe suffering and great expenditure are inevitable.

STATION TALK.

JUBBULPORE, Jan. 7.—The goods traffic on the line from Allaha-bad to this is steadily increasing, as the platform shows. It is a fortunate circumstance in one way that there has been no rain this winter, otherwise the thousands of bags of grain and goor piled up on the platform would have proved a fruitful source of disease, from the rotting of grain and of the gunny bags. I suppose the goods-shed will be enlarged before the rains of 1869 set in. There is little to chronicle regarding the G.I.P. Railway. The two lines have been linked, on though not in working order. The G.I.P. Railway contractors' engine is running in and out of Jubbulpore all day with materials, and has a clear run up to the Nerbudda, about twenty-five miles from Jubbulpore; but as the viaduct over this river is still unfinished, and the state of the line from that point to Hurda, a distance of three hundred miles, I should say, is inconceivably backward, the foundations of some of the larger bridges not being laid as yet, our prospects of rail communication with Bombay appear very distant indeed. The chief engineer of the line, who recently inspected the works right into Jubbulpore, is said by the Central India Times to have been satisfied with the state of affairs, but I question if the shareholders and the tax-payers who pay the guaranteed interest share the same feeling. Trade is certainly suffering immensely, for the East India Railway is daily bringing in hundreds upon hundreds of tons of goods bound for Bombay, which have to lie at Jubbulpore for weeks, from the inability in the local supply of carriage to convey the same towards their destinations as fast as they are brought to Jubbulpore. It seems almost needless to add that in the way of buildings the G.I.P. Railway Company are doing nothing at Jubbulpore; though, as the line progresses towards completion, we shall see some signs of action. The making of bricks is all that is now apparently going on. The civil people are astir, as the Chief Commissioner has come in from Nagpore. The Brigadier-general from Saugor is also here, and Sir William Turner is said to be dressing up the brigade famously. The 90th Light Infantry passed on towards the North-West the other day; they came from Kamptee. We shall lose the Khelat-i-Ghilzies as soon as the Madras corps, expected to relieve them, arrive. The Madrasses are coming by ship to Calcutta, and thence by train, of course, to Jubbulpore. If such a route for a corps moving from the Madras Presidency towards this station were mentioned by any one twenty years ago the speaker would have been put down for an ass; and twenty years look but like yesterday to some of us.

LUCKNOW, Jan. 7.—I have wished for many days to send you a line, but the station is so quiet just now that there is little to scribble about. People are recovering from the effects of the Christmas cake and plum-pudding, and will make no sign. Even the weather here seems determined that it shall not figure in the Delhi Gazette, for it continues cold and pleasant, and does not show the usual variations generally occurring about this period of the year. Mr. E. P. Moore, editor of the late Argus, is dead, and was buried yesterday morning. An obituary notice of the poor man appeared in the Lucknow Times yesterday, written not in the very best taste. Most people think the history of his short-comings need not have been continued after his death. You will also see that another person, long connected with the press, solicits charity—I mean poor Ben. Franklin Langford. There is a good deal of speculation going on regarding Mr. Davies' visit to Calcutta. Some assert that Oude is to be made a Governorship, with the Benares division annexed, others that the province is to be added to the North-West and Humeerpore and Jhausi given up; the last I think more likely, as it would not do to have two rulers so close to one another. There is also a report that Sir William Muir intends paying the station a visit, but I do not know what foundation there is for it. Considering the bad season we have had, prices have not risen much here, and to judge from what some Calcutta visitors say we should esteem ourselves lucky, for those poor ditchers have very high prices all the year round. Some actually took cauliflower down, saying they have to give eight annas for what we pay two pice. By the way, India cannot be such a deadly place to live in. I saw forty of one family assembled on Christmas-day at this station, and I heard that there were as many more in other stations; the line here came down to great-grandchildren.

MIRZAPORE.—A novelty in the long list of railway accidents occurred lately on the lower portion of the East Indian line. It appears that a batch of newly-caught Government elephants were on their way from Dacca for distribution in the Upper Provinces. When approaching the railway at a certain point, one of the animals, a male, and in what is called a must state, seeing a train coming, and resolved upon trying issues with the iron monster, placed himself on the line in the most approved of elephantine fighting attitudes; his mahout, thinking discretion the better part of valour, having managed to jump off the enraged brute's neck. The result may easily be imagined. In less time than it took to write these lines the huge beast was dashed to pieces, its mangled corpse presenting a spectacle frightful to behold. But the train did not escape without feeling the power of the levathan of the forest. The engine with its tender and three or four waggons were thrown off the line, and so much injured as to be almost if not quite unfit for further use. No human lives were lost, the train being fortunately a goods one; had it been a passenger train, the consequences might have been most disastrous. The railway company, I hear, claim 50,000 rupees damages from Government for the broken waggons and the engine, the latter alone being valued at 20,000 rupees. —Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DELHI.—Small-pox is abating in the city and district of Delhi. The Pioneer has heard, but can hardly believe, that no less than 1,000 children were carried off by the disease during the month of December.

MR. W. HUNTER.—The Indian Daily News announces that the Government of Bengal has placed the work of producing a fit and worthy Gazetteer for Bengal in the hands of Mr. W. W. Hunter, the author of "Annals of Rural Bengal" and other works.

THE SUBSIDY TO SHERE ALI.—Indian Public Opinion states precisely what the subsidy from the Government of India to the Amir of Afghanistan is to consist of. Shere Ali Khan is to receive six lakhs of rupees and twenty thousand stands of arms.

TRADE WITH YARKUND.—The Englishman has been informed that several influential Yarkundi chiefs have sent a mission to the Indian Government with a request for the deputation of a British commercial agent to Yarkund.

BANKS OF BENGAL AND MADRAS.—The Banks of Bengal and Madras have declared dividends, for the past half-year, at the rate of 8 and 7½ per cent. per annum respectively. The average dividend for the year is 8½ per cent. for the Bank of Bengal, and 9½ per cent. for the Bank of Madras.

TONK.—The Government of India has agreed to lend the Tonk durbar one lakh of rupees, to enable it to relieve its suffering subjects during the present season of scarcity. The loan is granted on the security of the revenues of the Tonk State, and is to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

IRRIGATION WORKS IN BEHAR.—According to the Englishman authority has been obtained from the Secretary of State by telegraph, after urgent representations from India, for immediate arrangements being made to proceed with the great irrigation works of Behar, and Government has already issued orders for the commencement of these much required works.

PROGRESS IN REWAH.—His Highness the Maharajah of Rewah is said to be in negotiation to secure the services of two European gentlemen—one a gallant major in civil employ, to take part in the administration of Rewah, and the other as his Highness's private secretary. This native chief, remarks the Indian Daily News, is known to hold liberal ideas.

TORPEDO COMMITTEE.—Captain Watt and Lieutenant Eckford, R.E., have been appointed members of the Torpedo Committee assembled at Calcutta under the presidency of Colonel Hyde. This Committee is a branch only of the Hooghly and Mutlah Defences Commission. We suppose there is no capital in the world which can be so easily secured from the possibility of insult as the capital —pace Bombay—of our Eastern Empire.—Pioneer.

SMALL-POX IN THE NORTH-WEST.—The Pioneer complains of the application of a laissez faire policy to small-pox, which is at present raging in the North-West. It appears the scruples of the natives are rather more difficult to be overcome than in other parts of India, and that vaccination is extending chiefly among low caste children and Mahomedans. The Vaccination Department is too isolated, does not possess local countenance, and has been greatly victimised by its native vaccinators, who send in cooked returns, and who have been even known to extract bribes from natives unwilling to submit to what they deemed a compulsory order. Ever since the Mutiny, the story has been current that the British Government has discovered that a new avatar of the deity named Otar may be expected, who will overthrow its rule in India; and that the proceedings of the Vaccination Department are with a view to discover and destroy the incarnation, in whose veins milk is to take the place of blood.

THE NATIVE AIDE-DE-CAMP TO H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—We hear that the appointment of native aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, recently sanctioned by the Government of India, has been conferred on Captain Hedayut Ally Khan Bahadoor, a distinguished native commissioned officer of the 45th Regiment N.I. (late Rattray's Sikhs), for whom the post appears to have been created. He has just come down to the Presidency, from Dinapore, to join his new post.

NAGPORE.—The Central India Times notices a growing, and by no means groundless apprehension among the residents of Nagpore regarding the duration of the water supply. Wells are drying up daily, and seeing that there is little or no prospect of rain for the next five months, it affords us matter for serious reflection as to how we are to be provided with one of the most essential necessities of life a few months hence. Should all the wells dry up, the only resource left us will be to fall back on the tanks; but when we consider that out of the number of tanks we have, the water of only one or two is really pure and drinkable, it will readily be conceived to what a strait we will be reduced.

LAHORE.—A friend, writing to the Englishman from Lahore, says that on the morning of the 26th December it commenced raining heavily; the down-pour continued up to midnight. The fall, though heavy, was scarcely equal to what was required, as the long drought had made the ground excessively dry; still the rain will have the effect of making the crops already in the ground spring up quickly; it will also prepare the soil for sowings of barley and wheat. More rain was anticipated as the sky was dark with clouds, and the wind continued steadily from the East. Should more rain fall, the prospects of the rubber crop will be largely redeemed.

FAREWELL DINNER TO SIR J. LAWRENCE.—Last night the Services gave their farewell dinner to Sir John Lawrence, whose services and whose claims on the gratitude of his countrymen were reviewed in a brilliant and eloquent speech by the Commander-in-Chief, Sir William Mansfield. It is not often in Calcutta we see so brilliant an assembly as that at the Viceroy's table, where were seated the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, three peers, the Marquis of Huntly, the Marquis of Blandford, the Earl of Gosford, three Lieut.-Governors, the Members of the Government, of the Legislative Council, and of the Bench of the High Court. So brilliant and successful a dinner has not been held in Calcutta for many a year.—Englishman, Jan. 12.

CAPTAIN BEADON AND WHITE LOAFERS.—Indian Opinion seems to be unjustly severe upon Captain Beadon, the cantonment magistrate of Mooltan, on account of his recent dealings with a couple of able-bodied loafers. Captain Beadon is secretary to a society for relieving destitute Europeans, who are moved on to Kurrachee, where they are more likely to get work, and are at all events out of the Punjab. Four Europeans lately presented themselves, two of whom were forwarded. The other two he tried to enlist for a European regiment quartered in the town, refusing to assist them unless they could produce certificates of unfitness for military service. Loafing, however, was too lucrative a profession to be lightly abandoned, and the men forged a pass to Kurrachee along with their comrades. They were brought back, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The funds of the charitable society cannot be more grossly misspent than supporting sturdy beggars, who are too fine gentlemen to handle a musket.

AJMERE.—In a letter by the Rev. J. Robson to the secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, dated Ajmere, December 10, he says:—"You will see from the statement I send that the Seths and residents of Ajmere and Nusseerabad have already done a great deal to meet the difficulties of the times. In addition to what is there mentioned, the amount given in private charity must be taken into account. I know of one Seth who has spent upwards of 500 Rs. last month in relieving distress, and who expects to have to do the same throughout the famine; he is not a solitary instance of what is being done by private exertion. It is manifest that, when these efforts have been made by the people here, they must find difficulty in meeting this new claim; but they can ask help from others, as persons who have done what they can to help themselves. One other claim I would mention that the people of Ajmere have on the general public, and it is the readiness they have always shown to help others who are in distress. The population of this place is only 35,000, but the subscription here for the Lancashire Relief Fund amounted to 4,700 Rs., and that for the Orissa Fund to 8,670 Rs. Having been thus forward in extending a helping hand to others, the inhabitants of Ajmere look only for the same to be extended to them in their present necessity."

Madras.

A NEW REFORM IN DRESS.—It is stated that, on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, the Madras Government have sanctioned the abolition of white trousers as an article of equipment for the native ranks of the army.

USE BEFORE ORNAMENT.—A shocking instance of parsimony is mentioned by the Indian Church News, a Madras print. That paper has actually been "credibly informed" that the Rev. B. O. M. Deane, acting chaplain of Emmanuel Church, has suggested that some of the surplices of the choir should be cut up to make shirts for the use of the school boys!

THE "SPITEFUL."—H.M.'s s.s. Spiteful, Commander the Hon. E. L. V. Mostyn, arrived at Rangoon from Madras on Sunday, the 27th December. The Rangoon Gazette understands that the Spiteful is to be employed for some time in putting down the pirates who have been infesting the coast about Mergin and Tavoy and to the southward.

ANCIENT INDIAN LITERATURE.—The Madras Mail informs us that Mr. Pickford, the Professor of Sanscrit in the Presidency College, has been intrusted with the agreeable task of carrying out the instructions of Government contained in its late resolution on the preservation of ancient Indian literature. Mr. Pickford has also been desired to inquire for and procure any ancient MSS. in the vernaculars of Madras which he may consider to possess historical or literary value.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—We are glad to learn from the Rangoon Times that Captain Sladen, who is still in a very poor state of health, is soon to be relieved from his duties at Mandalay. We understand that Captain Watson, now Deputy-Commissioner at Shoaaygyeen, has been appointed as his successor, or at least to act during his absence. The selection appears to be a most judicious one, and will doubtless give satisfaction both to the public health and also to the British residents at Mandalay.

PEACOCKING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—The Madras Times has an article criticising the "etiquette which sends Anglo-Indians from their houses, under a noon-day tropical sun, to leave bits of paste-board with each other to little purpose." It concludes with expressing a hope that some one of sufficient influence to lead society in this matter will exert that influence to introduce a practice more rational and agreeable. "We do not think that anything save the example of a great lady can effect a change in a barbarous and wearisome practice. If the Countess of Mayo were to introduce a more sensible fashion of visiting into this country, we are certain she would gain the thanks of the community."

THE COFFEE CROP IN WYNAAD.—We regret to see that the coffee crop in the Wynad district, though above the average of late years, has not realised the planters' expectations. Good hopes are entertained of next year's prospects. There is a strong feeling against the imposition of the proposed road cess, rather too strong, we think, when the contemplated tax is only 12 pie on the acre of Government land and communications are still in the future. At the same time it cannot be denied that the cess will fall upon the planter with undue heaviness, and will almost fail to touch native landholders. The Mysore and Telicherry road has been considerably improved, but without benefit to the mass of planters whose estates are removed from it.

MAJOR FRASER.—A correspondent of the Madras Times, writing from Hyderabad on the 30th Dec., says:—"The town is full of the expected arrival of Major Hastings Fraser, who is to succeed General Briggs, the Military Secretary to the Resident. The newly-appointed Military Secretary is no stranger to the station and people, having been here as Assistant to the Resident some years ago. He is eagerly looked for by the native and other sections of the community, who always found in him a friend and a warm supporter of every public institution here. He has also many staunch friends among the nobles of the city. In connection with him, I might mention the Anglo-Vernacular School, alias Fraser's College. The public examination day and distribution of prizes took place on Tuesday last, and was largely attended, the Resident, C. B. Saunders, Esq., C.B., kindly presiding."

COLONEL HAINES.—The Bangalore Herald announces that Colonel Haines, the guardian to the young Rajah of Mysore, arrived in Bangalore from Madras on January 3. The natives of the patta nominated a deputation to welcome him, an arch was erected near the native regimental hospital, and as the colonel slowly drove up, accompanied by General Haines, the deputations stepped forward and the address of welcome was read. The deputation reminded Colonel Haines of the "warm interest he had always taken in the welfare of the native community," and "hailed the most auspicious event of his returning" as an omen of good. For more than twenty years he had held important offices, during which time "he had done much good for the people of the country, and always gave satisfaction." They (the deputation) therefore tendered their hearty congratulations on his being appointed as guardian to his Highness, the present Maharajah of Mysore, and thanked Sir Stafford Northcote for his selection.

COCHIN, Jan. 5.—This emerald gem of the Malabar Coast has been lately afflicted by an epidemic of measles, and has also been breaking out socially and politico-economically in a most unwonted way. In rapid succession have appeared the chiefs of the Marine and Railway departments, and now, to crown the edifice, and mark unmistakably the fact that the natural advantages of the port and its foul-weather adjunct Narakai, have at last attracted long-deserved attention from the powers that be, we are favoured by the advent of Commodore Sir Leopold Heath, flying his broad pennant on H.M.S. Octavia. Moreover it is understood that three lakhs of rupees will incontinently be expended as a beginning of truly Imperial works, which are to aid nature in developing the "only good port in Southern India." The railway, about which men's minds have long been exercised, is now considered such a settled affair that we are beginning to look forward to the opening festivities, and the enterprising locofocos are already indenting for the necessary supplies of "Simkin." No doubt, too, it will be found necessary to get up a regatta, which we can manage better here than in the little pond where Madrases sail their skiffs, and perhaps not worse than the Bombay "ducks."—Madras Athenæum.

LORD MAYO AT MADRAS.—After all, he did not hold a levee, as it was considered not the thing to do, so long as Sir John Lawrence still remained at the head of affairs; he would not even accept a dinner at the club, in which he did not show his wisdom, for the Madras Club is famous for giving one of the best dinners in India. However, he allowed himself to be stared at so long as he stayed with us. On Tuesday the regular yearly Government-house ball was given, and the ball-room was full to an excess with people of all kinds, natives of Madras being in a majority, from Prince Asim Jah down to barbers and cooks, so that Lord and Lady Mayo were seen of many. On Wednesday there was a party of a more select kind at our Governor's country-house, Guindy, and afterwards Lord and Lady Mayo, with their suite, went on board the Feroze, and sailed for Calcutta at daylight on Thursday morning. No doubt Lord Mayo has seen a good deal of Madras during his short stay; he has been the whole time knocking about, and visiting all places of interest or importance, and must have learnt many things which will be of assistance to him some day. Whilst here he received a deputation from the Chamber of Commerce, and of course heard a good deal about the want of a breakwater or harbour for Madras; so we must hope that he will do something for us when he gets properly settled in Calcutta. Report says that the usual exodus from Calcutta to Simla will take place as usual this year, as soon as the hot weather begins.—Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Dec. 30.—An article lately appeared in one of the local papers noticing the "difficulties which hamper the transit trade" between this port and the Punjab, and commenting unfavourably on the arrangements at present existing in respect to "through-booking" between Kurrachee, Mooltan, and Lahore. As the subject is one which materially concerns the public, Captain John Wood, the agent and superintendent of the Indus Steam Flotilla Company, has very properly addressed a letter to the District Consulting Engineer for Railways in Sind, for publication in the local journals, in which he has explained satisfactorily how well the "through-booking" system has worked between this and Mooltan, or as near thereto as the steamers can ascend, and why it cannot be depended on to work with facility beyond that point. Says he:—"Here (at Kotree) the bank of the river is permanent, whereas at Mooltan it is always shifting. At Kotree again, the bank is never flooded, but at the former place, for months every year, it is more or less under water. Another phase of the Chenab, although less obvious to the casual traveller, than falling-in banks, and a submerged country, is hardly less perplexing. The feature to which I refer is the wandering nature of the navigable channels. Swaying to and fro in its wide alluvial bed, the stream at times comes so close up to the railway as to endanger the rails, while after the lapse of only a few weeks, steamers, as is now the case, are unable to approach within three-quarters of a mile of the railway station. The risk and expense attendant on moving cargoes, under the conditions described, between the steamers—however far down the stream they may be lying—and the railway, are far too onerous for this company to undertake. All that I can do is to send the steamers as high up the river as they can get, and this I need hardly say is invariably done. But I do shrink from undertaking work which the physical characteristics of the river will not permit our carrying out, unless at a risk to the flotilla out of all proportion to its value to the company. Besides, we can always fill up our steamers at the bunder without incurring more than ordinary risk, the owners of goods readily undertaking to bring them to, and take delivery of them from, the steamer's side.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—His Excellency the Governor of Bombay has nominated the Hon. Mr. Campbell and the Rev. Thomas Carss, M.A., Principal of the Robert Money Institution, to be Fellows of the Bombay University.

WHEAT FOR KATTIWAR.—We learn that in order to meet the threatened famine in Kattiwar, the political agent at Muscat has suggested that wheat should be imported into that province from the Euphrates, where it is said to be very cheap.

LORD NAPIER.—It is stated that on the return of Lord Napier to Bombay, from his tour of inspection, which was to be at the beginning of February, he would invest H.E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald with the insignia of a Knight Grand Commander of the Order of the Star of India.

NEW BANK OF BOMBAY.—The New Bank of Bombay has declared an interim dividend for the half-year ending 31st December last at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The dividend will be payable on and after the 19th inst. to shareholders registered on 31st December last.

CAPTAIN POWER.—We observe an announcement of the death of Capt. Power, of the 2nd battalion 10th Foot. The deceased officer expired suddenly between Secunderabad and Sholapore, in consequence, it is supposed, of disease of the heart. He is much regretted at Secunderabad, and the soldiers' games, which were to have taken place at Trimulgherry, were put off.

THE NEW MARKET.—The main building of the new municipal market on the Esplanade is making rapid progress. The corner portion of the building, the upper part of which it is intended shall be used as municipal offices, is rapidly approaching completion, and promises to do great credit to Mr. Emerson, the architect. One of the ornamental marble sculptures has lately been placed in position over the centre doorway. This work of art is one of the largest which has hitherto been attempted in Western India, and has been carried out by Mr. Kipling, of the School of Arts. The subject we believe is an allegorical representation of the progress of agriculture, and the manner and completeness with which it has been worked out show that we have amongst us those who are competent to design, and able to carry out, works of art requiring the highest artistic talent and culture. A large portion of the iron-work for the market has arrived from England, and has been partly erected. This portion of the work was designed, and is being carried out, by the municipal engineer, and promises to produce a very effective and commodious interior.

HORSE GUARDS' JUSTICE.—Our correspondent "Rocket," having drawn attention, once more, to the unjust method of construing Royal Warrants in vogue at the Horse Guards, and having pointed out that one measure is meted out to the old Bombay Engineers and another to the old Bombay Artillery, we will now venture upon a prediction. As we surmised, the name of Sir William Coghlan has been retained long enough to prevent Colonel Hatch from benefiting by the Royal Warrant, because, had the warrant been executed, he would have passed over two Royal Artillery officers; and that end having been obtained, we shall be astonished should Sir William's name not now be removed from the effectives—perhaps in the very next list that is published. It has been kept on the list of effectives despite the Royal warrant, in order to serve the interests of the old Royal Artillery, all powerful at head-quarters. But even the protest for the violation of the warrant is now removed, and with it we shall see scant justice tardily done.—Bombay Gazette.

MILITARY ITEMS.—Lieut. H. Martin, Staff Corps, attached to the 24th N.I., at Poona, has, we understand, been strongly recommended for the adjutancy of the 23rd N.I., vacant by the departure to England of Lieut. J. Gatacre on m.c. The 96th Regiment, under the command of Lieut. Col. Barnard, embarked at Bombay on the 14th inst., for Calcutta, to be stationed at Fort William. We hear that Colonel Wood, Colonel Loch, and Colonel Warden, who all received their promotion to full colonel for distinguished service in Abyssinia, will all be appointed before the end of March to the command of regiments vacant by the present commandants proceeding shortly on furlough to England. The Stud Department, says the Pioneer, returned from Abyssinia, having been directed to set aside, for issue to the Native Cavalry any remounts they might deem fitted for that purpose, though not up to the real requirement of the stud, 185 were set aside, which have been divided between the 10th and 12th Regiments. It is probable that the post of Deputy Inspector-General, Indian troops, Poonah division, vacant by the elevation of Dr. Wright to the post of Inspector-General, Indian Medical Department, will be conferred on Dr. Edward Mahaffy, M.D., late Deputy-Inspector of Hospitals in Abyssinia. In consequence of the countermand of the 5th B.N.L.I. for Aden, which corps will now remain one year longer at Belgaum, the 12th N.I. from Dharwar will relieve the 7th N.I. at Aden, the latter corps proceeding in the return ships to Vingorla, and marching via Belgaum to Dharwar, where it will probably have to build new lines.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Junna, Captain Pickard, left Bombay Harbour for Suez on the 15th January, with troops for conveyance to Aden and Suez. The passengers included 32 officers, 1 chaplain, 6 ladies, 5 children, 4 second-class passengers, 8 staff sergeants, 6 wives of ditto, and 17 children, 674 non-commissioned officers and men, 49 wives of ditto and 10 children. At Aden 278 men, 37 women, and 89 children were to embark. The nominal list of officers, first-class passengers, and their families, was as follows:—Captain Barton, 85th; Dr. Foss, M.D., to disembark at Aden; Dr. Davey, M.D., and Mrs. Davey; Dr. Holton, 77th Regt; Dr. Ball, M.D.; Captain Lambert, 88th Regt.; Captain Hunter, 82nd Regt., and Mrs. Hunter, to disembark at Aden; Captain Brown, R.A.; Captain Townley, 58th Foot; Captain Cahill, 88th Foot, Mrs. Cahill, and four children; Rev. Mr. Bell, Ecclesiastical Department; Captain Newbolt, 1-5th Foot; Captain Weigall, 77th Foot; Captain Sandham, 1-21st R.A.; Lieutenant Challice, R.N.; Lieutenant Handley, 1-19th Foot; Lieutenant Latham, R.A.; Lieutenant Gardiner, 8th N.I.; Lieutenant Beal, 38th Foot; Lieutenant Moore, 13th M.N.I., and Mrs. Moore and child; Lieutenant Dyke, 108th Foot; Lieutenant Maxwell, 36th Foot; Lieutenant Skerret, 36th Foot; Lieutenant Forbes, 92nd Foot, and Mrs. Forbes; Lieutenant Custance, 1-21st R.A.; Lieutenant Lones, 4-21st R.A.; Lieutenant Onslow, 20th Hussars; Lieutenant Lloyd, 1-21st R.A.; Lieutenant Parker, 21-0th Foot; Lieutenant Bennett, 7th Hussars; Quartermaster Lawrence, 88th Foot, and Mrs. Lawrence; and Ensign Stevenson, 85th Foot.

Special cases may be referred for the consideration of the C. in C. Attention is directed to G.O. No. 49 of 1868, requiring that the transfer of soldiers on re-engagement must receive the previous sanction of the Commander-in-Chief in India, or of the Commanders-in-Chief in Madras and Bombay.

LEAVE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATE.

Head Qrs., Calcutta, Dec. 12.—No. 277.—The following extract from a letter from the Government of India in the military department, No. 1,049, dated Nov. 30 last, is published for information, in continuation of G.O. Nos. 358 and 371 of 1868:—

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your docket, No. 1,709, dated 11th inst., with its enclosures, regarding an application for extension of leave on medical certificate from ———, and to request that it may be intimated to that officer, with a view to obviating the chance of misconception, that, under Clause 26 of the new Furlough Rules of 1868, an officer can only obtain leave in India on medical certificate with retention of Indian allowances for a total consecutive period of one year. If leave so taken is extended beyond that limit, the whole period of absence subsequent to the date from which the new rules came into force will be converted into furlough, and the allowances adjusted accordingly, the retention of appointment, in the case of an officer holding one, being dependent on the amount and date of leave previously taken.

"In the event of other applications for leave in India of a similar nature, it would be desirable that the applicants should clearly understand what would be their position if the limit of twelve months was exceeded; and, as regards applications for extension from officers already on leave on 1st July last, they should be specially warned as to the date from which the limit reckons."

TRANSPORTS—MESSES.

The following report has met with the approval of the Board of Admiralty, as notified in G.O. Dec. 12 last:—

Letter from the Director of Transport Services to the Secretary of the Admiralty, No. 327, dated Admiralty, Somerset-house, Sept. 15, 1868, explaining the nature of control over general messes in H.M.'s troop ships:—

As much misconception prevails in the minds of the officers of the army with respect to the constitution of the naval and military, or general messes in H.M.'s troop-ships,—many, I am reliably informed, being under the impression, notwithstanding the regulations which have been issued, that the paymasters realise a large profit on the management thereof, or, in other words, that they have it in their power to form the mess—it is submitted that their lordships may be pleased to move H.R.H. the F.M. C. in C. to take such steps as will remove from the minds of military officers an impression attended with so much mischief, and which brings a valuable class of officers, viz., the paymasters, into disrepute.

It is needless to observe that the duties performed by these officers are of a very responsible character; that the office of supervising the mess affairs is not only onerous, but thankless; and that they require every possible support which can be given to them in the interest of the public.

In making the communication to H.R.H., it is desirable he should be clearly informed that these messes are provided out of public funds, and that all expenditure on account thereof by the paymasters is vouched and accounted for to the transport department of the Admiralty, in which the documents are examined and audited, before being passed on for payment by the accountant-general of the navy.

It is to be observed that the mess contribution by officers rarely equals half the expense to the public per head messed.

I request that I may be informed of their lordship's decision hereon.

(Signed) W. R. MENDS, Director of Transport Services.

[It is to be observed, with reference to the last paragraph of my communication to the board, that, in the ships on the Indian side of the Isthmus of Suez, the mess contribution by officers amounts to less than one-third the cost to the Government of India.]

JHANSI PRIZE MONEY.

Fort William, Dec. 30.—No. 1,252.—In explanation of G.G.O. No. 733, dated July 17, 1867, and under instructions from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, H.E. the Gov. gen. of India in Council is pleased to notify that Jhansi prize money is payable to the C. in C., Lord Clyde, and the head quarters staff who were in the field between April 1 and June 19, 1858, and also to the troops of the Central India field force who were under the command of Major gen. Sir Hugh Rose, now General Lord Strathnairn, between those dates, whether engaged or not in either of the actions indicated in the above G.O.

2. Officers commanding troops or batteries of artillery, companies of engineers or sappers and miners, regiments of cavalry and infantry, European and native, as also heads of departments, will therefore forward, with as little delay as possible, to the examiners, prize accounts, prize rolls of officers and men who may have so served between the dates above indicated, and whose names have not been included in prize rolls already rendered to the prize examiner. All claimants coming within the terms of this order should be included in the rolls, and all others carefully excluded.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DISPOSAL OF THE BAND AND MESS FUNDS OF THE LATE MADRAS ARTILLERY. From the Adj. gen. to the Sec. to Govt., Military Dept., Fort St. George, dated Head Quarters, Ootacamund, Oct. 21, 1868, No. 3-48.

I have the honour, by order of H.E. the C. in C., and with advertence to the proceedings of the Madras Govt., military dept., No. 2,120, May 30, 1868, and to the letter of the Sec. to the Govt. of India, military dept., dated Simla, May 18, 1868, No. 153, with copy of despatch and enclosure, on the subject of the disposal of the regimental funds of the Madras section of the R.A., to forward the proceedings of the special committee of the officers of the royal (Madras) artillery on the subject, assembled by H.E.'s order, dated July 22, 1868.

2. Lieut. gen. McCleverty has no objection to offer on the decision come to by that committee on the disposal of the mess and band funds of the late Madras artillery, founded as that decision is on authoritative grounds and precedent. Although no replies have as yet been received to the circular letter, dated July 22, 1868, calling for suggestions, yet, in order to prevent the possibility of complaint being brought forward hereafter, H.E. thinks it desirable that the payment of shares should be deferred to Dec. 1 next, as the notice has been scant; and he feels assured that the committee will take into consideration any suggestions that may be advanced, and acquaint him if they are of sufficient weight to warrant a modification.

3. The committee have apparently grounded their decision on precedent, and have only included in the distribution of the surplus funds of the band and mess of the late Madras artillery, the effective officers at the dates when, by order of the late C. in C., Sir G. Le Marchant, the band was broken up from March 31, 1866, and the messes ceased to exist as Madras artillery messes, from June 30, 1867. Officers who became non-effective previous to those dates respectively have, therefore, no valid claim. The committee also excluded from the distribution officers who have entered the staff corps, and those in receipt of colonel's allowances, on the grounds stated in the proceedings of the committee. Such officers ceased to contribute to the funds, and would be relieved from the liabilities, if there were any.

Proceedings of a Special Committee for distribution of band and mess funds late Madras artillery, assembled at Bangalore, on Tuesday, Oct. 6, 1868, under instructions from H.E. the C. in C. President: Col. A. W. Macintire, c.b., R.H.A. Members: Lieut. col. (col.) A. V. Falls, R.H.A.; Capt. (col.) R. Cadell, R.A.; Capt. (major) J. S. Baird, R.A.; Capt. M. L. Monckton, R.H.A.; Lieut. W. R. C. Brough, R.A. The committee having assembled pursuant to orders, Letters Nos. 1-280, 1-310, and 1-350, of dates June 15 and July 3 and 22, 1868, from the Asst. Adj. gen. R.A., conveying H.E. the C. in C.'s instructions regarding the convening of this committee are read.

The committee, after mature consideration, passed the following resolutions, viz.:

Band Fund.—I. That the surplus of the band fund, amounting to about Rs. 15,000, be at once divided among the officers who were borne on the rolls of the late Madras artillery on March 31, 1866, being the date on which the Madras artillery band was broken up, but exclusive of those officers whose dates of entry into the staff corps are prior to the above date; also of all officers in receipt of off-reckonings on this date.

Band Fund.—II. That the mode of distribution be rateably, according to the length of service of each officer entitled to share—service being reckoned from date of arrival in India. One month's service being the unit, over fifteen days to count as a month, under fifteen not to be reckoned. No notice to be taken of leave of absence of any kind.

Mess Fund.—III. That the surplus of the mess fund now available, amounting to Rs. 41,500, be at once divided among the officers who were borne on the rolls of the late Madras artillery on June 30, 1867, being the date on which it was officially reported that R.A. station messes had been established in this presidency. Officers whose dates of entry into the staff corps are prior to the above date, also all officers in receipt of off-reckonings on this date, will not be included in the list of those entitled to share.

Mess Fund.—IV. The mode of distribution to be as laid down in resolution II. for the band fund surplus.

Mess Fund.—V. The balance of the mess fund, when realised, to be distributed in a similar manner.

Band and Mess.—VI. That all sums due to either band or mess by any officer entitled to share in either fund be deducted from the amount of his shares.

Remarks.—The committee will now proceed to give, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., their reasons for coming to the foregoing resolutions:—

With regard to the first resolution, the actual date of the breaking up of the band has been preferred to the date on which subscriptions ceased, as the appropriate date from which the balance should be distributed, because the band was carried on for a considerable period after the cessation of subscriptions; and those officers who in the meantime became casualties, having necessarily ceased to be liable for its responsibilities, are not entitled to share in the assets, which have now been found to have been available for distribution on the actual breaking up of the band.

With regard to the mode of distribution, contained in the second resolution, the committee found that in all precedent cases distributions had been ordered to be made rateably; and, believing this mode to be fair, had to choose between calculating the shares according to actual payments made, or according to length of service. The former mode could only have been possible in dealing with the band fund, because the books of the mess did not go sufficiently far back to enable the necessary calculations to be made. The latter mode was also far more advantageous to the junior ranks, and for those reasons was adopted.

The committee have most carefully prepared lists in accordance with the second resolution, exhibiting clearly the shares of each individual officer, with reference to the sum available for distribution.

In the third resolution the committee have fixed on June 30, 1867, as being the appropriate date for the allotment of shares, because up to that date expenditure continued, and officers borne on the rolls of the late Madras artillery were alone responsible for the liabilities which possibly might have been incurred.

The committee have only further to remark that no suggestions with regard to the mode of distribution have been laid before them, although such were invited from all officers, in letter No. 1,350, dated July 22, 1868, from the Asst. Adj. gen. R.A. They therefore consider that they have been invested with the full confidence of all their brother officers.

Order thereon, November 16, 1868.

The Government assume that the C. in C. has caused the committee to be informed that H.E. thinks it desirable that the payment of shares should be deferred to Dec. 1 next.

Power to the Secretary of State in Council to recover Moneys as herein directed—Persons required to pay over Prize Money to be liable to account.

3. The Secretary of State in Council of India shall have and may exercise the same or the like powers, rights, and remedies, so far as the same shall be applicable for discovery and recovery of and otherwise in relation to or in respect of the moneys hereby directed to be paid and to be placed to the credit of the revenues of India, as the Commissioners or the Treasurer for the time being of Chelsea Hospital, or the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or any other persons or person, or any corporation entitled to or interested in any prize money acquired by or due to any officers, soldiers, or seamen in or belonging to her Majesty's European military or naval forces, have or can exercise by virtue of any Act or Acts now in force for the discovery or recovery of or otherwise in relation to or in respect of such last-mentioned prize money, and all courts of law and equity, and of admiralty jurisdiction in the United Kingdom and in India shall have and may exercise the same or the like jurisdiction, powers, and authorities for compelling every person to account for and pay over the moneys hereby directed to be paid and be placed to the credit of the revenues of India as any court of law or equity or of Admiralty jurisdiction may now exercise with respect to any prize money acquired by or belonging to any such officers, soldiers, or seamen as last aforesaid; and every person who is required by this Act to pay over any share or shares shall be subject to the like liability to account for the same, and to the like fines and penalties for neglect or default in not accounting for the same, and otherwise, as agents or other persons are by any Act or Acts now in force subject to in respect of any shares or balances of prize money acquired by or belonging to any such officers, soldiers, or seamen as last aforesaid.

The following officers were appointed to do duty with the detachment:—To command: Capt. Crowther, 1st foot. To do duty: Lieuts. Paterson and Turnbull, 1st foot; Lieut. Saportus, 95th foot; Lieut. ## Home.

STANDARD HEIGHT FOR INFANTRY.—The standard for the infantry of the line has been raised to 5 feet 8 inches.

THE NAVY IN INDIA.—The Army and Navy Gazette understands that the Lords of the Admiralty have effected a considerable saving by altering the appointment of Sir Leopold Heath in India from a first to a second class commodoreship—thus reverting to the order of things which existed before the Abyssinian war.

CAPTAIN THOS. SPANKIE, for several years assistant bailiff and messenger in bankruptcy of the Lincoln County Court circuit, died on Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., at his residence, Lincoln, of congestion of the lungs and brain, after a very short illness. A cold, caught only two or three days before, has, we are informed, led to this lamentable result. The deceased gentleman, who had been many years in India, was a person of considerable literary talent, and was formerly editor of the Indian News, which was incorporated with Allen's Indian Mail in 1858.

THE RED SEA CABLE COMPANY.—The allotment of shares in the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) having been completed, the manufacture of the cable will be at once commenced by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company. It is expected that the whole will be finished before the autumn, and that it will be shipped in the Great Eastern—on the return of that vessel from laying the French Transatlantic Cable—in sufficient time to admit of the necessary operations for submerging the section from Bombay to Aden being proceeded with in December, when the Great Eastern is intended to reach Bombay.

THE OUTWARD INDIA MAILS, &c., (SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 6).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Massilia, Captain Lockie, sailed to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the India and China mails, a general cargo, and 421 boxes of specie, &c., value £128,194, consigned as under:—For Galle—Gold coin, £2,934. For Bombay—Bar gold, £10,000; gold coin, £3,900; bar silver, £75,000; jewellery, &c., £4,096. For Madras—Bar silver, £2,000; gold coin, £1,195; gold thread, &c., £1,659. For Calcutta—Jewellery, clocks, &c., £1,212. For Hong Kong—Dollars, £24,687. 10s.; bar silver, £1,000. For Amoy—Jewellery, £160. For Shanghai—Watches, £350. 10s.

H.M. SHIP "CROCODILE."—The exigencies of the service are such that it has been determined to despatch her Majesty's ship Crocodile from Portsmouth to Alexandria on the 22nd inst. The damaged screw shaft has been "tinkered" up sufficiently strong to induce the engineer officers to believe that she will accomplish her forthcoming voyage without a break-down. It should be remembered that the principal object which the authorities had in view when they resolved that the Crocodile, after the completion of her last trip, should not proceed to sea again until next season, was that they intended to substitute another description of machinery for that which she has now on board. We have no fear ourselves of any contretemps arising to the ship.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY (LIMITED).—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Friday, at the offices, Moor-gate-street, Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair. The report stated that the directors regretted the inability of the Anglo-Indian Telegraph Company to carry out the Red Sea extension to India upon the bases originally proposed. The provisional agreement with the Telegraph to India Company would therefore have to be annulled. A new agreement had been entered into with the Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph Company, subject to the confirmation of the shareholders and to the consent of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, the holders of the present agreement. The terms were that the Telegraph to India Company was to grant a lease of twenty-one years from the 1st of July, 1870, to the new company, at a rental of £1,800 a-year absolutely, to be increased to £2,500 a-year when the line to India was completed and while at work. The new company were to maintain the lines in working order, and to be at liberty to make any extensions at their own cost. The new company might terminate the agreement after three or five years if the extension line was not then in work, and to have the option of purchasing the Telegraph to India Company's interest within twelve months after the extension was completed for £37,500, payable in fully paid-up shares at par of the new company. The agreement was to be dependent upon the capital of the new company being raised within a specified period. The directors recommended the shareholders to sanction the provisional agreement. The arrangements which, if carried out, take effect from July 1, 1870, would provide all the funds necessary for the very moderate current charges—viz., £300 a-year, leaving 1,500 a-year to pay the interest at 3 per cent. per annum, the future increase being dependent, as before stated, upon the success and prosperity of the new company. The capital account showed that £57,774 had been expended, leaving a balance of £1,395. The report and statement of accounts were then adopted, a distribution of 2½ per cent. was agreed to, and the retiring directors and auditors were re-elected. The meeting was then made special, and the agreement with the new company was conditionally approved.

BOATS FOR INDIA.—Messrs. J. and S. Salter, of Oxford, the boat builders to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, are now completing an order for eight boats for the aquatic clubs of the Indian Presidencies. These boats will be enclosed in cases and despatched from Oxford by the overland route; and will comprise four-oars, pair-oars, and skiffs, of the build and finish for which the firm has long been celebrated, not only in this country, but in America, Australia, and on the continent of Europe.

ARRIVAL OF THE 101ST FUSILIERS.—PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 3.—The Serapis, 3, Indian relief screw ship, Captain John C. Soady, arrived at Spithead early this morning, having on board the 101st (Royal Bengal Fusiliers), under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick O. Salusbury, C.B. The following is the list of officers and troops on board:—Colonel Salusbury, C.B., Major Brown, Captain Parsons, Brevet Major Delafosse, Captain Champion, Captain Hunter, Captain Butler, v.c., Captain Ellis, Captain Jarvis, Lieutenant Hatton, Lieutenant Pakenham, and Lieutenant Halley, Ensigns Free and Kirk, Paymaster Thorburn, Adjutant Macleane, Inspector of Musketry Dowman, Quartermaster Luttrell, Surgeon Jardine, Assistant-Surgeon Hannah, with 38 sergeants, 20 drummers, 478 men, 22 women, and 43 children; Lieutenant Saportus, 95th Regiment; Lieutenant Hartigan, 5th N.I.; Captain Crowter, Surgeon Morpew, and Lieutenants Patterson, J. Turnbull, and Stanton, 1st Regiment; Assistant-Surgeon Lever, 7th Hussars; Captain Clarke and Lieut. Taylor, 19th Hussars; Lieut. Beechen, 11th Regiment; Lieut. Goslin, 31st Regiment; Captain Townley, 58th Regiment; Captain Hunter, 82nd Regiment; Major Steward, 92nd Regiment; Captain Beras, 26th Regiment; Staff-Surgeon Ball, and the Rev. W. James. The Serapis brings home the following invalids from India:—94 soldiers, 7 soldiers' wives, and 5 children for the Royal Military Hospital, Netley; 148 time-expired men belonging to different corps, 12 women, and 21 children. The Serapis has experienced heavy weather since leaving Malta, but has, nevertheless, accomplished her journey within the expected time. She came into harbour this morning soon after ten o'clock, and was berthed alongside the dockyard; the troops disembarking soon after two o'clock. The bands of the 33rd, 35th, and 67th Regiments were in attendance, and, preceded by these and their own band, the 101st marched through the principal streets of the borough, crossed over to Gosport by the floating bridge, and at once occupied the new barracks at the top of the town, recently vacated by the 11th depot battalion.

THE LATE VICEROY OF INDIA.

The Times observes that the Indian life of Sir John Lawrence has become matter of history, and history can hardly match a thirty-eight years of a single life so continuously laborious, so eventful, and so successful. It would be folly to say that England owes her Asiatic sovereignty to him as to Clive; but he has been so identified with English policy and energy in the East for more than a third of a century that it is impossible to think of our Indian Empire as existing and prospering without thinking at the same time of Sir John Lawrence. His more conspicuous triumphs were won in his government of the Punjab, and culminated in the feats of policy which alone made the capture of Delhi possible. The Viceroyalty was the natural and almost necessary consequence of what he had done already. It was conferred upon him, not as it has been upon his successor for the purpose of discovering experimentally whether he be possessed of governing capacity. The dignity devolved upon Sir John Lawrence of right as the crown of his past exploits, and because a name like his barred the way to the elevation of any other man to it till he had first held and passed it by. In this position his own fame has been one main difficulty which he has had to surmount in obtaining a just appreciation of his merits. People have not always sufficiently understood the difference between a man who, as Commissioner of the Punjab, was, by his own personal energy, moulding a conquered population into British subjects, and the Viceroy, who in many respects much more nearly resembles a Constitutional Sovereign acting by responsible Ministers than a Minister himself. Qualities, again, which in his former character attracted either favourable observation or none at all, so long as he was simply an administrator, had no proper scope, or were even marks for hostile criticism in a Governor-General. A somewhat rugged simplicity and a habit of direct personal intervention in affairs were never thought out of place at Lahore. Calcutta society, however, construed the former into a grave offence against itself, and Calcutta politicians found the latter quality no set-off against the Viceroy's distaste for the old ambitious policy of territorial aggrandisement. A certain degree of state and magnificence may be proper in the centre of a semi-Oriental Court, but posterity will not count it to Sir John Lawrence's discredit that, in his own words, he did not care to "continue wars after their end had been accomplished." His apparent achievements as Governor-General may not have been as conspicuous as his acts in his subordinate command; but he has done nothing to detract from the glory of them. Above all, whether as Commissioner of the Punjab or as Viceroy, he leaves behind him the example of an administration the unique aim and end of which has been to create out of our Indian Empire itself the means and resources for securing it to the British Crown.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS

Are unfeignedly the remedies upon which all may rely who are suffering from diseases of the skin, scrofula, scurvy, ulcerations, and bad legs. During the cold, damp, and foggy weather of this our changeable climate, all these complaints assume a worse appearance, and their symptoms become more harassing, unless Holloway's Ointment be applied to check increasing inflammation and to soothe the excited nerves. No knowledge beyond that contained in the "directions for use" is required for using this cooling and healing unguent, which always acts beneficially. Thousands afflicted with "bad legs," who are slowly sinking under their sufferings, have been rescued from their perilous position after all curative means seemed powerless, by persevering with Holloway's medicaments.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN. Sir CHARLES METCALFE. Sir ALEXANDER BURNES. Lord CORNWALLIS. Sir JOHN MALCOLM. The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE. Sir HENRY LAWRENCE. General JAMES NELL. Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON. Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY. Major ELDRED POTTINGER. Major D'ASER TODD. Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune."

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATERNAUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1861.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 1s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMA-
TISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CON-

tion, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial

sirable, it will be found invaluable.

experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body.
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the month with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

reply he declared himself willing to discuss the matter in question with a small number of gentlemen who might be deputed for that end.

EARLY on the morning of the 19th January Sir John Lawrence wended his way through lines of troops down to Prinsep's Ghat, where a parting cheer led by Lord Mayo and taken up by a large crowd of spectators followed him on board the Sir William Peel. Lower down the river the Candia was waiting to bear Sir John away on his homeward voyage. On the day before he had received an address signed by 1,360 names, of which 1,250 were those of Christian inhabitants of Calcutta. In the evening he attended a farewell party given by Lady Mayo.

THE Calcutta papers give detailed accounts of the earthquake or series of earthquakes reported by telegram some weeks ago. The worst shocks were felt on the 10th of January, but in Cachar the earth kept on cracking and heaving up to the 14th. From Dinapore eastward to the furthest corners of Assam the earth seems to have been more or less in motion. In Calcutta no harm was done, but Cachar and Sylhet were sorely shaken, and not a little damage was done in many parts of Assam. The barracks at Chinsurah were also thrown down. At Silchar many lives were lost, the bazaar was a heap of ruins, and nearly the whole of the station wrecked. "The earth opened in hundreds of places," writes an eye witness, rising in a long wave twenty feet high; the river changed its course, breaking in huge waves, and throwing up volumes of sand and water. Not a few houses disappeared in the yawning earth. Many people had very narrow escapes from a like fate. The tea-estates in Cachar have suffered heavily.

THE old saw about misfortunes not coming singly was illustrated in Cachar by a raid of Kookies into the tea plantations just after the first shocks of earthquake. They killed two or three coolies and spread much alarm in Tipperah, burning some of the Rajah's villages. Troops have been sent off to the scene of disturbance. It appears that the Loshai Kookies had a feud with the Rajah of Rungboom, and followed in chase of him over the British Frontier. Now that troops are after them they will probably make all haste back again.

THE good news of last week from the famine districts has been confirmed by a telegram of February 12 from Bombay, announcing the fall of more rain in the North-West and Central Provinces, and the consequent removal of all fears of famine in those parts. We hear however that from Rajpootana the poorer classes have emigrated to the last man.

COLONEL KEATINGE is making his influence felt for good throughout Rajpootana. At a meeting held by him on the 16th December in the Ajmere Residency, it was unanimously agreed by representatives from all the States in Rajpootana—first, that the practice of Bunde, which forbade the export of grain, fixed its price, and otherwise hampered its sale, should be permanently abolished; second, that two-and-a-half annas per maund should be the highest rate levied by each State on grain passing through its limits; Bhoom or Chowkedari alone being levied at the ruler's discretion as before; third, that when the price of wheat reaches six seers a rupee in any two of the States of Jeysulmere, Mullanee, Marwar, Meywar, and Serohee, or eight seers a rupee in any two of the fourteen other States, all the States will at once suspend the duty on grain until prices have again

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 23; Agra and Calcutta, January 19; Madras, January 18.

The main interest of the news is divided between Lord Mayo's arrival and Sir John Lawrence's departure, the earthquake in Eastern Bengal and Assam, and the outbreak among the Kookies—whom the telegraph had called Coolies—on the North-Eastern Frontier. Lord Mayo's landing, mentioned in our last issue, is fully described in the Calcutta papers, extracts from which will be found elsewhere. The new Viceroy has already won the hearts of his Calcutta lieges, and given good promise of governing energy. He has ordered the district officers in Oudh, Behar, Bengal, the Punjab, and the Central Provinces to send in direct to the Board of Revenue at Allahabad a weekly return of the market-rates in their several districts. These reports, embodied in the returns for the whole of the North-West, will be published in the Gazettes of the various local Governments, and copies will be forwarded to all parts of the country. Lord Mayo also calls for returns showing the extent of the grain-traffic on some of the main roads, and over the principal rivers. Clearly he is no friend to circumlocution.

HIS LORDSHIP on the 15th January held his first durbar, receiving the Nepalese Embassy, at the head of which was Sir Jung Bahadoor's brother, the Commander-in-Chief of the Nepalese army. According to later news telegraphed to Bombay from Calcutta, the new Viceroy received on the 20th an address from the Chamber of Commerce, urging the need of certain measures for developing the trade of the port. In fallen below that level. On such occasions the thakoors will follow the example of their chiefs. The dates for suspending and renewing the duty are to be determined by the Viceroy's agent in conference with the several vakeels. In case prices may hereafter be affected by the proposed railway or other causes, the limit above-named will be open to revision every ten years. Finally, Colonel Keatinge is empowered to "make such exception in favour of Jeysulmere as its peculiar position may render necessary." A great blow has thus been struck at the old prohibitive system which has so long oppressed these Rajpoot States. Unable to see how high prices accompanied a growing trade, the rulers of Rajpootana have been slowly killing that trade by vain attempts to keep down the price of grain; the result being, says Colonel Keatinge, "that for several years past grain has been dearer in Rajpootana than in the neighbouring British districts." In this respect Haraotee has been the heaviest sufferer; so strict a watch having been kept by the neighbouring chiefs, that no one could carry even a loaf of bread across the border. The Neemuch traders alone filled their pockets at their neighbour's cost. Colonel Keatinge had much ado in gaining the assent of the Kotah and Boondie chiefs to his scheme of reform. It was only in deference to his wishes and those of their brother chieftains that they abandoned the policy of many years past for what they think the certainty of considerable loss. The Jeypore Durbar, on the other hand, has been specially active in furthering the British agent's efforts after a reform which must bring Rajpootana into closer intercourse with the neighbouring provinces.

COLONEL BROOME's scheme of retirement for Staff Corps officers seems to have won the sanction of the Indian Government. He proposes to let all officers of more than twenty-two years' Indian service, who have not taken furlough under the new rules, serve on in England for colonel's allowances, with liability to further Indian service, if need should arise. Field officers entitled to a major's pension, who may have served twenty-two years in India, should be free to retire within six months of the final publication of the sanctioned scheme, with an additional bonus ranging up to £3,000 for fifty-six years' service. Colonel Nornam's rival scheme is said in one paper to have been preferred to that of Colonel Broome. The main points of his scheme have already been laid before our readers. It differs from the other mainly in offering one hundred and fifty lieutenant-colonels a bonus of £1,000 or £1,500, and an extra pension of £150 a-year.

WE are glad to see that the tea-planters belonging to the Landholders' Association came forward to express, in a letter to the Indian Government, their abhorrence of Mr. Colvin's "cruel and illegal behaviour" towards the coolie whose death from a flogging inflicted by his order was mentioned in this paper a few weeks ago. "In the strongest and most emphatic language" they beg to convey that expression to the Governor-general, declaring that "the most stringent orders have repeatedly been sent to all managers and assistants" against the ill-treatment of their native labourers. Their hope "that the present sad case will act as a serious warning" to all managers of tea-gardens, seems rather a wide deduction from the fact that Colvin was found guilty only of "striking and causing hurt," for which he was to undergo "two months' rigorous imprisonment." A brutal taskmaster would hardly be deterred from beating a native to death by the fear of spending two months in jail. The late Governor-general called for further information from the Bengal Government, but avowed his own belief that the case was "one of that scandalous class which in 1866 elicited the unqualified condemnation of the Home Government." We fear these cases are so common as to account in some measure for the frequent dearth of hands in the tea-gardens of Cachar and Assam.

AMONG the "Selections from the Records of Government, North-Western Provinces," published last year, is Colonel Rowlatt's report on the repairs done to the Taj during his year of supervision. The renewing of the beautiful mosaics on the tombs, screen, and inner walls of the main building, had been already begun in 1865 under the auspices of Dr. John Murray. But Colonel Rowlatt found that the artist Pursooram had done many of the flowers in "a very coarse and inferior style." These were at once removed and wrought over again in a style worthier of Pursooram's known powers, for he was quite equal to rivalling "the best of the old mosaics." So well indeed has he now done his commission, that "no ordinary observer could detect which was old work," the new being "quite equal in finish, delicacy, and tasteful execution" to that of Shah Jehan's own artist. The weight of the tombs, or rather cenotaphs, for the real tombs are in the crypt below, had also badly cracked the marble slabs on which they rested. Pieces of these slabs have therefore been removed, and the work of replacing them and restoring the mosaic tracery has been done so thoroughly that only a very close inspection can discover the joinings and patchings. The repairs of the inner walls were within a month of completion last April when the Colonel wrote, and have since we believe been completed to his successor's satisfaction. For all this work Pursooram was to receive the moderate sum of Rs. 5,900. For Rs. 2,030 more he was ready to repair the lower or real tombs also. Great cracks on the outside of thirty-seven marble domes, large and small, where plants and peepul trees had pushed through the crumbling cement, have also been filled up with fifteen maunds of good cement for the sum of £16, leaving twenty more domes to treat in the same manner. The work has been done by means of a simple stage raised or lowered by ropes working round the brass ornament at the top of the dome, whence also hangs the rope-ladder used by the workmen. All this was to cost about £20, whereas the cost of the mere scaffolding applied in vain on a former occasion amounted to £1,700. There is still need of a lightning-conductor to save the restored domes from fresh injuries by storm. Nor did Colonel Rowlatt overlook the garden fountains which add their own beauty to the general effect. An outlay of a few hundred pounds has served to replace the old earthen piping with iron pipes made at Roorkee, for the range of fountains from the main gateway to the foot of the Taj. Thus for a very little expense has one of the most exquisite works of art in the whole world been restored to something like its old perfection of outline and details.

THE difficulty of judging distances in artillery practice bids fair to be greatly diminished by the results of late experiments at Shoeburyness. It is easy to understand how much of guess-work there must be in any process depending on the accuracy of human eyesight, however well trained. The odds must be hundreds to one against any officer's hitting the exact range after one or two trials under the usual conditions of field practice. Lieutenant Nolan however, one of the officers in charge of the mountain guns during the late campaign in Abyssinia, has invented an instrument whose claims to supply the old deficiency seem to have been justified by the trials at Shoeburyness. Two guns worked by his method made far better shooting last month at ranges varying from 1,050 to 2,000 yards than two guns pointed in the usual way. These latter in fact were comparatively nowhere in the contest; many shots falling 150 yards wide of the target, while nearly every shot made by the others told from the first. What the guns worked by the new process lost in quickness of fire was more than compensated by the greater accuracy. Quick firing is all very well within certain bounds. The Sikhs at Goojrat fired three shots to our two, but our guns eventually silenced theirs. Brown Bess made very quick shooting, but it stood no chance against the Afghan matchlock or even the Enfield rifle.

GENERAL BALFOUR's resignation of his post at the War-office seems to have been finally caused by his refusal to accept the Ministerial policy, touching the discharged workmen from Woolwich Dockyard, the cost of whose emigration he was required to enter on the estimates for the year. Other causes of quarrel are also mentioned. Most likely it was some last straw that broke the back of the Assistant-Controller's patience. General Balfour was chief of the Finance Department in India for some years after the Mutiny. In 1866 he was employed on the Recruiting Commission in England, and he afterwards gave very valuable evidence before Lord Strathnairn's Committee on Army Organisation.

HER MAJESTY's Message has been delivered to her faithful Lords and Gentlemen. It contains seventeen paragraphs, and not one word about India. New Zealand has a paragraph to itself, but England's greatest dependency is not deemed worthy of so much as a glance.

INDIAN POSTAGE.

At a public meeting in Glasgow on the 9th of this month, Mr. Reverdy Johnson assured his hearers that no efforts on his part would be wanting to bring about a penny postage between England and the United States. On the side of his own Government he declared the existence of an anxious desire to reduce the present rates. He "knew no bar in her Majesty's Government," and he felt certain that, "if the wishes of the British Parliament were considered," people in England would before the year's end be able to write to friends in America at the cost of a penny only, instead of three or six times that sum. If the American Minister's foregathering should turn out true, we may hope for a like revolution ere long in the rates of Indian postage. It would hardly perhaps be reasonable to ask that letters for India should be carried at a penny; but no sane being will deny that there is great room for improvement on the present rates. Letters by Southampton ought in these "days of advance" to cost no more than threepence, let us say, instead of sixpence. As for the postage by Marseilles, it is simply outrageous, and the fault, if we mistake not, lies rather with our own than the French Post-office. Even when the extra threepence laid on last year shall have been taken off as a needless nuisance, the remaining tenpence ought anyhow to be cut down by half. The immediate loss to the revenue would very soon be made up by the more than corresponding increase in the number of letters despatched. A like reform should be carried out in the postage of newspapers both to and in India. The Indian Government has already doubled the weight of Indian letters without adding to the postal charge on them; and the converse boon of a lower postage for light newspapers would be specially welcome to the native press, unless the increase of its influence be a thing to dread. That this however can hardly be the case seems proved by the generally inoffensive character of those native newspapers from which we have now and then quoted. Even if some of them betray a spirit of undue carping at the acts of their Government, is it not better for us to know the worst they have to say, than to live in a fool's paradise of wilful blindness to the undercurrents of native feeling?

ANOTHER SIDE OF THE CENTRAL-ASIAN QUESTION.

LAST week we contemplated this never-ending, still recurring question of Russian progress in Central Asia from what may, for distinction's sake, be called the alarmist side. Be it understood that the epithet in this case means no sort of reproach to so temperate a champion as the author of the pamphlet under review. It is so easy to mistake another's meaning that we feel bound to throw out this caution by the way, in view of what has lately happened. A daily journal, noted for its steady leaning towards non-interference in Afghan politics, has once more been discussing the Central-Asian Question in a spirit of fair-seeming regard for the alleged dangers of Russian aggrandisement. Thereupon another journal too readily accuses its virtual ally of frightening the people of England with vain bogies. And yet the Times was merely playing the part of the clergyman who takes fair occasion to remind us that in the midst of life we are in death. There is nothing of the boggy to our minds about Russian progress; and whatever the secret purpose of a Times leader, the disagreeable truth remains that in such progress lurks a possible danger to ourselves. The millennium is not yet come; lawsuits and wars are as frequent on the whole as ever; human ambition still hankers after new conquests and wider spheres. The same forces that drove us on to the completion of our Indian Empire have been driving the Russians forward from the Sea of Aral to the Jaxartes and from the Jaxartes to the Oxus. Believing as we do that a Russian invasion of India is neither more likely nor much more feasible than a French invasion of England, we need not therefore turn into easy ridicule the arguments that weigh most on the alarmist side. Russia may have no sort of present craving after India, but if ever the unforeseen course of events should offer such a prize at the cost of no serious toil or danger, would she or could she withhold her hand?

This in effect is the question put by the writer of the pamphlet aforesaid. So far from "even seeming to foster the idea that Russia has any immediate design of invading India," he prefers to think of it "as a remote contingency that may possibly be forced on Russia by circumstances beyond her control, in the distant future." In this admission lies the best answer we can give to all arguments founded on the assumption of Russia's aggressive aims against India. If the danger be so very remote, why should we travel so far out of our way to meet it? Sufficient for the day are the anxieties thereof. With our hands full of work to do inside our own territories, what need is there to take much thought of a morrow that may never come? As Sir John Lawrence remarked in his speech at the farewell banquet on the 11th January, "active interference in the complications of Central Asia would almost certainly lead to war, the end of which no one could foresee, and which would involve India in heavy debt, and necessitate the imposition of additional taxation, to the impoverishment of the country and the unpopularity of our rule." And the very writer whose arguments we are discussing admits that a policy of interference in Kabul "might have precipitated events," although he maintains that even had it done so "the result would have found us in a commanding position."

That however is exactly the point at issue. Of what use to run the chance of precipitating a dire collision when we are not prepared to meet it. And by this writer's own showing we are not prepared. Our Indian army, as now organised, is avowedly unfit for offensive, and hardly fit for defensive warfare. India itself is filled with elements of danger present and to come. We have not yet secured the loyalty of the people or the firm support of the princes. The border tribes are said to be in league with a host of secret enemies in the heart of Hindostan. There is a strong feeling abroad of distrust in our power to check the advance of Russia. We are not going to admit that all this is true; but there is just enough of truth in it to furnish sufficient grounds for not rushing wildly upon our fate. It may be argued that we are better prepared for the shock than Russia. But even if that were true, it would give us no excuse for plunging into a struggle which would entail a tremendous burden both on the Indian and the British taxpayer. The wiser policy clearly is, in the words of the late Viceroy—"to avoid such complications; to consolidate our power in India; to give to its people the best government we can; to organise our administration in every department on a system which will combine economy with efficiency; and so to make our government strong and respected in our vast territories." In words of almost identical meaning Mr. Grant Duff counsels us to meet the possible dangers of Russia's neighbourhood, dwelling particularly on the need of "pressing forward our railways towards the frontier," making Kurrachee a great port, and carrying a railway along the whole Indus Valley. When we have made all as safe as we can within our borders, elements of dangers will lurk among us still. "India," says the same writer, "is a barrel of gunpowder round which sparks are perpetually flying. . . . Society in our Eastern Empire is stirred by forces as little understood as those which produce the earthquakes of the material world. I suppose no month passes in which, to say nothing of other alarming intelligence, tidings do not come to the Indian Viceroy of some new religious movement which may be as harmless as possible; but which may blow everything into fragments." There is always some trouble brewing for us in some part of the Great Peninsula. Now it is a Naikra rising or a border raid; anon we hear of another Musulman plot, or are called upon to keep the peace between a native prince and his unruly subjects. A state of chronic unrest and ferment keeps us ever awake to the uncertainty of our tenure, and dwarfs to trifling proportions the danger arising from Russia's neighbourhood. That, as Mr. Grant Duff truly says, "adds at the worst a few sparks more" to those which are always flying around our Indian powder-barrel.

But is there no tendency among the people of India to under-rate our strength and exaggerate that of Russia? It is idle to deny that for some years before the Mutiny, indeed ever since the disasters in Afghanistan, our old prestige had been sorely shaken both within and beyond the British border. But since 1857 there has surely been a reaction in our favour, a reaction which the Abyssinian and Hazara campaigns must have gone far to strengthen. The great mass of Mohammedans cannot easily forget the glories of the Moghul Empire, and impatient spirits everywhere naturally look to the strongest neighbouring Power for deliverance from the British yoke. But this is a danger with which we have always to reckon, and which time alone aided by good government can avail materially to counteract. Its true extent could only reveal itself in the crisis of a collision with some neighbouring rival. To do aught that would hasten such a crisis would to our thinking be pure madness. For the present at any rate the great mass of native people and princes acquiesce in our rule either for the sake of its general advantages, or because no way of escape from it seems open to them for many years to come. Let us do our best to improve those advantages in every way by measures framed in harmony with the principles laid down by Sir John Lawrence, keeping a bright look out for storms ahead, without forgetting the hidden fires that heave the ground beneath our feet. As for a Russian invasion of India, even if it were as feasible as to us it seems the reverse, a proper system of railways, forts, and harbours, backed by an army strong in discipline and organisation, would guarantee us against all such attempts so long as India itself stood firm on our side. "England's dangers are in India, not without. . . . We are safe while we hold our ground and do our duty. Russia may tease, annoy, and frighten us by her money and by her emissaries. She may even do us mischief, but she will never put her foot in Hindostan." So wrote Sir Henry Lawrence before the Mutiny, and so, we feel assured, he would if alive be writing now.

For in the first place we cannot too often remind our readers that Russia has a game to play in Central Asia which will lead her far away from Hindostan. Her true goal is not India but China, or at least Chinese Tartary. Every incident in her past progress seems to point in that direction. She may sometimes make a feint towards Afghanistan, but her real aim we hold to be a half-political, half-commercial supremacy in the cities and marts of Turkistan. Her destiny lies to the north of the great mountain ranges in Central Asia. In the gradual break-up of the Chinese Empire, all Western China will probably fall to her grasp. It is much more likely, as Mr. Grant Duff points out in his "Political Survey," that the meeting of England and Russia in Central Asia will be one of peaceful rivalry than of hostile arms. "The Russian proper is by nature the most peaceable of mankind." The partisans of peaceful progress are growing daily stronger, and will yet have their way. A strong free-trade movement has already set in; and free-trade once established, we should hear no more of the dangers of Russian ambition amidst the new development of our trade with the countries beyond the Karakorum.

And this brings us back to the question of our late policy towards Afghanistan and other outlying States. We do not care to defend every step taken by Sir John Lawrence in that connection. He may have looked at the outset too coldly on Shere Ali, and been too quick to acknowledge his rival, Afzul Khan. But now that the former has finally regained the throne bequeathed to him by his father, Sir John seems to have been quite ready to support him in the only way that experience and foresight would allow. A subsidy and a few thousand stand of arms will keep us better friends than a mission liable at any moment to insults from a lawless people, which could only be avenged by a costly war. The doubtful success of our missions to the Court of Burmah hardly encourages us to form closer relations with the ruler of Kabul, still less with the Khushbegi of Yarkand. Our true aim should be to ensure their neutrality, to favour the continuance of a strong Government in Afghanistan, and to enforce due respect for the British name along our Western frontier. All this may be done without "active interference in the affairs of Central Asia." Before the time comes, if ever it should come, for such interference, it behoves us to look well to our arrangements for carrying out the more aggressive policy. Among these it might be well to include the revival of our old relations with the Shah of Persia, and to give plain warning that any movement towards Herat will at once set our armies moving upon Kandahar.

THE TIMOUR MANUSCRIPTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your Mail of the 3rd instant I read the following:—"The discovery of the Timour MSS. mentioned in the papers happened some months ago. They seem to have been sent home from Beejapore some forty years before Dr. Hall found out their true value, which is undoubtedly great. Most of the MSS. are in Arabic."

Allow me to inform you that in addition to these rare MSS. there are many valuable original MSS. volumes carefully locked up, which have never yet seen the light. With reference to the Timour MSS., Dr. Hall did not discover them until they were unearthed by the means of Hassoon Effendi, an eminent Arabic scholar and author, who recently visited the library, the doctor being totally ignorant of the Arabic language. It is a fact, and much to be lamented, that the magnificent collection of books and MSS. in the India-office is practically hermetically sealed to the public and to the Oriental scholars for want of a decent catalogue and because no convenience is afforded to readers. Is it not, Sir, too bad in this nineteenth century that ancient and unique works of Eastern literature and science should be treated in this ignominious manner? It is sincerely to be hoped that the new Secretary of State for India will devise some plan to remedy the deplorable negligence I have alluded to, so that the mine of knowledge now lying useless at Westminster shall no longer be allowed to remain unexplored. In justice to the late learned and popular heads of the library, Professor H. H. Wilson and Dr. Ballantyne, it should be stated that, although they did not lay claim to the knowledge of Arabic or Persian, and were not therefore likely to interest themselves with those manuscripts, their researches into the recondite literature of the ancient Sanscrit tongue have conferred an everlasting benefit on the public, and certainly fully justified their appointments to the posts they held.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

THE LOSS TO INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE VALUE OF THEIR COMMISSIONS, CONSEQUENT UPON THE BREAKING UP BY GOVERNMENT OF THE OLD EAST INDIAN COMPANY'S SERVICE, AND THEIR HITHERTO FUTILE EFFORTS TO OBTAIN A REFUND OF THE MONEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have, like many others, perused with deep interest the articles and letters which have from time to time appeared in your pages, with regard to what is denominated "Bonus Compensation," and wish that the cruel injustice under which we are suffering could be described in plainer Saxon than the two words employed for that purpose.

What, in the name of goodness, is the meaning of "Bonus Compensation?" asks the uninitiated English reader, when he meets with the term in print, and receiving no reply to his question, straightway allows the matter to glide out of his imagination as one both incomprehensible and uninteresting. Whereas, could he at once arrive at the fact that the euphonious expression alluded to, indicated the endurance of the wrongs expressed in the sentence which heads this letter, and the hope for their redress, he would, especially if belonging to the sister service, or if a member of the House of Commons, thoroughly comprehend the grievances of which we complain, and probably be led to take an interest in their removal. For if the former be his position, he must feel that after so unblushing a withholding of the just rights of one branch of the service—in the face of the outcries of the victims—his own turn must come next, and that in the event of the purchase system which now obtains in the English army being done away with, he himself can hardly hope to be compensated for the extra regulation value of his commission; whilst, if the latter be the status of the reader, he cannot fail to see how fair a subject for the exercise of his eloquence and talents in Parliament, is afforded by a case so strong as to defy reply or to preclude explanation.

The days seem latterly to have gone by when independent members of the House—regardless of party—were accustomed on occasions to arise and fearlessly to denounce a wrong by whomever committed. Let us hope that the time, and the wholesome practice referred to, have not fled for ever; but that in the people's Parliament, which is about to assemble, orators as bold and Englishmen as honest as those who lived in the days of Burke, or of Warren Hastings, will be at hand to call attention to this and many other abuses which urgently require looking into.—I am, Sir, yours obediently, MILES.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.

The Englishman remarks that in the India in which Sir John Lawrence grew up, and which he left ten years ago, there were only two interests to be considered, to wit, the interests of the natives and the interests of the ruling class. But in the India to which he returned in 1864 there was a third interest, namely, that of the English capitalist, who had then become an acknowledged and a necessary element in the new scheme of Government. What measure of opposition Sir John has met with has been due to his failure to fully and cordially appreciate the change. When he was in power we found it our duty, as the representative of the new interest, frequently to differ from his policy and to resist his measures; but now that the conflict is over, we cheerfully admit his great and rare merits as an Indian administrator. He may console himself by the reflection that the opposition his policy has excited among his countrymen has been more than counterbalanced by the unwavering and enthusiastic support he has received from the people of the land; and history, which finds the ebb and flow of influences a necessary element in all safe progress will probably pronounce that it was well that, after Lord Canning and Lord Elgin, there should be a Viceroy of India of the old civilian type. What we would say to civilians and to all officials in India is—do not study and love the native less, but cultivate and understand your own countrymen more. Be sure that they will well repay the trouble. No man, whatever his talents or experience, can henceforth rule India with comfort or safety to himself without their confidence. Now that the past five years have passed into the placid domain of history, when private heats are cooled, and the clash of opposing interests silent, we are happy to have the opportunity of expressing our views of Sir John Lawrence without compromising the interests over which we are bound to watch. At the last moment there has been a softening in his dealing with his countrymen, which means much in so firm a man, and we would recommend all young officials to ponder well on the following sentences from his farewell speech. "I owe much to the natives. Indeed, I owe everything to them and to my brethren in the different services of India. But why should I confine my acknowledgments in any way? To what class of my countrymen am I not indebted?"

The Indian Daily News holds that in view of the Viceroy's dependence on the Home Government, the credit or otherwise of the administration fairly belongs to the Viceroy; and judged by this test, Sir John Lawrence has no need to fear the judgment. One of the most important things to be attained is to uphold the credit of the Government. This, we need scarcely say, has been done; and we shall best realise the fact by considering what has been done during the period of British administration, as it now exists. The Government of the Queen is only about ten years old, and during that time, if we take the result of the administration, it will be found that immense progress has been made in the development of India. And when we further consider that one-half of that time has been under the administration of Sir John Lawrence, it would be a gross and wanton injustice to deny him the credit of many of the measures which have contributed to that result. In almost every branch of the administration great improvements have been effected, while the credit of the country has been maintained. Taking the power by which we primarily hold India, surely no one will deny that much has been done for the army. Efforts have not been spared to do all that is desirable or possible in India for our European troops. Money has been freely, and it may be said wisely, spent in providing barracks and other means of health and comfort to our soldiers and their families. This, of course, involves taxation, at which many grumble. But it is far better to expend money than human life—a fact that deserves even more emphatic recognition than it has yet received. Something, too, has been done for the various parts of the civil administration. The covenanted and the uncovenanted have both received a fair amount of attention and consideration at the hands of the Viceroy. The revision of the leave and pension rules has been conducted in a spirit of liberality, with a view to render the services more satisfactory, and to make people contented in them. And though all has not been done that some people desire—it never will be—it cannot be denied that much has been done greatly to the benefit of the services, and, through them, for the good of the country. Nor can it be said that the efforts of Sir John Lawrence have been confined to improving the condition of his own race, or of the higher classes of the people of this country. Many of his measures have been essentially such as are calculated to promote the good of the great masses of the people, thus fulfilling one of the first conditions of good government. Amongst these measures we may mention the encouragement given to popular education and irrigation works, and the improvements in the land tenures for the benefit of the peasantry at large. There are other agencies, too, which owe something of their efficiency to Sir John Lawrence. We have recently seen valuable concessions in the telegraph and postal departments, which will do much to increase and improve our communications; and they are of the kind that will lead to other improvements not perhaps generally contemplated. It is one of the qualities of statesmanship to look beyond the present hour. If Sir John Lawrence has erred in these matters, it has been on the side of caution. He has not taken his measures "before the hour was ripe." This will account for many of the complaints that have been made against him. He entered upon his distinguished office without having that wide experience which Imperial training gives. He had done well as a provincial governor, and people expected from him equal energy in a wider sphere. They anticipated too much. The expectations entertained of him were too sanguine, too unreasonable, and the circumstances of the country during his administration have not been such as to admit of brilliant display. His work has been rather to consolidate the Empire than to shine in it, and it has been remarked that the last year of his administration has been more fruitful than the other four. This is only a narrow view—one of appearances rather than of facts. Sir John doubtless saw what was required in the land, and took time and his own course to do it. The last year of his office has shown the completion of his work, and he has no need to be ashamed of it. He hands over to his successor a magnificent empire, at peace internally and abroad, and in a position of such great prosperity and credit as could well be expected, considering the difficulties, natural and otherwise, that he has had to contend with during the past five years. The fruits of his reign will ripen hereafter, and there will be a satisfactory answer to the question, "What has he done?"

AN INDIAN BRIGHTON.

The Friend of India holds that Calcutta wants only two things to be the healthiest, as it is the wealthiest, city in tropical Asia—a railway to Darjeeling and a watering-place within easy reach. The present generation of its citizens may see the former. The latter will not be available until the whole of the wild country between the capital and Nagpore, as the crow flies, is opened up by that direct and comparatively short railway which is certain to be constructed in time. Leaving Howrah, the line would run by Midnapore and Sumbulpore, throwing off a branch to the sea at Balasore, False Point or Pooree. In early days, before there were overland steamers, the ports on the coast of Orissa and the now malarious country around the pretty Chilka Lake were frequented by the richer residents of Calcutta, as well as by the officials of the adjoining districts, for sea air and sea water. The traveller still sees, even from the deck of the steamer, the fine houses occupied in princely style by the old civilians, who lived to a great age in spite of bad livers and very considerable fortunes. But only a stray official or missionary now seeks the sea beach—for it did not require the last famine to reveal the fact that it is more difficult and toilsome to reach Pooree from Calcutta than to go so far as Bombay or Peshawar. The day, however, is undoubtedly coming, when, in the ordinary course of progress, the great English population of Calcutta and the adjoining districts will run down to the sea coast for a holiday as the cockney seeks Brighton or Ramsgate.

THE CALCUTTA ADDRESS TO SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.

The address from the general community of Calcutta to Sir John Lawrence was presented on the afternoon of January 18th at four o'clock. It had been signed by 1,360 inhabitants of Calcutta, 1,256 of whom were Europeans, 40 Parsees, and the remainder mostly Bengalees. The address was read and presented in the drawing-room at Government House, by Mr. James Rome, who was accompanied by Messrs. Bullen, Cowie, Eldridge, Seth Apar, Ernsthausen, Raphael, Scott, Moncrieff, Manockjee Rustomjee, R. B. Chapman, W. S. Seton-Karr, J. T. Wheeler, J. Wilson, E. J. Gubbay, Sir R. Temple, Major-General Fordyce, Dr. Fayer, and Captain Coghill.

In reply to the address Sir John Lawrence said:—

GENTLEMEN,—I heartily thank you for the friendly address which, on the eve of my departure from India, you have presented to me. Nearly thirty-nine years have passed since I came to labour and to dwell in this land. The best years of my life have been devoted to its service, and lasting friendships and associations are connected with those bygone days.

It is not strange, then, that I should feel sad at the thought of leaving it for ever. You have contributed to heighten that sadness by the kind address you have given me. For you have not only thus bestowed on me an honour which every man must highly value—the honest approval of his countrymen—but you have supplied a consolation second only to that which approval of a man's own conscience can afford.

You have referred in terms only too laudatory to the services which it has been my privilege to render. I can only say, gentlemen, be the true estimate of those services what it may, that I have ever tried before God and towards man conscientiously to discharge my duty. Man at the best can do no more, and if I have merited but a part of the approbation you have expressed, I feel that I am amply rewarded.

It has always been my object, whilst steadfastly maintaining her Majesty's supremacy in India, to do all in my power to render that supremacy acceptable to the people of this land, and though not unmindful of the just rights and interests of my countrymen, I have tried never to forget that it is the people of India who, from their subject position, should have the first claim to consideration.

You have alluded to the future and to the possibility of my resuming official duties. Long residence in an Indian climate, and continuous mental labour tell me that it will be necessary for a time at least to seek quiet and repose.

But whether or not I may be called upon to work again, believe me I shall never cease to retain the deepest interest in India. My concern for its welfare, my affection for its people, my hearty desire for the prosperity of my countrymen here must ever remain undiminished.

I feel deeply your kind good wishes for myself. It is with very sincere regret, and with an earnest prayer for your welfare and success, that I bid you a hearty farewell.

(Signed) JOHN LAWRENCE.

ARRIVAL AND INSTALLATION OF THE EARL OF MAYO AS VICEROY AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Yesterday afternoon (Jan. 12) all Calcutta thronged the roads leading from Government House to the river bank at Chandpal Ghat to welcome Lord Mayo as Governor-General of India. The windows and roofs of the buildings looking into Government House grounds were bright with the gay dresses of ladies, whilst the streets presented the usual sameness which characterises an Indian crowd. Government House itself was, however, the chief point of attraction. Here were gathered a strong muster of officers of both services, with the heads of the European, Hindoo, Armenian, Parsee, Jewish, and Mahomedan communities. Conspicuous amongst all was the Maharajah of Bulrampore, wearing the Star of India and a jewelled turban and kulgee of great value. Right and left of the steps were drawn up a company of the 26th Cameronians and the 60th Royal Rifles, whilst the road to the North Gate was lined on one side by the 60th Royal Rifles and on the other by the Calcutta Volunteers. Outside the gate the 26th Cameronians lined the street to the corner opposite St. John's Church, where the line was taken up by the native regiments and continued down to the Ghat. Here a wing of the 26th formed a guard of honour. A little after five o'clock the battery stationed in front of the new High Court building gave the signal that his lordship had landed. On landing he was received by the Secretaries to the local Government and the officials of the Municipality, and conducted to the carriage in waiting. As soon as his lordship had taken his seat the body-guard formed up, and the cortege proceeded slowly on its way to Government-house, receiving as it went a rolling fire of cheers from the Europeans amongst the crowd. As soon as the cortege approached Government-house, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal descended the grand staircase to receive the Earl of Mayo, whilst Sir John Lawrence and the Members of his Government advanced to the top of the steps for the same purpose. On reaching this party there was a slight delay caused by the usual introductions being gone through, and then Sir John led Lady Mayo into her new home, while the Governor-General, surrounded by the members of his Government, proceeded to the Council-room. Here was assembled a large crowd composed of members of all classes of the community, and in their presence the Earl of Mayo took his seat as President of the Executive Council of India. Around the table were seated Sir William Mansfield, Mr. Noble Taylor, Sir Henry Durand, Mr. Maine, Mr. Strachey, and Sir Richard Temple. Mr. E. C. Bayley, Secretary in the Home Department, having received the commission granted by her Majesty to the Earl of Mayo, read it aloud, and then his Lordship, taking the Bible, swore to govern India faithfully and justly, and, again, to bear true allegiance to her Majesty. These oaths he read from a printed form, which he signed and then passed on for signature to the Members of the Government. After this form had been gone through, Earl Mayo commenced his career as Governor-General by proposing that so long as Sir John Lawrence should remain in India he should receive all the honours due to her Majesty's Viceroy. The Council having concurred, the ceremony of installation was over; a ceremony which ended the career of the foremost Indian officer of this century, and commenced, what we all trust, may be the building up of a great reputation for his successor.—Englishman.

SERIOUS OUTBREAK OF THE KOOKIE TRIBE IN CACHAR.

Misfortunes did not come singly in Cachar on the 10th. Our Calcutta correspondent, telegraphing on the morning of the 19th, says:—

"Reports from Silchar state that the Kookie hill tribe descended on the morning of the 10th and killed many coolies and chowkeydars, burning bungalows and tea-houses in the out-gardens in Cachar."

It appears from the Calcutta papers of the 14th that a brief intimation of the outbreak had already reached Calcutta, and that prompt steps had been taken for its suppression. We read—"In consequence of an outbreak of the Kookie tribes inhabiting the hills and jungles on the frontiers of Sylhet and Cachar, the Brigadier-general commanding on the Eastern Frontier has been desired to comply with such requisitions for troops as he may receive from the civil authorities to enable the outbreak to be repressed. A detachment of seventy men of the 7th Native Infantry, under Lieutenant Logan, has already marched from Cachar in support of the police."

As information comes in about the Kookie raid on the Sylhet Frontier, it seems (writes the Englishman of the 16th instant) to be more and more clear that the attack has resulted from some tribal disputes rather than from a deliberate intention of harassing our borders. On the 28th December a report was sent in to the Magistrate of Sylhet that the Kookie of the Loshai tribe had made a descent on some of the border villages, and that officer at once despatched a police reinforcement under an European officer to Burgajer, the scene of the disturbance. The next day the news came in that the head constable at the Adamapore outpost had moved out with sixteen constables to succour some villages in the neighbourhood, and that the little party had not done much good, as they were forced to retire, the head constable himself and one of his men being severely wounded. At the same time the Rajah of Tipperah sent word that his territory had been attacked and some of his villages burned, and it then came out that a quarrel had broken out between the Loshais and a Kookie Rajah named Rungboom, who had eventually to seek safety in British territory, and that it was in following up this chief that the attack had been made. As usual on this frontier, some of the expatriated Munnipori chiefs are strongly suspected of being mixed up in this business. In the raid the Kookies killed three men and, carried off one girl. The Magistrate of Sylhet has himself proceeded to the frontier; the police have been largely strengthened, and a detachment of the 7th Native Infantry has also been moved up. Further than this, the Government has ordered up a steamer to be ready to convey troops from Shillong and Dacca, if such a step should be necessary. It is probable, however, that the Loshais, finding Rajah Rungboom has escaped them, and seeing the preparations made to protect the frontier against a repetition of their attacks, will draw off quietly to their own fastnesses.

THE FAMINE.

A vernacular paper, with which we are not much acquainted, the Bak Khalif, says, regarding the distress in Marwar:—"It is said that cattle are dying by the thousand, and that water is so scarce that only a few days ago, at Meena, in the Joudpoor district, a zemindar had some 2,500 head of cattle without water for seven days, and finding it impossible to keep them alive without it any longer, went with them to the well, where a crowd of thirsty souls were all waiting for water. The zemindar requested the man in whose charge the well was to give the cattle some water, offering him as much as four rupees per head, but the man refused; and at length the owner offered half his herd, if the other half might be allowed to drink, but even this was not sufficient inducement; and at length, in despair, the cattle-owner threw himself down the well, and was drowned!"

The Bombay Government have been informed by the Government of India that they may, if they see fit, introduce into that Presidency the reduced rates on the transports of grain lately sanctioned by the Viceroy. Orders have been issued for the immediate lowering of the rates of transport by railway in Bengal for all food-grains, flour, and meal for transmission to the districts suffering from scarcity, to an uniform rate of one-eighth of a pie per maund per mile, for all quantities and all distances. This rate is to continue in force till the 15th of March, 1869. One month's notice will be given before the usual rates are resumed. The present rates, on the East India Railway, for the transport of grain are a quarter of a pie per maund per mile for quantities not less than 140 maunds, and for distances not less than 300 miles. For smaller quantities or distances the rate is one-third of a pie per maund per mile. The difference between the reduced rates, and the rates hitherto charged by the railway companies, will be made good by the Government to the companies.

The action taken by the Government in relieving distress by employing large numbers on public works is, says Indian Public Opinion, meeting with the grateful appreciation of the natives to whom such a policy is quite intelligible. It may be remembered that the Fort of Hari Parbat at Srinaga was built by the order of the Emperor Akbar to relieve the sufferers from a famine in Kashmir. The public works, commenced at Delhi and Rohtak, are largely attracting the people of the Buthiana and Sirsa districts, in which distress is most severe.

We recorded some time ago a grant of Rs. 4,000 to Major Tyrwhit, superintendent of the Thurr and Parkur districts, for the relief of the famine-stricken crowds passing through these districts. That sum having proved insufficient to meet the increasing demands for relief, an additional grant of Rs. 6,000 has been made by the Commissioner in Sindh.

LUCKNOW.—We regret to record that great distress is prevailing among the poorer classes of this city, owing to the famine rates at which grain of all kinds is selling. We have not heard if any measures have as yet been adopted by the authorities to alleviate this distress, but we know that robberies are rife.—Lucknow Times, Jan. 16.

LAHORE.—The distribution of bread to the starving poor of Lahore has commenced, under the auspices of the Municipality. Whatever may be the wisdom of such a measure according to political economy, it has certainly the happiest effect in endearing our rule to the people of this province, whom it will take a century of law and education to forget the traditions of a Government of "Ma Bap."—Indian Public Opinion, Jan. 15.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN BENGAL.

The news that a severe earthquake had visited Silchar, Cachar, Assam, and surrounding districts, was first received in Calcutta on the 10th January through the following telegrams:—

"Silchar, 10.30 A.M., January 11.—Fearful earthquake here. New pukka godown, bungalow, and all station-houses down."

"Cachar, Monday Morning.—Terrible earthquake yesterday. All bungalows down. Bazaar engulfed."

Further telegrams received next day stated that up to the time of their despatch from Cachar slight shocks of earthquake continued to take place. The loss however had not been so great as was expected. At Maldah two smart shocks were felt at about five o'clock on Sunday afternoon, the 10th January, accompanied by a noise like that of a heavy train. On the same day a slight shock of earthquake was felt as far west as Dinapore, at 4.15 P.M. This shock was in the direction from north to south, and lasted for about thirty seconds.

A telegram from Gowhatty, January 14th, states that the earthquake was felt most severely throughout Assam. Gowhatty, where it was thought so severe, is less damaged than Shillong, Nowgong, Tezpor, Nazira, and Sebsaugor, at all of which places much injury was done to masonry buildings. From accounts received from Gwalparah, the earthquake of the 10th does not appear to have been very severely felt at that place. Two distinct shocks are described, with an interval of five minutes between them. One house in the bazaar only was thrown down, though the walls of several were cracked. The shocks were distinctly felt at Purneah and Bhaugulpore, and a correspondent at the latter place notices a slight one as having occurred at 1 P.M. of the same day.

The Englishman hears from Kurseong, near Darjeeling, that the earthquake was felt very severely at that place. So alarming were the shocks that many of the inhabitants darted out of their houses, fearing every moment they would be overthrown. A gentleman returning home saw the trees around him rolling from side to side in the most extraordinary manner. The natives gave vent to the terror which filled them in shrieks of "Huree-bol!" and "Ram! Ram!" But the effect of the undulatory motion on terrestrial objects was still more wonderful at Chittagong. A gentleman then at Kussilong, in the hills some ninety miles from Chittagong, states that the earthquake burst upon them with tremendous force. It was travelling apparently eastward and slightly north; the undulations were very severe, and lasted nearly two minutes; the effects were very remarkable; it seemed as if some mighty wave were sweeping on under the earth, and as it passed the solid earth rose and fell with a motion distinctly visible along the banks of the river and on the hills beyond. From the spot where this gentleman was standing he could see the ground rolling wave-like, the hills reeling, and the trees waving to and fro. The spectacle was wonderful and fearful, and one which, once seen, could never be forgotten. The shock occurred at nearly five o'clock on Sunday, Jan. 10. It is somewhat curious to note that, although it was felt, so to speak, over the whole of Lower Bengal, it was felt at all places at almost the same time.

In Cachar, where the earthquake was severest, the shocks had not ceased on the 14th, and the earth still continued to crack and heave. The Binakunddy bungalow and tea house had succumbed, and the Sealtic godown and the land about it were sinking bodily. The barracks at Chinsurah sustained considerable damage from the earthquake of the 10th; Shillong also suffered a good deal. We learn from Silchar that the earthquake shook down the walls of the jail, and that the prisoners are now encamped in the neighbourhood of their late prison. It is now abundantly plain, says the Englishman, from which most of the above facts have been gathered, that the centre of action of the disturbance must have been close to Cachar, whence the shock spread outward in all directions. We shall await with some curiosity to learn if the disturbance made itself felt in the upper valley of the Irrawaddy, the volcanic character of which region has been satisfactorily proved by Captain Sladen's party.

STATION TALK.

SILCHAR, Jan. 10.—Before this reaches you the terrible news I sent by the wire an hour ago will have prepared you for what I have now to say. About a quarter to five o'clock this evening we had a terrible shock of an earthquake, which has destroyed the whole station. I had just returned from Arcuttipore Garden, where I was spending the day, and lay down on my bed to rest. I had been there hardly five minutes when the house commenced to shake, and ten seconds afterwards the wall was down over the bed I had been lying on, and the house was in ruins. I very providentially escaped, and did what I could to stop the panic. The ground rose about twenty feet in a long wave, the river changed its course and rushed upward for fully an hour, overturning many boats. The earth opened in hundreds of places, and volumes of blue sand and water were thrown up everywhere. The river was a fearful sight; the water was thrown fifty feet up in the air, and the water-spouts were numerous. Our new building was thrown down level with the ground, also the spire of the church, and nearly all the station buildings. Mr. J. had a narrow escape; he and our minister were behind me in coming from Arcuttipore, and had just time to jump out of the ferry boat when it went down. Even when on the bank of the river he was nearly swallowed up in the yawning gulfs, but escaped by jumping over a large one before it closed. I visited the bazaar before dark, and found it in ruins. Water was spouting up from the cracks in the street, and all the pukka shops were down. Some of the houses are buried twenty feet below the level of the ground where they stood before, and I am afraid many lives are lost. We have nowhere to sleep to-night, but if we had it would be out of the question, for, to make matters worse, the military are nearly all out of the station. News came to-day, while we were out, that the Loshai tribe had burned down the Woodlands and Soonarbund buildings, and that the planters were missing and the coolies killed. Mr. Edgar left with a force to-day, but the real facts are not to hand. I went down the station to assist in rescuing any people from the ruins, but as darkness came on I was obliged to return. The shocks are very frequent still, and none of us are secure for the night. The hotel house was knocked down, and a water spout poured up from the centre of the ruins, and all over the ground behind. The earth and water were heaving up when I left. It is fortunate that the shock did not occur in Calcutta, or near the sea, for had it done so the consequences would have been awful. The water in our tank washed up over the sides, though it is very deep, and there is but little water in it. What would the damage have been if the river had been full? We are all very thankful that our lives are spared. Dr. Barker's house is levelled with the ground, and so are many others. The ladies in the station have all assembled together, and I hope they will be able to find a place to put up in. I will drop you a line to-morrow, if we are then in the land of the living. You can let the public know the facts, through the Englishman, as there will be no one here to give particulars at present.

Monday Morning.—No worse. Light shocks occurred all through the night, a dense fog issuing from the cracks in the earth. The station is almost totally destroyed. I saw houses and cows down in the fissures this morning early, when I went out.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR J. LAWRENCE'S FELLOW-TRAVELLERS.—Dr. Farquhar, private physician, and Cornet R. G. Kennedy, aide-de-camp to Sir John Lawrence, accompany his Excellency to England on duty.

PUNJAB TENANCY BILL.—The chiefs and nobles of the Punjab are said to be getting up a memorial to the Secretary of State against the Punjab Tenants Bill.

ON DUTY.—The Pioneer hears that Colonel Seymour Blane, the late military secretary to the Viceroy, though he goes home in February, will return to meet the Duke of Edinburgh and accompany his Royal Highness on his travels through India.

RAILWAY VOLUNTEERS.—It has been reported to Government that 287 men, employes of the East India Railway Company, have enrolled themselves as members of the Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps, at the stations of Jamalpore, Dinapore, and Allahabad.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA.—Calcutta is unfortunate with its river. It appears that the proposal to lay down fourteen sets of new moorings above Armenian Ghat has been abandoned for the present, in consequence of a report from the master attendant that the river has silted up to a great extent over the space to be occupied by the new moorings.

CABUL.—According to the Indian Public Opinion great difficulty is sustained by the Cabul authorities in cashing the hoondees or money orders sent from Peshawur for the Ameer, because the mahajans have no money. The exactions upon them, during the late disturbances at Cabul, have been so heavy that they have been almost pauperised.

THE GOLD CURRENCY.—In connection with the recent order directing the Currency Commissioners to receive sovereigns at ten rupees four annas, our Calcutta correspondent informs us that a further step towards a gold currency has been taken. The Mint Masters have been just ordered to indent on England for dies for five, ten, and fifteen gold pieces.

MILITARY SADDLE.—Frequent complaints have been made of the breakage of the seats of the universal pattern saddle supplied to the artillery and cavalry of the British army. A plan, the Pioneer hears, has now been adopted by which the seat of the saddle is supported by webbing attached to the tree, on the same principle as in the old dragoon, or in the ordinary hunting saddle.

DEPARTURE OF SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—Sir John Lawrence embarked this morning, January 19, on board the river yacht Sonamookhee. His Excellency will overtake the P. and O. s.s. Candia down the river. He was accompanied to the Ghat by the heads of the Government, and was received with the usual honours. A large crowd assembled to witness his departure, and cheered him loudly. His Excellency received an address, signed by about 1,350 residents of Calcutta, yesterday afternoon.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

COLONEL BROOME'S RETIRING SCHEME.—It will satisfy a large class of Indian officers to learn that the Government of India has, with certain modifications, approved of Colonel Broome's retiring scheme for field officers. The scheme, according to the Friend of India, has been recommended for the favourable consideration of her Majesty's Government. The change of Ministry will lead to delay in the settlement of this and other Indian questions now before the Home authorities.

CAPTAIN T. ANDERSON.—Death has taken away somewhat suddenly one who was not altogether unknown as a worker upon the Press of India. In to-day's obituary notices we have to record the demise of Captain Thomas Carnegie Anderson, Barrack-master of Fort William. Although he achieved no particular position in even Anglo-Indian literature, he was nevertheless an earnest, indefatigable worker, and the journals to which he chiefly contributed may, with truth, now say of him, as Prince Hal of "Honest Jack," "We could have better spared a better man."—Englishman, Jan. 16.

WRECK OF THE "FUTTEL MOMBARRUK."—On 15th November last Captain Raynes, of the American ship Augusta, discovered the wreck, and rescued the crew, fifty-one in number, of the Futtel Mombarruk. Captain Raynes showed these unfortunates every attention, and brought them to Calcutta, where he made them over to the shipping master on 23rd idem. For this service he has received the thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor, together with a handsome gold watch and chain, the watch bearing a suitable inscription.—Englishman, Jan. 14.

PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—Mr. Lee Smith, Chief Engineer of the Lahore and Peshawur Railway, has been telegraphed to, to remain two months longer in England, to arrange for the ironwork of the bridges over the Ravee, Chenab, and Jhelum; he is expected towards the end of February or beginning of March. A Punjab friend writes that the low-rates system is to be carried out, in which case it will take nearly a generation to complete the line. This system was tried on the Peshawur Grand Trunk Road, which took twenty years to complete, and even then the rivers were not bridged. Again, there is the Markundie-bridge, a common masonry structure over a small nullah. It has been in hand already for eighteen years, and, like the famous bridge of the Burrakur, seems likely to be an heirloom to successive generations of officers in the Public Works Department.—Englishman, Jan. 15.

SMALL-POX IN DELHI.—Small-pox is still raging in the town and district of Delhi. Children are the chief sufferers; one hundred and fifteen are reported to have died.—Indian Public Opinion, Jan. 12.

HOSPITAL EQUIPMENT.—Surgeon Major Francis, M.B., who during his recent absence in Europe devoted much time and attention to the question of ambulances and hospital equipments, having submitted a pamphlet on the subject to the Government of India, a committee, composed of Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals, W. Munro, M.D., C.B., Major C. C. Johnson, Quartermaster-General's Department, and a selected engineer officer, has been ordered to be convened, to consider what improvements can be effected in those equipments to render them more efficient for field service in India.

SUTTEE IN MEYWAR.—We rarely hear of a suttee now in the Rajpootana States, but one is reported to have occurred in August last, in the Meywar territory. The victim was about sixty years of age, the widow of a Brahmin. All the parties concerned have been severely punished by the Maharana, the leading men of the village having been sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. The Governor-General, holding that the heavier punishments should be reserved for the most prominent actors, has suggested that some of the sentences might be reduced, but he has also expressed his gratification at the energy and promptitude displayed by the Maharana in dealing with the case.

THE MARRIAGE LAW OF CEYLON.—The Gazette of India contains a copy of the marriage law of Ceylon. The Colonial Secretary writes to say that it has recently happened that several gentlemen have visited Point de Galle with a view of meeting their intended brides at that place, and of being married without delay, and that great disappointment has been felt on the discovery that, by the Ceylon marriage law, a residence of twenty-one days in the island is necessary prior to the issue of the documents required to enable the parties to enter into a contract of marriage. To prevent any such misunderstanding for the future the marriage law of the island has now been published in India.

SPENCE'S HOTEL.—Another instance of want of success in working trading companies under the limited liability principle is displayed in the winding up of Spence's Hotel, in Calcutta. This hotel, "the hotel" par excellence, has long been struggling with its difficulties; a full house at times, a partly full one at others, an expensive management, and a screw loose somewhere or other always, has left the shareholders in an unenviable position. Whilst "the guarantee" lasted, the dividend was promptly paid. Doubtless the dividend was duly cared for by the promoters and the original directors of the company. Since the expiration of "the guarantee" a single dividend only has, we believe, been paid. That was from the proceeds of the decree on the action brought by the company against two of its first directors. Since then the company has gradually been sinking under its difficulties, and now seeks peace in the hands of the "official liquidators."—Indian Daily News, Jan. 19.

LORD MAYO AND THE FAMINE.—Last Monday we announced (says the Englishman of the 18th inst.) that one of the latest public efforts of Sir John Lawrence was to solve a question of Indian famines, and we are happy to find that Lord Mayo's first conspicuous act has been in the same direction. In order that food may find its way to the afflicted districts, it is necessary thoroughly to interest private enterprise in the work. Sir John Lawrence, by decreasing the cost of transport, has rendered it possible to transmit grain from the most distant provinces with a profit to the sender. Lord Mayo, by the measures which we are about to announce, will enable private enterprise to discover, with the least trouble or delay, how to make the largest profit by the transaction. During the Orissa famine we constantly urged the expediency of publishing the market rates of grain in each district. Some time elapsed before the authorities gave practical effect to the idea, and during the progress of the calamity we had occasionally to comment on the untrustworthiness of the returns. The new Viceroy has at once taken up this question. . . . He proposes to consolidate the scattered provincial returns into one weekly statement. The district officers in Oude, in Behar, in Bengal, in the Punjab, and in the Central Provinces are to send, every week, direct to the Board of Revenue at Allahabad, a statement of the market rates in their districts. These reports will then be incorporated with the current rates in the whole of the North-West Provinces, and the consolidated returns will then be published in the Gazette of the various local Governments. A further publicity will be given by forwarding copies to all parts of the country when they are likely to be useful, and fifty-one are to be sent direct to the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce for distribution here. By this order Lord Mayo has broken through that obstructive routine of transmitting the returns through half-a-dozen offices, which is the bane of the Indian administration during a crisis. It gives us some hint as to what he meant when he said, before leaving England, that action instead of writing was to mark his policy.

Madras.

A REMOVED CHANGE.—The Madras Mail says the Saugor Division is to be given over to Madras, and that a Brigadier General and his Staff will probably shortly be appointed to the command from that Presidency.

FIRE AT TRICHORE.—The Madras military authorities have received intelligence from Quilon that the little town of Trichore has been burned down, and that the huts in the lines of the company of Madras Native Infantry at that place shared the same fate.

TINNEVELLY.—The experimental cultivation of Carolina paddy in the Tinnevely district has, according to the Madras Athenaeum, been pronounced to be a complete failure, though the grain yielded in some parts is much admired as being fine, white, and of a delicate flavour.

MORE TIGERS.—We learn from a correspondent that tigers are prowling about in the vicinity of Kotagherry, and creating some alarm among the inhabitants. The other day a burgher had a very narrow escape, having suddenly found himself in closer proximity to one of these animals than was pleasant, and he had barely time to save his life by climbing up a tree.—Madras Times.

CHANGES OF POSTS.—It is said the Madras Government have approved of the withdrawal of the company of British infantry which hitherto garrisoned Calicut, and have ordered an additional company from the European regiment located at Cannanore being sent to Trichinopoly, thereby having two companies of European infantry at the latter station.

STATE OF BARRACKS AT KAMPTEE.—The Sanitary Commissioner of Madras visited Kamptee on his tour of inspection. We learn from the Central India Times that he has condemned the whole of the barracks for European troops at that station—those in process of construction as well as those already built—and has suggested that new ones should be erected on the rising ground on the site of the present race-course.

IPCACUANHA IN THE NEILGHERRIES.—Recent experiments promise that the cultivation of the ipecacuanha plant on the Neilgherries will prove successful. Three plants obtained from the Royal Gardens in Kew were planted in the Government Gardens at Ootacamund in December last, and Mr. McIvor thinks there can be no doubt that the plants he has got yield the true ipecacuanha of commerce. These three plants have now been increased to nine, and in a few months he hopes they will have attained such growth as to yield sufficient roots to test the quality of their produce.—Madras Times.

KILLED BY AN ELEPHANT.—A wild elephant has been doing sad havoc lately on the mountainous parts of the Western coast. During the past week the Star reports that four men who had been working on the hills to the north of Teravuttar, near Palpanabhapuram, were descending to the plains, when the elephant, which appears to have been shot at on several occasions, suddenly rushed upon them from the thick jungle. The men all took to their heels, and three of them made the best of their way to their homes at Nagercoil (some twenty miles distant), and reported their adventure, and the fact that one of their number was missing. The son and other relatives of the missing man then set out in search, and found his dead body where the elephant had seized and killed him. A report is current that the elephant has since been destroyed by two adventurous natives, who ventured into his "hunting grounds" for that purpose. The unfortunate victim of the elephant's fury was a mason by trade, and belonged to Nagercoil, where he has left a widow and young family. The elephant had previously killed nine persons, making a total of ten persons who have fallen victims to his rage within a short space of time.—Madras Times, Jan. 13.

FINANCIAL REFORM.—It is said that the question of the financial relationship of the local Governments to the Supreme Government of India will soon be brought formally before the Governor-General in Council. The Financial Member of Council is, the Madras Times states, preparing a scheme which is partly of a centralising and partly of a decentralising character. It will apportion to each local Government the quota of the Imperial expenditure which it must contribute, and leave it to expend the balance according to its local requirements. It is not yet known what degree of independence the local Governments are to be allowed in framing their respective budgets.

SUICIDE AT OOTACAMUND.—The Neilgherry Excelsior narrates a melancholy case of suicide which occurred at Ootacamund on the night of the 6th January. Mr. E. Smith, formerly of Coonoor, and lately the proprietor of Fern Hill Hotel, at Ootacamund, killed himself by taking an enormous quantity of morphine. It is said that he called at the dispensary of the Pharmaceutical Company at about half-past eight in the evening, and presented a prescription for twelve pills, each to contain three grains of the drug. Ten of these he is reported to have swallowed, and death ensued as a matter of course. Medical aid was sought, but it proved of no avail. The cause of the rash deed is said to have been of a domestic nature.

MEER AKBAR ALEE.—From Hyderabad, in the Deccan, we learn that among the presentations to the Nizam which were made on the high-day held annually at his Highness' Court, in celebration of the month Ramzan and its fasting being ended, was that of Meer Akbar Alee, a subject of the Nizam, who made himself so favourably known to the British Government during the Abyssinian Expedition that the important services rendered by him formed at the conclusion of the campaign the subject of a most friendly communication from the Government of India to the Nizam. In token of His Highness' satisfaction at these occurrences, he was pleased to confer upon Meer Akbar Alee, at the recent levee, the title of Khan Bahadour, with all its attendant privileges. We sincerely congratulate Meer Akbar Alee Khan Bahadour on the tribute thus paid his many distinguished qualities by his own sovereign. But what are the British authorities about that no notice has been taken by them of services rendered directly to them beyond a few flattering orders and paragraphs in despatches? They may rest assured that thousands in the Nizam's capital, to whom Meer Akbar Alee Khan Bahadour's services in Abyssinia are, through report, familiar, watch with curiosity to see what recognition these will call forth from a Government whose proneness to reward is estimated not very highly.—Times of India.

THE KEONJHUR DISTURBANCES.—Mr. Ravenshaw, who was appointed by the Bengal Government to inquire into these disturbances, after quiet had been restored, has submitted the result of his judicial proceedings. Five of the prisoners have been sentenced to death, twenty-seven to transportation for life, six to transportation for fourteen years, nine to transportation for ten years, eighty-four to periods of imprisonment varying from seven years to three months, forty-eight to whipping, and three to fines. The Governor-general in Council has expressed his satisfaction at the termination of this inquiry. He observes that the proceedings appear to have been conducted with great care and regularity, and that the principles on which the Commissioner has proceeded in making a severe example of some of the ringleaders, and in suitably punishing others, are correct and judicious. These punishments have been awarded, not in the heat of conflict, or by the hasty proceedings of summary tribunals, but after a long and dispassionate investigation, and with the full knowledge and supervision of his Honour the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal. Looking to the character and length of the disturbances, and to the acts of violence and atrocity which were perpetrated during a period of several months, his Excellency has expressed himself decidedly of opinion that no greater amount of severity has been shown than was absolutely called for, as the due punishment of evil-doers, and was indispensable as a warning against similar outbreaks in future. His Excellency in Council has confirmed the whole proceedings, and desired that the approbation of the Government of India may be conveyed to Mr. Ravenshaw for his laborious inquiries.

Bombay.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.

On Thursday, Jan. 21, at noon, an extraordinary general meeting of the proprietors of the Old Bank of Bombay was held in the offices of the bank, to receive a supplemental report of the progress made in the liquidation of the bank, and to appoint and fix the remuneration of a liquidator in the place of Mr. Stuart. Mr. H. Forman was called to the chair.

Mr. John Stuart, having read the notice calling the meeting, read the following supplemental report of the progress of the liquidation:—

A full report of the progress made in the liquidation of the affairs of the bank since the commencement on Jan. 14 last was submitted and adopted at the meeting of proprietors on the 16th November. It will therefore only be necessary upon the present occasion to state what further progress has been made within the last two months in realising the outstandings.

Bank notes and deposits to the amount of Rs. 12,764-13-5 have been paid, but it is still believed that the sum of Rs. 2,25,000 is a fair estimate of what may ultimately lapse to the bank unclaimed.

At the date of last report the amount of debts outstanding considered good was Rs. 1,96,80-1, and we have since received in part payment Rs. 1,01,826-10-8. The sum of Rs. 1,20,063-6-7 has also been received in payment of properties sold, but we have not been able to dispose of any of the landed and other properties still held. Rs. 72,877-7-10 have been received on account of dividends on insolvent and other estates, and the whole of the bills for collection. Rs. 2,31,686-7 have been realised, and the cash balance is now Rs. 7,72,322-6-1.

I again beg to tender my resignation as liquidator, and request that the proprietors will have the goodness at this meeting to appoint some person to relieve me.

JOHN STUART, Liquidator.

Bank of Bombay, in Liquidation, 21st Jan., 1869.

Mr. Hurrell: I believe some properties have been sold, the purchase money of which has not been received yet?

Mr. Stuart: Yes. According to the statement of assets which was submitted at the meeting held on 31st October, the properties sold but not paid for amounted to Rs. 2,74,415-8, and according to the report which I have now read there has been received on that account Rs. 1,20,063-6-7, and the balance is now Rs. 1,54,352. There has been no alteration on the other items. Out of the Rs. 1,54,352 still due on property sold, one lakh is due by Government, for Rogers' property, and this sum will be paid as soon as the conveyances are finished.

An opportunity having been given to those present to ask any questions, without anyone taking advantage of it,

The Chairman proposed—

"That the report and statement of accounts of the liquidator, showing the progress of the liquidation up to the 20th Jan. inst., be and they are hereby approved and adopted."

Mr. Hurrell seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

Miscellaneous.

MR. JUSTICE NEWTON.—We understand that the Hon. Mr. Justice Newton intends to retire from the Bench after the expiration of two months' leave which has been granted to him.

BOMBAY MINT.—The value of silver in the Bombay Mint, at the close of last week, was Rs. 93,63,540, of which Rs. 42,00,000 belonged to the Currency Department.—Times of India, Jan. 23.

POONA.—Major general the Hon. A. H. Gordon, commanding the Poona Division, left Poona on Tuesday en route to Malligam and Dhoolia on inspection duty.

KURRACHEE.—It is worthy of notice that during the whole of last year there was only one case of small-pox reported to the medical authorities in Kurrachee.

SO MUCH THE WORSE.—The question of removing the British regiment from Deesa to Mount Aboo has been for some time under the consideration of the Government. So many practical difficulties have, however, interposed, that the plan, as we learn from the Pioneer, has had to be abandoned.

RIFLE SHOOTING.—At the meeting of the Rifle Association of Western India, just concluded, the silver medal given by the National Rifle Association of England, and the medal offered by the Indian Association for the best shooting with the Enfield rifle, were won by Mr. J. C. Lord, of the First Warwickshire Rifle Battalion. The gold medal of the Rifle Association of Western India and a cup presented by Sir S. Fitzgerald were gained by Mr. W. A. Baker.

PESHAWAR.—A telegram from Peshawar informs us that Azim Khan and Abdul Rahman Khan have both fled from Ghuzni, taking with them nothing but the clothes they had on.

A CHARITABLE GIVER.—The Bombay Guardian informs us that a gentleman in England, well known for his benefactions, has given £300 towards the Ahmednuggur Normal School buildings of the Christian Vernacular Education Society; and £1,000 to the same society to be expended in promoting the work of primary education in this Presidency.

CONVEYANCE OF TROOPS.—We learn that the last of H.M.'s Indian troopships leaving Bombay this season will be the Euphrates, under orders to sail about the middle of February. According to original arrangements, two of the troopships were to have left during February, but one, it is found, will be sufficient to carry the rest of the reliefs, overland.

LORD NAPIER'S MOVEMENTS.—Lord Napier of Magdala left Bombay on Jan. 18, at half-past six P.M., to embark on board the Coromandel, for Vingorla. His Lordship proceeds on a tour of inspection in the Southern Mahratta Country, which will occupy about a fortnight. He is accompanied by Col. Dillon, C.B., Col. Gell, and Capt. Scott. He was loudly cheered on leaving the Apollo Bunder.

REBUILDING OF THE TANNA JAIL.—The Tanna jail in Bombay is to be rebuilt at a cost of 2,75,000 Rs. The old buildings were of a worthless character, and are unfit for use as a prison. As reconstructed, the buildings will accommodate 655 prisoners, and afford a fair proportion of hospital accommodation besides. Of the 655 prisoners, 572 will be confined in sections, seventy-three on the separate system, and ten on the solitary system. The new Tanna jail is to be considered an instalment of a general scheme proposed by the Bombay Government for increasing the amount and improving the character of the jail accommodation of that presidency.

MILITARY.—Major-general the Hon. A. Gordon left Poona on Monday, Jan. 18, on a tour of inspection to Dhoolia and Malligam.—By a letter from Belgium we learn that Major Plomer, Brigade Major at that station, had left for Vingorla and Bombay on privilege leave, preparatory to proceeding to England on two years' furlough. The same correspondent states that Major Hicks, who was Brigade Major in Abyssinia, is most likely to succeed to that appointment at Belgium.—Surgeon H. C. Miles is, we hear, appointed to the medical charge of H.M.'s 82nd Foot; and Surgeon D. Long is appointed to the 25th N.I.—It is stated that Brigadier General Raines, C.B., will succeed Brigadier General Stock in the command of Bombay, should the latter, as is anticipated, proceed on furlough to Europe.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—A vacancy having occurred in the higher grades of the Postal Department by the death of Doctor Impey, Post-master General of Bombay, who was on sick leave in England, the following arrangements, says the Indian Daily News, have been proposed:—Major Battye, now Post-master General of the North-Western Provinces, to act as Post-master General of Bombay; Mr. C. H. Hutchinson, now Officiating Post-master General of Bengal, to take up the duties of the Post-master General, North-Western Provinces, permanently; and Mr. F. R. Hogg, now Post-master General of Bombay, to act as Post-master General of Bengal. In consequence of this arrangement, Captain W. N. Lane, Officiating Post-master General, Punjab, becomes permanent in his appointment.

THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT AND THE CATHEDRAL TRUSTEES.—We understand that the Supreme Government has at length sanctioned the repayment of the money diverted by the Cathedral Trustees from the Fort Christian School Fund, and subsequently by them restored, out of their own purses, to its original destination. While we rejoice that the Government of India has determined that the trustees should not suffer from an error of judgment into which they had been led by legal opinion, we still think that the misdirection of the fund is a painful fact in our local history, and that had not public attention been called, with emphasis and persistency, to the strange circumstances of the case, the money would not have been refunded, and the education of poor children would have been sacrificed to the vehement importunities of certain cathedral creditors. "All's well that ends well," but the example ought not to be forgotten.—Bombay Gazette.

DEPARTURE OF MR. JOHN STUART.—Among the passengers to England by to-morrow's mail is Mr. John Stuart, the liquidator of the old Bank of Bombay, who now leaves India finally. Mr. Stuart first joined the Bank in 1840—twenty-nine years ago. His first appointment was that of accountant of the Bank; in 1842 he received the post of secretary and treasurer, in which office he continued until 1860, when he retired, and was succeeded by Mr. James Blair, under whose management the Bank was ruined. As a proof of the admirable manner in which Mr. Stuart conducted the Bank, we may mention that, during the whole twenty years from 1840 to 1860, its losses only amounted to about Rs. 20,000. Early in 1867, when the institution was tottering under the load of its disasters, Mr. Stuart was induced to come out to its aid; but it was then beyond the point at which even his help could save it. How efficiently the Bank has been liquidated up to the present time is well known, and the vote of thanks tendered to him yesterday at the meeting of the shareholders testified to the appreciation in which his services are held.—Times of India, Jan. 23.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE.—The ship North, Captain Wyllie, which sailed from Liverpool on the 19th of October last, and reached Bombay on the 19th of January, reports having spoken the ship Sandringham, from Liverpool to Bombay, on December 20, in 24 deg. south latitude, and 69 deg. east longitude. The North also spoke the ship Dundee, from Calcutta to England, on the 21st of December, in 22 deg. south latitude, and 69 deg. east longitude.

SEPOY ARMS.—Since the revelations made by our experience in the Abyssinian Expedition, and the discussion of the question in our columns and those of our contemporaries, the Government of India, says the Friend, has had under consideration the subject of arming the sepoys with a rifle which will make them what they are paid to be—fighting men. The Secretary of State has recently been urged to sanction the gradual introduction of Enfield rifles into the native army, beginning with a certain number of corps in each Presidency.

EGUTPOORA.—The station learnt on Friday morning last of the serious illness of Mr. William Charlton, junior acting district locomotive superintendent, who was seized with a fit of apoplexy, from the effects of which he remained unconscious till his death, which took place on Saturday. Deceased was the eldest son of William Charlton, Esq., locomotive superintendent of the G.I.P. Railway, and a fine promising young man, only twenty-four years of age. He was very much respected throughout the whole of the line, more especially by those who were immediately connected with him. He was most assiduous in the discharge of his duties, and took a lively interest in the arrangements for the late Christmas festivities at his own station. The funeral, which took place on Sunday, was attended by a large number of the staff from Munmar, Nassick, Nandgaum, &c.—Times of India, Jan. 23.

SUSPENSION OF GRAIN DUTIES IN KUTCH AND WAGUR.—Appended is a translation of a proclamation issued by Maharajah Dhiraj Mirjah Rao Pragmuljee Bahadoor of Kutch, dated Posh Sood, 19th December, 1868, 5th Sunwut year 1925:—"During the current year the districts of Marwar have been visited by famine, and in consequence grain is being imported into that territory from distant quarters. In order to reduce the high price of the grain, the Chiefs of Rajpootana have suspended the levy of transit duties within their respective jurisdictions. In consideration of this, as well as of the depressed condition of the people of this province (where also the monsoon has signally failed), it is decided that the transit duties hitherto levied on behalf of this durbar on grain passing through my territory shall not be levied either in Kutch or Wagur for the current year."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

STAFF—INSPECTIONS.

No. 388.—The C. in C. finds it necessary to inform general officers commanding divisions that when they proceed on tours of inspection, or other out-station duties within their commands, the proper staff officers to accompany them are the assistant adjutant-general and the assistant quartermaster-general.

The brigade majors at divisional head-quarters should not accompany general officers on such occasions. They should remain at the station to which they are attached.

This rule does not apply to district (viz., Eastern frontier, Gwalior, Saugor, and Rohilkund districts) commands, where there are no assistant adjutant-generals. In such a command the brigadier-general will be accompanied by his brigade major and officer of the quartermaster-general's department; and, during such temporary absence of the brigade major, an officer should be appointed to act as station staff.

MUSKETRY—STAFF—SECONDING.

No. 392.—The following letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India to H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, No. 369, dated Oct. 28 last, is published:—

I have to inform you that it has been decided, on the recommendation of H.R.H. the F.M. C. in C., that a captain of a line regiment serving in India, which, having been seconded on being appointed a district inspector of musketry returns to his regiment on completion of his tour of service, is to be borne as a supernumerary in his rank, and his Indian pay and allowances admitted as a charge on Indian revenues.

It is to be understood that an officer so situated will be absorbed on the occurrence of the first vacancy.

SERVICE FOR PENSION—INSPECTORS-GENERAL OF HOSPITALS.

No. 51.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 433, dated Dec. 8 last, is published:—

India-office, London, Dec. 8, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your letter, dated Oct. 24 last, No. 413, submitting the question whether service for the extra pension of £350 in the case of inspectors general of hospitals, or £250 in that of deputy inspectors general, should commence from the date of the officer's appointment to that grade, or from the date of his taking up the duties of the appointment.

With the view of rendering the periods regulating the tenure of office and the claim to extra pension identical, you recommend that the service should be held as commencing from the date of appointment if the officer be in India, or, if otherwise, from the date of his arrival in India; and that the full consolidated pay of the appointment should commence, for an inspector general, from the date of his entering the presidency, if he be not already within it, and for a deputy inspector general from the date of his entering the circle.

Her Majesty's Government approve of these recommendations being adopted as a general rule; but it is not their intention thereby to alter the decision laid down in my despatch, dated May 24, 1867, No. 144, which limited the tenure of office, in the case of an inspector or deputy inspector general who has been officiating as such on full pay prior to his permanent appointment, to five years from the date of the commencement of such officiating service. In this case the five years qualifying for extra pension should commence at the same time.—I have, &c., (Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

PAY OF THE NAVAL BRIGADE OF THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

Fort William, Jan. 6.—No. 11.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 410, dated Nov. 10 last, is published for general information:—

Military—No. 410.

India-office, London, Nov. 30, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—Para. 1. Having forwarded to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty your Excellency's military letter No. 291 of August 4 last, in which you recommend that the naval brigade forming part of the Abyssinian expeditionary force should be allowed the same pay as was issued to the naval brigade serving in Bengal in 1857-58, I have been informed in reply that their lordships have been pleased to approve of this proposal, and have ordered the officers who served in the said brigade to be granted such amounts as will make their whole pay and allowances (including their English naval pay) equal to those of officers of the corresponding grades in the foot artillery when serving in India, as shown at page 322 of the regulations for European officers in India:—

2. Their lordships have also ordered the men of the naval brigade to be paid according to the following scale, viz.:—Petty officers, 1s. 3d. a-day; sergeants, royal marines, 1s. 3d. a-day; corporals, 1s. 3d. a-day; leading seamen, 1s. a-day; lance corporals, royal marines, 1s. a-day; able seamen, 9d. a-day; ordinaries, 9d. a-day; privates, royal marines, 9d. a-day; and boys, 6d. a-day.

3. Their lordships have also acceded to the recommendation of Lord Napier of Magdala, that the seamen of the brigade should be allowed an extra 2d. a-day in addition to the foregoing rates.

4. They have requested that no payments be made to the naval brigade in accordance with this scale by your Government, as they consider it would be more expedient that all payments should be made by the accountant-general of the navy.

5. You will communicate a copy of this despatch to the Government of Bombay.—I have, &c.,

MEDAL FOR ABYSSINIAN SERVICES.

Jan. 7.—No. 9.—H.E. the Governor-general in Council has much satisfaction in publishing for general information the following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 420, dated Dec. 4 last:—

"Para. 1. I have much pleasure in acquainting your Excellency that her Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify her pleasure that a medal be granted to all her Majesty's British and Indian forces, naval and military, who took part in the operations in Abyssinia, which resulted in the capture of Magdala."

The Governments of Fort St. George and Bombay, and H.E. the C. in C. in India, are requested to adopt early measures for furnishing the rolls of the officers and soldiers of corps who are entitled to the medal now authorised by her Majesty.

COURTS MARTIAL.

Head Qrs., Calcutta, Jan. 1.—With reference to the Mutiny Act of 1868 and to G.O.C.C. dated Dec. 16, 1868, the following Horse Guards G.O. is re-published for general information and guidance:—

Horse Guards General Order No. 63 (Mutiny Act and Articles of War).

The following supplementary Article of War (rendered necessary by an omission in the 106th Article appended to the Mutiny Act for the present year), having received the Queen's approval and signature, is promulgated for general information and guidance, viz.:—

"A general court martial convened in any part of our dominions other than those mentioned in the 106th of our Articles of War, shall consist of not less than nine commissioned officers, each of whom shall have held a commission from us for three years before the assembly of the Court."

THE CURRENCY COMMISSIONERS.

Jan. 5.—No. 118.—Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council, having had under consideration the position of the assistant commissioners in the Paper Currency Department, observes that while three [Mr. R. A. Stern-dale, assistant to the deputy commissioner of Paper Currency, Lahore, Mr. W. Wells, ditto, Kurrachee, and Mr. G. W. Cline, LL.D., ditto, Nag-pore.] of these officers are, the undermentioned four have not yet been included in the classified grades of the financial department, viz.:—

	Salary. Rs.
Mr. A. R. Gordon, assistant to the commissioner of the department of issue of paper currency, Bombay ...	1,000
Mr. L. Berkeley, assistant commissioner of paper currency, in charge of the exchange department, Calcutta ...	1,000
Mr. F. Greenway, assistant commissioner of the department of issue of paper currency, Calcutta ...	600 to 800
Mr. H. Cowie, assistant to the deputy commissioner of paper currency, Allahabad ...	400 to 600

2. With a view to remove this inconsistency, to improve the prospects of the officers concerned, and to secure a larger field for selection for vacancies in the currency department, H.E. in Council is pleased to direct that the four officers last mentioned shall be graded in the classes of the financial department, the salaries of which correspond with their present salaries, viz., Messrs. Gordon and Berkeley in the 3rd class, Mr. Greenway in the 4th class, and Mr. Cowie in the 5th class.

COMMUTATION OF LEAVE, C.S.

Fort William, Jan. 4.—No. 47.—Read: An endorsement of the home department, No. 4768, dated Dec. 12, 1868, forwarding for consideration a copy of papers on the subject of the commutation into furlough of a portion of the sick leave taken by Mr. Tucker, of the civil service, and referring the question raised in paragraph 3 of the letter from the Government of Bengal.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that it was not intended by the new rules that period of service, which formerly counted as residence under old rules, should now be deducted from the completed residence of any officer, except in the case of one year's leave on sick certificate taken under old rules. In this latter case, a compensation or equivalent was sanctioned by the new rules, in the shape of a reduction of the period of residence by one year. All other leave, which has under old rules been actually credited as residence, will still remain so credited; as, for instance, sick leave under the rules of May, 1843, within Indian limits (comprising certain degrees of longitude and latitude). On this point the home department is referred to the financial resolution No. 3,477, dated Nov. 5, which, indeed, relates only to qualification for furlough, but may, a fortiori, be considered as applying to qualification for pension, since what is actual service for furlough must be held to be "residence" for pension. Rule 16 will, however, be strictly construed as regards leave granted after July 1, 1868.

ALTERATION OF POSTAL RATES.

No. 163.—Under the provisions of Section 20 of the "Indian Post-office Act, 1866," the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to declare that the limits of weight prescribed by Section 8 of the said Act for the several rates of letter postage shall be doubled, in respect of letters posted on or after April 1, 1869.

The scale prescribed in Section 8 of the Post-office Act, and the scale to be substituted for it under this order, are given below:—

Scale prescribed in Section 8 of the Indian Post-office Act, 1866.

On every letter not exceeding a quarter of a tola in weight, 6 pie.

On every letter exceeding a quarter of a tola, and not exceeding half a tola in weight, 1 anna.

On every letter exceeding half a tola, and not exceeding one tola in weight, 2 annas.

Scale now prescribed in respect of Letters posted on or after April 1, 1869.

On every letter not exceeding half a tola in weight, 6 pie.

On every letter exceeding half a tola, and not exceeding one tola in weight, 1 anna.

And for every tola in weight above one tola, one additional anna; and every fraction of a tola above one tola shall be charged as one additional tola.

Read—

A letter from the Dep. acct. gen., N.W.P., No. 6,054, dated Nov. 24 last, inquiring whether a covenanted civil servant on returning from leave and rejoining his station on the afternoon of the day on which his leave expired, and not resuming charge of his duties till the forenoon of the day following, has not exceeded his leave by one day, and thereby forfeited his salary for that day under the rules.

Resolution.—In modification of previous orders on the subject, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that, when an officer's leave or time for joining an appointment to which no substitute or acting officer has been appointed, expires on a holiday, or on any day which falls within a recess or a holiday of more than one day's duration, and he takes charge of his duties on the forenoon of the first working day following such recess or holiday, he shall be treated in regard to his allowances as if he had taken charge on the day on which his leave expired.

THE NEW LINE REGIMENTS.

SIR,—The undersigned very earnestly solicit perusal of the enclosed documents, attested by us and by officers from no less than seven new line regiments, many of whom hold the rank of field officer. The principal points are as follows:—Under the amalgamation order of April 10, 1861, we were ostensibly offered free election for—first, the Indian staff corps; second, the old local service, with its advantages and seniority rights, guaranteed by statute; third, the new line regiments, i.e., the "general service." This freedom of election in 1861 was, however, merely nominal. Thus, clauses 72, 73, 84 of this order not only rigidly barred our entry to the said staff corps, but actually destroyed the local service just named. This latter service had, in fact, in 1861 been converted (in Bengal) into cadres or paper regiments, in which our guaranteed seniority, rights, and privileges, advantages, assured employ, regimental staff commands, command allowances, and bonus funds, &c., disappeared in toto under operation of the above clauses; and we were even authoritatively informed that in those cadres "about one thousand officers would be thrown out of necessary employment, and that our professional prospects were destroyed."—Verbatim, from paragraph 60, 61 of Government Commissioners' report, signed by Sir R. Birch, Military Secretary to Government of India; Gen. Balfour, Secretary of Military Finance; Cols. Colgan, Eyre, Malleson; and dated April 17, 1861. Being thus, by clauses 72, 73, 84, both denied entry to the staff corps in 1861, and our professional prospects in our former service destroyed, certain of our number entered the twelve new line regiments—viz., the only option or service left—solely to escape the supersession, the "professional ruin" and "non employ" of which we were thus authoritatively advised, and we were then gravely informed that we had volunteered! The Bombay and Madras native regiments were, in 1861, neither disbanded, nor were the officers turned adrift "without employ." This cruel and "extra" pressure was, in truth, applied solely to those officers who, in Bengal, had borne the brunt of the Mutiny both in purse and person. A nominal permission to revert to our ruined and disbanded regiments (cadres) was, indeed, subsequently offered us in 1863, but, on our application, this permission was, with scarce an exception, rigidly withheld! Moreover, under the Royal warrant of Jan. 16, 1861, we were declared to be eligible for the staff corps even from the twelve new line regiments, but this distinct promise held out to us on entry has been since set aside. Officers of "old" line regiments, ranging up even to twenty-four years' standing, are actually now gazetted "on probation" to that staff corps, now the substitute of the local army of India, in which we have been reared, yet no room therein or in our immense Indian Empire can, it is affirmed, be now found for the services of some twenty to thirty of our experienced, tried, and fully qualified officers of the "new" line, chiefly married captains and lieutenants, whose lingual and other qualifications are often attested either by the army lists, by their selection by Government for our highly trained European regiments (considered a kind of refuge or boon in 1861), or by former staff and field service in native regiments. We are now specially excluded because we are "new" line officers, and because we are over seven years' service.—(See G.O., 1,102, of December 21, 1866, and G.O.C.C., 190, of August 10, 1867). Certain Indian artillery officers have even been forcibly transferred to the royal artillery despite their protest; and, like ourselves, are thus deprived of their former right to Indian staff and entry to the staff corps, and to promised participation in Lord Cranborne's measures of redress. Lord Chancellor Cranworth and two Royal Commissioners, however, decided, in 1863-1865, that the said clauses 72, 73, 84, violated the statute passed for our protection; and Lord Cranborne, on August 7, 1866, informed Parliament that, consequent on this decision, these very clauses which had, in 1861, barred our entry to the staff corps and destroyed our former local service should be rescinded, and that "all officers who belonged to the Indian army before the amalgamation should, therefore, be allowed to join the staff corps without test or condition whatever"—(Verbatim Times of August 8, 1866). Officers who had not passed the humblest test, or served even a day in the field or on staff, were thus allowed a fresh election in 1866, either to remain local or to enter the staff corps. His lordship's official pledge to ourselves was, however, distinctly violated, and even those of our officers who have repeatedly applied to enter since 1861, who have passed the very highest lingual and other staff corps tests, or who have served for years on staff or in the field in native regiments, and who often hold medals for almost every Indian war from the Cabul down to the Umbeyla campaign, are not only denied the redress granted to their brethren, but are still bound by their enforced election in 1861, and have actually been denied entry to the staff corps ever since its institution, their hard earned lingual and other testimonials of staff and field service being thus specially nullified. Even foulhough entailed by exposure or wounds caused rigid denial of our entry to the staff corps in 1861! We submit—1. That our said election in 1861, under pressure of the above illegal clauses 72, 73, 84, cannot be held to be either just, legal, or valid. 2. Owing to payments to Indian widows, orphan, and military funds, or to other engagements entered into prior to the amalgamation, our pay is less than that received in the "old" line regiments. 3. To our officers who are of long seniority service, "exchange" is simply ruinous, since it not only entails the final loss of long-delayed promotion, but also loss of steps, pension, money, service, and of claims to compensation for loss of bonus, and of many years' paid-up subscriptions thereto. The new line regiments are, moreover, limited in number, and, with scarce any exception, are now on the roll for almost immediate home service. Owing to these reasons, and to loss of the bonus still obtainable in regiments last on the roll, exchange is notoriously unprocureable, and thus every avenue of escape is closed to those who, in the new, as in the "old," line regiments, are unable to serve out of India. Officers of the late Indian artillery are not even required to serve at home; and, owing to this fact, and to their dislike to serving in the rank of major, and to receipt of staff corps (half batta) pay, but very few even desire to enter the staff corps. The steps gained by entry of a dozen officers or so would, moreover, retard others from following suit. As, under the new furlough rules, many scores of staff posts are daily falling vacant, our continued exclusion from redress is now insisted on, not in the interests of the State, but solely of the holders of local Indian patronage. Those who are unable to serve out of India now earnestly solicit permission to revert to our former service, such being, if entry to the staff corps be still denied, the sole avenue of escape left. It is, indeed, but too evident that, under cover of a network of orders so vast as to defy manuscript (official) appeal, we alone of the late Indian army are actually being subjected—secretly so to speak—to the usual award of a military tribunal for grievous misconduct. We are, in fact, respectfully claiming, not reward for past services in some of the most trying scenes of Indian history, but that we may not be—despite the gracious and considerate efforts of his Royal Highness for our relief—exceptionally and needlessly subjected to enforced resignation of our commissions and means of subsistence.—We have the honour, &c.,

TEN OFFICERS OF NEW LINE REGIMENTS.

Miscellaneous.

THE BODEN SCHOLARSHIP (OXFORD, Feb. 12).—The Boden (Sanskrit) Scholarship has been awarded to Mr. P. de Lacy Johnstone, Exhibitioner of Balliol College.

THE WAR OFFICE AND GENERAL BALFOUR.—The Assistant Controller-in-Chief at the War Office has resigned. General Balfour, with the feeling so properly predominant in the army of implicit obedience to their superiors in authority, having been unable to induce the Secretary of State to concur in his views, has thrown up his appointment rather than obey the orders he received. We trust that this example of obedience will not be followed by other subordinates of the new Control Department.—Broad Arrow.

THE EXPECTED REDUCTIONS IN THE ARMY.—We believe there is no truth in the rumours current during the past week that the Government have given up the intention of reducing five ensigns in each battalion. It is possible that this rumour was caused by the intention to appoint to commissions all those candidates who have passed the necessary examination to qualify them for a commission; but it may be expected that after this class is provided for there will be some interval before any further examinations are held.—Ibid.

THE SASSOON STATUE.—In the North Court, at the South Kensington Museum, has been placed a statue in marble, rather larger than life, of the late David Sassoon, the munificent Armenian merchant, of Bombay. This figure, the work of Mr. Woolner, is finally to be set up in a great hall which has been erected to the honour of the subject in Bombay, where, as at Poona, he built schools and hospitals with a portion of his enormous wealth—doing such good works during his life as well as by testament after death.

THE LOSS OF THE "BELLCARRIG."—Intelligence has been received in Liverpool of the safety of the crew of the Bellcarrig, which was destroyed at sea by fire, whilst on the voyage from Sunderland to Bombay with a cargo of coal. The crew were picked up in their boats by the barque Larnax, which has arrived at Colombo from Sunderland. The crew of the Bellcarrig were picked up in lat. 57 S., lon. 79 E., the ship having taken fire and been abandoned in lat. 15 S., lon. 76 E.

THE HODGSON MSS. IN THE INDIA-OFFICE LIBRARY.—A correspondence has passed in the Athenæum respecting the disappearance of the "Hodgson MSS." from the India-office Library. The most interesting fact we learn from the long letter of Professor Goldstucker and its enclosures is that the Hodgson MSS., although they had been lent for literary purposes, are now in safe keeping again, and that the librarian is hardly amenable to the charge made against him by anonymous correspondents of the Athenæum, viz., that "under the management of Dr. F. E. Hall, the librarian to the India-office, MSS. might improperly disappear from the India-office Library."

"BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE" ON THE INDIAN SERVICE.—Indian service is most unpopular with the officers of the English army, and India in a great measure loses the services of many able but poor men who would formerly have joined the Company's force there. They cannot afford going into one of our regiments in India, for though they could live on their pay there they could not do so when their battalions returned to this country; and it is a wretched, hopeless business to be always exchanging. When the Company's European army was abolished, one of the greatest of Indian living statesmen said to us: "You will see both your army and our service will lose by the change; you will get an inferior class both of officers and men in consequence, and we will lose the services of that very class from whom our best officers have been drawn—viz., the sons of poor men of good family who prefer a military life, but cannot afford the expense of the Queen's service." Every day's experience since has, we think, proved the truth of this remark.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of Edward Melian Gullifer Showers, a general in H.M. Royal Madras Artillery, who died on the 13th of December, aged eighty-four, at his residence, Westbourne-house, Cheltenham, was proved on the 14th ult. at Gloucester. The testator has left his household furniture and effects to his wife Amy absolutely, and she is also to have the annual income of the residue of his personal property for life, and at her death such residue is to go to his son, Edward Samuel Graeme Showers.—The will and codicil of Dame Elizabeth Vergo Riall, the widow of the late General Sir Phineas Riall, who died on the 4th ult. at Hazlewood, Yorkshire, has just been proved by the executors, Sir John Kirkland and the Hon. Peter Campbell Scarlett. The personal property is sworn under £14,000. The deceased leaves to Sir John Kirkland £1,000 and a bronze service, and to her other executor a legacy of £200; the rest of her property is left upon trust for Mrs. Emily Elizabeth Russell Langdale and her issue.

SAD ACCIDENT AT SEA.—Several lives have been lost by a collision in the Channel between the Calcutta, belonging to Messrs. Mackay and Co., and the Prussian barque Emma. The Calcutta had 270 miles of telegraph cable for the Persian Gulf on board. The collision took place off the Lizard on the night of the 6th in a gale, and the Prussian vessel sank immediately with the master and six of the crew. The Calcutta was afterwards abandoned sixteen miles off the Lizard, and Captain Owen, the chief mate, the chief engineer, Mr. Wright, a midshipman, the cook, steward, and four seamen, were drowned while engaged in lowering the boats. The rest of the crew succeeded in landing at Mount's Bay. Several steamers put out to sea from Falmouth and Plymouth in search of the ship. Before the crew quitted the Calcutta they had thrown overboard 120 miles of the cable from the fore tank. The vessel had, when abandoned, ten feet of water in the main hold, and the two fore compartments were full of water. She is valued at about £25,000, and is insured at Lloyd's. Of the freight a part only is said to be insured. The cable on board is supposed to be of the value of £100,000, and it is understood that the Council of India do not insure. The other part of the cable is stated to have been just shipped in another vessel. The Calcutta has since been picked up by the steam frigate Terrible, 19, Captain T. P. Cooke, and brought into Plymouth Sound. When discovered she was already in possession of a first-class pilot, Mr. Edward Glynn. He had gone on board with four of his crew, but finding themselves unequal to the task of navigating her, the crew left Mr. Glynn alone in charge, and departed in the Surprise for Plymouth to obtain steam tugs. The fore compartment of the Calcutta is full of water, her jibboom, foremast head, maintop gallantmast, and misen royalmast, with all the gear attached, are carried away. The shrouds, which are of galvanised iron, and a great portion of the rigging, are hanging over the port side, and most of her canvas is torn. The cabins have been gutted of their furniture.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

ARTILLERY ORGANISATION.

The Army and Navy Gazette observes that the authorities are about to recognise the legitimate unit of cavalry—the squadron; surely the equally legitimate unit of artillery—the battery, may now hope to regain more of its former prominence. The organisation into brigades gave birth to an unwieldy unit, one either too large or too small, and we venture to assert, peculiarly unsuited to a service like ours, so widely scattered amongst our foreign possessions. Has this brigade system really succeeded in welding a number of batteries into a regimental organisation? Are the non-commissioned officers and men as well trained and as well cared for as they would be were they under a more exact supervision? In the horse and field artillery the battery arrangement has not been so greatly interfered with, but in garrison brigades the attempt at a regimental organisation has been made, and we venture to assert that the attempt has not been a success. But, even in horse and field batteries the promotion of non-commissioned officers takes place throughout the brigade, the result being that a commanding officer never has the chance of carefully forming and retaining his non-commissioned officers, whereas, under the battery system, each commanding officer of a battery would be on his mettle, and for his own credit's sake, would use every endeavour to advance the knowledge and character of his non-commissioned officers, to the vast benefit of the Artillery service at large. The present arrangement is, moreover, extravagant, because it leads to an immense amount of correspondence between the outlying portions of a brigade and its head-quarters. Take the one instance of a battery at St. Helena, with head-quarters at Mauritius, where every letter passing must travel to England en route to its destination. Now, were there a certain number of common centres like head-quarters of divisions of Royal Marines, these inconveniences might be much reduced. Each of these might comprise horse, field, and garrison artillery, and the promotions to horse artillery might always be made in the division to save expense, every detail within the division being worked by batteries. Then we should have something of the old battalion system, only the head-quarters would be fewer in number and scattered, instead of being fixtures at Woolwich. There is yet another point of great import in the organisation of artillery, viz., the permanent maintenance of brigades as field or garrison. Without for one moment advocating anything like a constant interchange of these duties, we would point to the necessity, in a scattered service like ours, of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men being readily able to adapt themselves to changed duties within the requirements of their own arm. Drivers, of course, would be permanent; but, further, we would draw attention to the importance of all gunners—horse, field, and garrison—being acquainted with, and occasionally drilled at, both field and garrison guns. When the varied requirements of our scattered army are considered, we venture to hope that the suggestions thus briefly hinted at may meet with more than a cursory glance from those whose best interests they are designed to serve.

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

In the opinion of the Times the demand for active intervention in Central Asia, is supported by cumulative arguments of very unequal force. When it is alleged that Russia, in spite of positive official disavowals, has been deliberately pushing her conquests deeper and deeper into the heart of the continent, we cannot gainsay the evidence adduced. No one can suppose that Russia has the smallest intention of retiring from the position she now holds. On the contrary, she has spared no pains in consolidating by administrative organisation the districts already incorporated, and in fortifying posts to serve as the basis of ulterior operations. There is reason to believe that her next step will be to establish a direct line of communication between the Caucasus and the sea of Aral, thereby opening up a new approach for her legions to the Oxus and Jaxartes. Nevertheless, the Times does not think that the extension of the Russian Empire in Asia bodes any harm to our Indian possessions. The conquest of Afghanistan would be a difficult enterprise, and a barren triumph for Russian arms; and it would be a policy of gratuitous and unproductive malevolence to seek to injure us in India. But, in any case, for the present we may be content to grasp the simple principle that our best security against the supposed designs of Russia consists, not in the dispersion, but in the concentration of our strength. The one idea that it is desirable to impress on the native mind throughout Asia is that England, though fully prepared to repel attack on the soil of India, will never take the aggressive.

Commenting on the above remarks, the Echo, upon the supposition that this endeavour to excite fear of Russia is written by well-informed persons, does not hesitate to characterise it as wicked and treasonable to the public interests; it is no more harmless than it would be for a nurse to scare a young child with frightful exhibitions. For weeks past the Times has been exhibiting the Russian ogre swallowing up the territory of the Turks, and now the fearful plaything is suspended over India. There are thousands of people weak enough to be influenced by such careless toying with great questions. There may be some who believe the Czar to be a Colossus, capable of ruling all Europe and Asia from St. Petersburg; but they are blind leaders of the blind, who do not know that his hands are quite full of business and his kingdom already much divided against itself. That Russian policy hopes to break the fetters which the Treaty of Paris placed upon it is certainly true, and sooner or later this will be accomplished without arousing the active hostility of England; but when the Czar has this in prospect, and so much internal work upon his hands, to suppose him capable of the folly of attacking us in India, is not ignorant, but a scarcely disguised attempt to revive a policy of war expenditure and annexation.

LORD MAYO'S PROSPECTS.

The Telegraph observes that Lord Mayo is unfortunate in the prospect of famine which menaces Central India—a far more serious prospect than that of the troubles threatened at Joudhpore, or the slight deficiency expected in the Calcutta Budget. Lord Mayo will surely profit by the past, and understand that a famine in India is really a monstrous absurdity, since the elements of plenty are furnished by a rich soil, and by many and copious streams. There is good reason to believe that the new Viceroy fully appreciates the necessity of stimulating the productive capacities of India to the highest point by a thorough system of irrigation. Such a system may entail momentary expense, but it must always “pay,” and, indeed, yield a magnificent return. For one thing, it will provide the best safeguard against famine. At present the scarcity in Central India is caused by want of water, not by the churlishness of the soil; and Lord Mayo, one cannot doubt, will at once take steps to obviate the defect. Another necessary reform is the construction of railways throughout every part of the Peninsula. In this respect much has already been done, and more has been planned. There is no time to be lost; and, should Lord Mayo be supported at home, he will, it is understood, use every effort to extend the railway system.

THE COMMISSARIAT IN ABYSSINIA.

The Daily News draws our attention to the fact that Lord Napier's recommendation of the commissariat department has been disregarded. It declines to believe that the military authorities of this country are so prone to professional jealousy and to petty partiality as to grudge the usual rewards for a successful campaign to an army because it was Anglo-Indian led by an Anglo-Indian General. Yet the fact remains patent, that in every campaign in which British soldiers have been engaged the head of the commissariat department has received the decoration of the Bath, while no such decoration has been given to any commissariat officer for Abyssinia, although the success of the campaign in that African Switzerland depended immensely on the exertions, energy, and self-sacrifice of that department. Honours have been heaped broadcast upon officers who commanded regiments, and officers second in command, but the commissariat department, without which no regiment could have approached Magdala, has been singularly omitted. Lord Napier recognised his obligation to this department, and pressed upon the authorities its claims to recognition, but it appears that as soon as the general, whom popular applause, much more than official favour, raised to high honour, had left England, his recommendations were quietly shelved and his wishes contemptuously disregarded. If Lord Napier was only rewarded by the military hierarchy because he was the popular idol of the hour, it argues weakness on the part of those who did reward him, knowing him to be undeserving; if he was meritorious, and only received a due acknowledgment of his merits, at least some notice should be taken of his recommendations of his subordinates, even if all cannot be attended to.

GREAT-COAT FOR NATIVE INFANTRY.—A new pattern great-coat, says the Pioneer, has been sealed for issue to native regiments of infantry.

From G. M. Tweddell, F.R.S.N.A., and F.S.A.S., Author of "Shakespeare, his Times, &c." Stokesley, York, Feb. 8, 1869:—

"I have used Dr. Locock's Wafers and always found them to give immediate relief to myself, my wife, and children in difficulty of breathing, coughs, and other affections of the lungs; and having experienced their benefits for some years and witnessed their good effects on my friends (some of whom were asthmatical), I have great pleasure in recommending their use."

To singers and public speakers they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice, and have a pleasant taste.

Price 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. per box.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

STOMACH AND SKIN.—The digestion cannot be long or seriously disordered without the derangement being perceptible on the countenance. These Pills prevent both unpleasant consequences; they improve the appetite, and with the increase of desire for food they augment the powers of digestion and assimilation in the stomach. Holloway's Pills deal most satisfactorily with deranged or diseased conditions of the many organs engaged in extracting nourishment for our bodies from our various diets, as the liver, stomach, and bowels, over all of which they exercise the most salutary control. By resorting to an early stage of their maladies to these purifying and laxative Pills, the dyspeptic is speedily restored to health and strength, and his sallowness gradually vanishes.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—AGUA

AMARELLA restores the human hair to its pristine hue, no matter at what age. JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have at length, with the aid of one of the most eminent chemists, succeeded in perfecting this wonderful liquid. It is now offered to the public in a more concentrated form, and at a lower price. Sold in bottles, 3s. each; also 5s., 7s. 6d., and 15s. each, including brush.

JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have been appointed Perfumers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.—Angel-passage, 93, Upper Thames-street, London.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 30; Agra and Calcutta, January 26; Madras, January 25.

The event of the week in Bombay was the terrible smash of a passenger train near Kandalla, on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, on the morning of January 26. The fact itself was notified by telegram some weeks ago, and the details now received take nothing from the sad impression then produced. At Kandalla the driver found "something unmanageable" about the train. Certain precautions were at once taken for regulating the speed, but in vain. The train was soon flying along the incline at the rate, it is said, of sixty miles an hour, in spite of every effort on the part of driver, brakesmen, and guard to check its progress. At last the driver reversed his engine, putting the handle "hard over," but all to no purpose. Seeing what must come, the driver and guard jumped off, and the train dashed wildly over the embankment at the end of the reversing-station. Sixteen or eighteen passengers, all natives, were killed, and many more dreadfully hurt. At the coroner's inquest it was agreed that the disaster was owing to a heavy dew which had made the rails too slippery for any amount of brake-power to avert the issue. Heavy dews are not uncommon on the Ghauts, but no such accident seems to have occurred before from such a cause. A commission of inquiry already appointed by Government will doubtless get to the bottom of the matter, and suggest some means of guarding against like catastrophes in future.

LORD MAYO has had a busy week of it in his new post. Besides receiving and answering addresses from the Municipality, the Landholders' Association, the Trades' Association, and the Chamber of Commerce, he has been going over the Alipore Jail, visiting a charity or two, and otherwise making good use of his time. On the 26th he was to attend the Opera in state. His first levée was fixed for the following afternoon. On the 2nd of February his lordship and Lady Mayo were to hold a drawing-room, to which ladies were requested to come "without trains."

LORD MAYO's popularity is already an accepted fact in Calcutta. His courtly manners and splendid surroundings complete the charm which his title set at work, and his reign begins under happy auspices. His answers to the various addresses were all of the kind that satisfies the hearers without committing the speaker to any decided policy. To the Chamber of Commerce he expressed a hope of pressing forward the construction of railways, irrigation-works, and improved lines of telegraph. To the Landholders he promised full consideration of the "difficult questions" connected with land. The Trades' Association were assured of his earnest desire "to promote the most friendly feelings between the non-official class and those who are employed in the service of the State." The Calcutta justices were judiciously flattered for the "many useful undertakings lately completed" or projected under their auspices. If his lordship's speeches mean aught more than well-timed blarney, we may look for the giving of a great impulse to all kinds of public works ere long.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE landed at Madras on the morning of January 23, and was received with all the honours of his late position. Besides two companies of foot, the Governor, his wife, the High Court Judges, and all the other bigwigs were awaiting his arrival. A grand dinner party at Guindy closed the day's work, and the next morning Sir John embarked again under the same accompaniments as before. On the 26th he landed at Galle, on a visit to Colombo, where he has a coffee estate. He was to spend a fortnight in Ceylon. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald's purposed meeting with the late Viceroy was frustrated by the unseaworthy state of the Feroze. Is the Indian Government forbidden to keep more than one steam-frigate at a time for public purposes?

THE long rankling differences between the Jodhpore Chief and his nobles seem likely to be healed without recourse to extreme remedies. Under Colonel Keatinge's wholesome management the Maharajah has been led to appoint a Council of five Sirdars, in whom the administration of Marwar will henceforth be vested. The five have already been installed, and there is reason to hope that things will mend under their joint control. Nothing could be worse than the present anarchy in that province, and the new councillors have before them a task of no common difficulty. Government, we presume, have insisted on certain strict conditions before withdrawing their threat of armed interference in Jodhpore. Otherwise they will only have put off the inevitable.

SIR DINKUR RAO seems born under an evil star. Sindiah will have nothing to do with his old Minister, and now the chief of Rewah has tired of the man whom he lately called in to govern his dominions for him. Sir Dinkur Rao has been "removed from his post" under the fear of a popular outbreak, which seemed so imminent that the Maharajah gave up his intended journey to Calcutta. The latter has since begged for the services of a civil officer in Bundelkund, in whom he places great trust, with a view to reorganise his own Government. Colonel Meade, the Viceroy's Agent for Central India, was expected to reach Rewah about the 20th January.

ANOTHER native State in trouble is Sirohee, a near neighbour to Marwar. Bands of outlawed Zemindars are roaming the country, plundering and burning villages on their way; and in spite of the presence of British troops the Durbar seems powerless for repression of the anarchy that prevails. The main lines of intercourse between Bombay and the North-West pass through Marwar and Sirohee; so that we have some tangible interest in seeing order restored.

ACCORDING to a Bombay paper, the Gaikwar of Baroda has at length released the brother and heir-apparent, whom for five long years he has kept in seemingly unprovoked confinement. It is possible that Sir S. Fitzgerald's interview with the Gaikwar at Broach has resulted in this concession to justice, if indeed the prisoner has been released, which is still doubtful.

APPARENTLY nothing more has been heard of the Loshai Kookies who made that sudden raid into Cachar. Probably the prompt despatch of detachments of the 7th and 44th N.I. quickened their retreat towards Munnipore, if they ever had any serious design of harassing British subjects. The object of the raid, says the Friend of India, is a mystery to the authorities no less than the public. It is certain however that three tea-gardens were attacked, several coolies slain, and a number of Europeans alarmed into a hasty flight in their night-dresses. On the 22nd two men of the 7th were shot at in the jungles near Jeerighat. Kanie Singh's adherents are suspected of a hand in the business, and one Gokool Singh has been sent down to Dacca under a strong guard. It is pretty clear that Assam wants a government of its own, with a man like Colonel Fyche at the head of it.

THE final evidence of Shere Ali's triumph has shown itself in the prayer of the fugitive chiefs, Azim and Abdurrahman Khan, for shelter on British soil. They had reached Dour, three stages from Bunnoo, with a few horsemen, when the request was made. The Viceroy's answer has been what we might have expected. He will grant them shelter and maintenance on condition of their living some way off the frontier and forswearing all political intrigues. Of course they will accept the conditions. Whether they will keep the more important of them is another question. We may now hope that Shere Ali has won sure possession of the throne for which he has been fighting these five years past. If the countenance we are prepared to offer him should tend to strengthen his chances of a quiet life in future, so much the better. But no entanglements for us in Afghan politics.

THERE is no particular news from the seat of still partial famine. The crops in the Central Provinces are being reaped. Sir W. Muir has warned the district officers in the North-West that he will hold them severally responsible for "the lives of all whom it may be in the power of Government to save." In Behar and some parts of Bengal, such as Sylhet, Burdwan, the Sonthal country, Palamow, Patna, and along the Soane, scanty crops awaken fears which any failure in the rubbee harvest will turn into sharp suffering. In Tirhoot, Belounja, and Jupla, famine is said to be almost certain.

THE paper which Mr. H. Cole, C.B., read last Wednesday evening before the Society of Arts adds one to many passing indications of the strong current of popular opinion which has set in against the present organisation of the British army. It is impossible to doubt that a change is impending, at which many folk will greatly murmur, but which will ultimately be carried out nevertheless. Among other consequences involved in such a change will be the reconstruction of a separate British army for India, composed of men who "would look to military service as the sole business of their lives." They should be engaged—thinks Mr. Cole—for seven years or so, on terms regulated by the rate of wages and the necessities of the case. It is a pity that the statesmen who urged on the fusion of the Indian and English armies in 1859 were not a little more alive to the signs of the times. How much of blundering, injustice, and consequent heart-soreness might have been prevented by a little more forethought and breadth of view! Nine-tenths of the grievances caused by the utter muddle into which we have floundered with regard to the Indian army would in that case never have sprung into being, would never at any rate have bloomed half so luxuriantly as they are doing now. Had the protests offered at the time by judges so competent as Sir James Outram, Sir Henry Durand, and Mr. Willoughby, received a more patient hearing, our ears would not now be deafened with complaints of the injustice done to this or that section of the Indian army, nor would the Government of India be at this moment tasking its brains to work out some cunning method of filling up the Staff Corps at one end, and draining off its spare members at the other, without dipping deeply into the public purse.

THE hundred and fifty miles of railway lately opened between Meerut and Umballa will tap one of the richest provinces in India. The contract for the whole line from Delhi to Lahore was taken by Messrs. Brassey, Wythes, and Henfrey in 1864, and the works were begun under Mr. Henfrey's supervision in the hot season of the year following. Little progress however was made before the cold weather. Ironwork for the bridges had to be made and sent out from England, a process which took time. One section however, from Umritsur to the Beas, was opened for traffic before the end of 1867. The Umballa section was opened last autumn, and according to the contract the rest of the line will be finished by the 3rd May, 1870. Between Umballa and Loodiana indeed the works are forward enough to make that part of the line fit for use in March of this year, and the fifty miles from the Sutlej to the Beas are also close upon completion. About 90,000 tons of permanent way, bridge-work, fencing, and other plant have been brought from England in 341 vessels, two only of which have been wrecked. Already the whole of the wells for the larger bridges, with one exception, have been sunk to the needful depths. In the newly-finished section of the line there are eighteen large bridges with spans varying from 60 to 102 feet across; the longest one over the Jumna containing twenty-four spans of the latter width. Between Umballa and Umritsur there will be eleven bridges, one only of which will have spans of less than 72 feet, while the bridge over the Sutlej will have thirty-seven spans of 102 feet. Twenty-nine spans of the same width have already been thrown over the Beas.

THE successful candidates at the competitive examination for the vacancies in the Forest Department of India were:—Messrs. J. S. Gamble, R. H. C. Whittall, A. W. Peet, R. C. Wroughton, D. Sillers, M. H. Ferrars, L. L. Laird, J. T. Jellicoe. Some ninety candidates went in, we believe, for these few prizes.

THE OLD COMPANY'S EUROPEANS.

IN an otherwise sensible article on the best way of keeping up an English army in India, the Army and Navy Gazette falls into the popular error of disparaging the relative discipline of the old Company's European troops. Suggesting that a certain number of Royal regiments should keep one battalion always in India, it shows how the one might be made to feed the other, and how the connection between them would save the battalions in India from falling into "the slack condition of locals." Never was fallacy so hard of slaying as that which assumes the inferior discipline of the old Company's Europeans to the Royals of their day. We pointed out some time back that the inferiority, if any, was quite on the other side. "Caparisons are odorous," we allow with Mrs. Malaprop; but were they Company's or Queen's soldiers who threw caps at their officers in the time of Lord Gough? Was it a Queen's or Company's regiment that "retreated" at Ferozshuhur, and ran over the doolies at Chilianwalla? What Queen's regiment has borne a higher character for discipline, good conduct, and readiness for work than the 1st Bengal Fusiliers? What smarter or better-behaved regiment ever garrisoned Fort William than the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers in 1853? As for the Company's Artillery, every one who saw them must know that finer and more efficient troops were not to be found anywhere—by the confession of judges like Sir C. Napier, Lord Hardinge, and Lord Gough. Even in the White Mutiny of 1860, out of which so much capital was made by ill-informed or prejudiced writers, the old soldiers of the Company sacrificed their private feelings to their habit of duty. It was among the newly-raised European regiments that the discontent at being "handed over like cattle" took outward form. The truth is that the "locals" as a rule stood well above their comrades of the Line in India with respect to all the main constituents of true discipline. They were at least as smart on parade, were perhaps more orderly in cantonments, and were generally more efficient on service. Officers and men took a common pride in maintaining their collective character, and as a rule were better and longer acquainted with each other.

INDIAN FOREST APPOINTMENTS.

It may be remembered by our readers that seven young men were selected at the India Office in 1867 by Dr. Brandis, Inspector-general of Forests, for practical training in wood management, with a view to their employment in the East.

The experiment appears to have been successful, for an official advertisement in the leading newspapers intimated that a second batch of young men would be selected at this time for education in the forest schools of France and Germany previous to their employment in the Uncovenanted Service of India. From Mr. Merivale's notification, and from the paper of particulars, we gather the following facts:—The salary offered is £300 a-year, to commence from the date of landing in India. The rights and privileges are the same as those of other officers in the Uncovenanted Service as regards travelling allowances, leave of absence, and pension rules. Promotion will depend upon efficiency and the occurrence of vacancies in a general list comprising the forest officers of the different local administrations. The pay and prospects may be said to correspond nearly with that of a civil engineer in the Public Works Department, with this difference—that the forest officer receives a stipend during twenty months' training on the continent of Europe.

As was to be expected, these openings attracted a large number of applicants—the names of the successful candidates will be found in another page—and we give the following particulars for the information of those who may contemplate becoming candidates on a future occasion:—

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India-office a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios, and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid), and plane trigonometry.
5. Free hand and plan drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those candidates who obtain a certain proficiency in:—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
2. The elements of any of the following natural sciences:—Mechanical and natural philosophy, chemistry, botany, and geology.

If selected they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in forestry and cognate sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such candidates as are favourably reported upon by their instructors. In addition to this, if it should be found practicable, the young men will be required to place themselves under an approved forester in Scotland for a few months before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Under Secretary of State for India, India-office, Westminster.

It will be seen that the forest training at present is to be mainly at Nancy, in France, and at Hanover, where the natural forests are very extensive, and where this branch of revenue administration has received much attention; but partly also in Scotland, where the assistants will be placed for a few months under one of the experienced arboriculturists in the highlands of Perth or Aberdeenshire. When we remember the important duties of forest officers, that they lead isolated lives in malarious districts, that they require much tact and sound judgment in their dealings with the Jungle tribes and negotiations with the native chiefs, we are glad to observe the commencement of better prospects to those who join this useful department of State service.

RAJPOOTANA.

WHATEVER mitigations the cold-weather rains have brought to the sufferers from the previous drought in North-Western India, we fear that in Rajpootana the worst of the mischief was already done beyond repair. "For hundreds of miles"—we are told—"on both sides of the great Aravelli range, in the Provinces of Marwar and Meywar, in the British districts of Mairwarrah and Ajmere, in Kishengurh and Jeypore, and north-east towards Tonk and Kerowlic, the country is denuded of every blade of grass." The surface of the ground is said to be "bare and hard as the leaf of a table." The white ants, having eaten up the roots of grass, are now hard at work on the dry stunted bushes. A few trees here and there and frequent patches of the common prickly milk-bush have alone escaped the general desolation. Of all the herds that once roamed over the vast cattle-runs around each village, only a few stray cattle may now be seen; numbers of them having left their bones to bleach near every village, while yet more have been driven off by their owners in quest of kindlier pastures in Guzerat and the Punjab. Some of the villages are as silent as the grave: not one living soul being visible. In others may still be seen a few starving wretches, who hold on desperately to their hope of a better day coming. Water, in fact, is everywhere the woful want. There is grain to be had still, thanks to the saving fruits of Colonel Keatinge's counsels. But the want of water is for the moment irremediable. Blessed with a scanty rainfall and no great rivers, Rajpootana depended on its tanks for the means of irrigation. Once on a time great tanks or lakes stored up their waters everywhere for the people's use. Massive earthworks now gone to ruin attest the care taken by the early rulers of the country to keep up the needful water-supply. Wherever such reservoirs are still in good order, the surrounding country for many miles still looks green and garden-like. When works of this kind fall into disrepair, the wells which they serve to feed dry up in their turn, and the bare sandy plains lose all trace of their former verdure.

If Rajpootana is to be saved from becoming a vast desert like that which divides Sindh from Ferozepore, no time should be lost in supplying it with the means of renewed fertility. To keep up the never-ending struggle against nature is a duty which no civilised Government can afford to overlook. What the native rulers could achieve for that end in days long past, what administrators like General Hall and his successor did achieve in Mairwarra, and the Punjab Government is achieving for its own provinces, could surely be carried out with like results in the semi-dependent States of Rajpootana. It is not enough, as the Times of India points out, "that we exert ourselves and supply the means of irrigation in our own provinces." As successors to the empire of the Moghuls, we are bound to see that our native feudatories fulfil their share also of the common duty. In British Ajmere Colonel Keatinge has already established a system of famine works which give employment to the people for ends equally beneficial to themselves and the Government. Several tanks are undergoing repair, and a road through the Aravelli hills which divide Ajmere from Marwar has been begun. In the native States however nothing of the kind seems yet to have been taken in hand, although the poorer classes who would furnish the needful labour are swarming across the border as fast as they can go. It would be well worth our while to check this drain on a country's vitality by inducing the native princes to lay out some of their hoarded wealth on works of prime necessity to the future well-being of their several States. Colonel Keatinge has shown himself a man of energy and a skilful diplomatist in the reforms he has already coaxed out of the native Governments entrusted to his moral care. He has conquered a host of native prepossessions in his attempts to secure comparative freedom of trade in grain throughout Rajpootana. Let his powers of persuasion but carry him a few steps further in the same direction, and he will have earned his right to a special corner in the hearts of a grateful people.

Correspondence.

THE NON-PURCHASE AND STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—On the part of sixteen officers of my own regiment and the 19th Hussars, who lately signed certain letters to the Broad Arrow and Army and Navy Gazette, I beg to thank you for your recent editorial, which we are printing to distribute to the M.P.s and others who are interested in our case; we are also sending it to India. One officer—a field officer with a large family—writes thus: "I must now retire from the service in the prime of life and penniless. I have paid some £1,500 to £1,800 for steps, but I find that new line officers alone are absolutely barred all compensation whatever for loss of bonus. I had three years ago an actual promise of from £3,000 to £3,500 from my juniors, I now lose this sum in toto, together with my £1,500 to £1,800 subscriptions paid by me for the last twenty-five years—total loss, say, with interest, of about £6,000. I never really volunteered for the new line regiments, because as I held no staff in 1861 I was barred the Staff Corps, and as for my old local regiment it was disbanded, and my juniors in it put over my head in the Staff Corps. My prospects in my old local corps were thus with my commands and allowances utterly destroyed and lost. As my old regiment and service was destroyed, and as the Staff Corps was barred, it is absurd to say I volunteered for the new line regiments, for what other option or service was left me?" X.

[The letter to which "X." refers in another part of his own letter was published in our issue of Feb. 17.—ED. A. I. M.]

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I observe that an attempt is again being made to attract the attention of the House of Commons to the manner in which the officers of the old Indian Service have been, and are still treated by the India-office in the matter of the loss of the value of their commissions. Let us hope that whoever brings this before Parliament will insist on being informed—

1st. Of the actual instructions sent by the India-office to the Secretaries of the Bonus Compensation Fund Committee at the different presidencies in India.

2nd. By whom these restrictions have been introduced, and how they have been carried out.

3rd. Full explanations as to the redress an officer has who justly complains of the decision of the committee. Is the power of appeal from the committee back to the very parties in the India-office who originally formed and restricted these committees, and who have from the first been against every concession? If so, God help them.

Let us find out the cause of the failure of the settlement of this much vexed question, and we may then have some chance of correcting the mischief and injustice that is done. Promises given in Parliament, and even made by the Secretary of State for India himself, are seemingly, from some antagonistic element in the India-office itself, rendered of no avail by an injurious system of making restrictions and throwing every imaginable difficulty in the way. This is clearly not done by the sanction of Parliament, nor can it be by the permission of the Secretary of State himself who, new as he may be to office, and for a time in the hands of his Council, holds too high a position to imagine for a moment that he would connive at rules and regulations being issued that virtually nullify his promises and that of the nation he serves. H.

WAIFS AND STRAYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Nothing can be more just or more to the purpose than the observations contained in your leader of the 10th inst. upon "Waifs and Strays;" but, with your permission, I will supplement them with a few of my own. That many Englishmen visiting India, for the first time, should take out with them a native servant cannot be wondered at, considering how useful he would prove to them in innumerable ways upon their arrival; while, as regards the domestic himself, he would, in case of dismissal, be at least among his own countrymen, perhaps his friends and relatives, and therefore not destitute of aid if needed. For Englishmen however returning from Hindostan to their native country no such reason exists to justify their bringing over with them native servants at the risk of these becoming waifs and strays, in the event of a disagreement with their employers; and I therefore fear that in most instances it is merely to indulge an idle vanity or desire of showing-off, that so many deportations of the swarthy sons of Ind are perpetrated. An exception however should be made as concerns the ayahs or native nurses, whose mild and affectionate disposition necessarily endears them to the family with whom they may be engaged, so that but very few, if any, instances occur of their being sent adrift.

The erroneous idea which has long obtained that the very excellent institution, known as "The Strangers' Home," would, upon application, send back to India such discharged servants, may have been, unwittingly, a rifle cause for bringing them over here in the first instance, all responsibility being thus shifted from individuals to the society. It cannot, consequently, be too generally made known here, but more especially in India, that the funds of "The Strangers' Home" are, as I have been informed by its worthy honorary secretary, Lieutenant-colonel Hughes, wholly inadequate for such a purpose, exhausted as they almost are by the large sums expended in relieving the proper objects of its charity, not only in the metropolis, but also in many of the provinces where agents are employed for that praiseworthy object.

As, therefore, the evil now complained of would most probably be but increased by the raising of a special fund for the purpose of removing it, the only means available for that purpose is that of resuscitating the old regulation adverted to in your article, and by a powerful appeal to English gentlemen, exhorting them to abstain from inducing, out of mere motives of personal convenience or idle display, poor ignorant natives to accompany them to England, where the almost certain fate awaiting them is the truly pitiable one of increasing the already very large number of waiifs and strays.—I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN DAVENPORT.

THE WAHABEE CONSPIRATORS.

The Delhi Gazette remarks that the net is gradually closing round the gang of Wahabee conspirators, whose arrangements have been gradually traced by the skilful detectives put upon their track. It will be remembered that a conspiracy had been detected by the Bengal police; the existence of it had been put beyond doubt, but how far it had extended, and who and how many were the parties implicated, could not be determined without much cautious and careful research. All the trouble taken so far has resulted in important discoveries. The organisation of the conspirators was found to be, as a matter of course, more complete and perfect than that of the same sect in 1865, and yet of a description the most crude and unmeaning—complete so far as it could be made under the circumstances to ensure secrecy, and unmeaning, because the parties implicated do not appear to have any definite object in view. Arms, ammunition, and recruits were being sent up to the North-West Frontier in 1865, but the present action appears to be confined to remittances in goods, or money carried by special messengers in the same direction. That the Mahomedans will ever be reconciled to our rule so far as to cease plotting against us we cannot reasonably expect. They will never lose any opportunity of either originating or aiding and abetting any scheme holding out a chance, however remote, of subverting our Government. They cannot do more, we admit, under present circumstances except keep alive the spark, but it is none the less incumbent on the police to endeavour perpetually to stamp out that spark, at any rate to prevent its igniting the combustible material lying around. From all the information that has reached us on this and on the former occasion, we are almost convinced that the highest and lowest of the restless sect have nothing to do with the conspiracies connected with the frontier tribes. The middle classes appear to have a vague idea that they are doing the right thing in accepting the assurances transmitted to them from the fanatic colony squatting on the mountain range in the vicinity of Peshawur, of aid coming at some undefined period from somewhere. They could not, we believe, give a clear explanation of the advantage they expect to gain. They are, in fact, duped. They fall an easy prey to any party primed and sent among them with a cock-and-bull story of the end of British rule and the advent of a successor destined to right every wrong, real or imaginary, and especially to restore Mahomedan ascendancy in India. It appears to us there are clever heads at work there who do not hesitate in taking advantage of the accepted belief in an approaching day of deliverance from the yoke of the infidel to answer their own ends. All the remittances that have lately been traced will go, not to the furtherance of the professed object—the organisation of a jehad, or crescentade—but to make the recipients of them as comfortable as that inhospitable region will permit. It is difficult to conceive how a conspiracy, having for its object the herculean task of expelling the British from India, could possibly work so long without discovery. In reality, the plot, it appears to us, is not one of Mahomedans against British power, but of Mahomedan sharpers against their co-religionists. We shall show what we mean by-and-by, perhaps; at present we cannot reveal more.

INDIAN CHAPLAINS.

The Madras Mail holds that one of the first subjects that must have the attention of the Duke of Argyll in the India-office is the recommendation that has been made by the Supreme Government, with the concurrence of the subordinate Governments, and the bishops, to reduce the limit of actual service of a chaplain that entitles to the pension of £1 per diem, from seventeen years, as at present, to fifteen years. The average at which the chaplains in this presidency entered the service appears to be about thirty years, and it is argued that the Government will do well by encouraging retirements at an age when a chaplain may fairly claim to be fit for good and useful work in England. The maximum of service in the ecclesiastical department is twenty-five years, but strangely enough this protracted service does not result in an enhanced pension. No tidings have yet been received of the probable fate of the Supreme Government's proposal.

INDIAN JAILS.

The Englishman, having shown that the popular charges against the management of Indian gaols are either wholly false or greatly exaggerated, thinks that at least one serious abuse has crept into the management of the gaols which is not included in these charges, though it has been justly made a ground of complaint by some of the injured parties. We are glad to see, from Mr. Howell's note, that this abuse has at length attracted the attention of the Government of India. The remunerative theory of prison labour must have been pushed very far indeed, when we find them admitting that it has become very doubtful whether the primary object of the sentence—punishment—is steadily and systematically kept before the prisoner. The evil is wide-spread as well as conspicuous. In the Punjab the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it a "question whether the industrial labour has not been overdone." In Oude "the Chief Commissioner has found it necessary to issue very stringent orders against tampering with judicial sentences." In the Central Provinces the theory has been pushed so far that "in reading the reports it is often difficult to believe that prison labour is in question." Commercial success is, in fact, everywhere made the criticism of what is suitable. But Dr. Mouatt, in Bengal, has gone further in this direction than all the other gaol authorities, and elaborated a system "under which a fortunate felon may emerge from the Alipore gaol with a perfect knowledge of printing or jute spinning machinery, and take his knowledge acquired in gaol to one of the best markets in the world for skilled agency, there to compete with the honest mechanic who never had the same opportunities." We have no hesitation in saying that, apart from the injustice caused, this is an abuse which entirely frustrates the object of prison labour, and is utterly opposed to both the principles admitted here and the practice prevailing at home.

MILITARY PRISONS.

The Madras Times cannot believe that a temporary retirement to a military prison in India has any reformatory effects upon the subject of such retirement. "On the contrary, we are of opinion that our prisons increase crime in many cases. For instance, young soldiers who are not hardened in guilt are thrown into the society of old and notorious gaol birds; and a copybook is not needed to assure us that evil communications corrupt good manners. Young sinners who would possibly feel repentance when under the eyes of their officers and well-conducted comrades, cast aside all scruples of conscience when constantly in the presence of clever scamps more hardened than themselves; and the consequence is that they return to their regiments worse characters than they left them. Then, it is notorious that during the period of a soldier's confinement in prison the country loses the value of his services. He also, if the confinement is for a long period, becomes slovenly and forgets his drill. He also, we regret to think, returns to his comrades, in the language of the Bankruptcy Court, 'without a slur upon his character,' so long as his offence has not been one of an actually disgraceful nature. His punishment and its cause are almost forgotten by his comrades on his return, and except that they very naturally dislike the necessity which compelled them to perform his duties for him during his absence, they can perceive no force of moral example or any terrible punishment in a few months' incarceration in a 'stone jug,' as they facetiously name the gaol. Moreover, the authority of courts-martial, and their gravity, would not be weakened in the eyes of the army, as at present, by the necessity which compels such courts to inflict punishments which are punishments only in name and not in fact. Further, a swifter administration of justice, and the abolition of the present faulty system of punishment, which causes good men to suffer for the follies and the crimes of the bad, would be obtained. We think there can be no doubt that severe extra drills and duties, sternly and uncompromisingly carried out for 112 days, together with a stoppage of pay for the same period, would prove punishment more severe to the soldier than the same period passed in a prison. Soldiers cordially hate such extra duties, and their bitterness is greatly increased by the fact that they must be performed, as it were, in the face of the regiment, and under the constant banter of their comrades."

TROOPSHIPS FOR ENGLAND.—A Calcutta paper informs us that the following ships have been engaged for the conveyance of troops to England:—The Clyde, at £23. 15s., and the St. Lawrence, at £24 per head.

THE REWARDS GRANTED FOR THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

We copy the following from the Delhi Gazette :—

Sir,—I read in one of the latest telegrams that “The Queen has ordered a medal to be distributed for the Abyssinian war.” War! I think the term “Expedition,” as used by Lord Napier of Magdala, more appropriate. Well, no doubt but that the decoration will be distributed very shortly, and, as a medal is to be given, this is quite proper, as the value of it will be much enhanced thereby. A New Zealand medal is also to be given, for the three years’ war in that country five years or more ago. Probably this latter medal will be distributed about the time when the Abyssinian heroes have worn theirs out. Certainly but for the Abyssinian expedition and Viscount Enfield no New Zealand medal would have been promised. Mr. Disraeli said in the House, “Remember that the New Zealand war was not originated and conducted to a conclusion by the present Government.” True, and there is a deep significance in his remark, for the Conservatives have ever been glad and proud to recognise the services of the army and navy. Let us take another war which was not originated and conducted to a conclusion during a Tory Ministry. The Eusufzai campaign of 1863. Is a medal to be given? There has as yet been no promise of one. On the 27th July last Mr. Kinnaird asked in the House “Whether any decision had been arrived at as to granting a frontier service medal to the Punjab irregular forces and regular troops, European and native, engaged in important expeditions for the defence of the North-West Frontier?” Sir Stafford Northcote answered to this effect, that any proposal on the subject must come from the Government of India; that, “in general, he was very much in favour of granting medals, whenever it could properly be done; and he should give his most favourable consideration to any proposal to that effect that might come before him.” Have the Government of India, has Sir John Lawrence applied for a medal, and if he has, will it be given? Now that Sir S. Northcote and the Conservatives are replaced by the Duke of Argyll and the Liberals, during whose Ministry the campaign began and ended, and the Governor-general’s proposal for a frontier war medal was rejected by Sir Charles Wood, of hateful memory, I fear that no medal will be given, unless the gallant member for Aberdeen, and the member for Perth, who are both, by the way, Liberals, again ask for it. In conclusion, I give you the following summary of the expedition, and the two wars.

In the New Zealand war 688 men were killed and wounded, of whom 18 officers were killed, 56 wounded, and 15 died subsequently of wounds received. Out of the Naval Brigade, 300 of whom were engaged, 6 officers and 14 men were killed, and 8 officers and 32 men were wounded.

Rewards.—Promise of a medal, about five years after the war.

In the Eusufzai campaign of 1863, in ten distinct actions, 847 were killed and wounded, of whom 19 officers and 208 men were killed, 42 officers and 578 men were wounded.

Rewards.—About five years after the campaign, a suggestion by the Secretary of State for India, that the Government of India should ask for a medal.

The Abyssinian Expedition.—One action, in which 1 officer and 9 men were wounded, the former slightly.

Rewards.—Vote of thanks by both Houses of Parliament, ovations, addresses, freedom of City of London and Edinburgh, and sword of honour to the Commander of the Expedition, to which a Peerage is added. Prayers offered up in all the churches for the safety of the troops and the successful termination of the Expedition. Six months’ batta paid at once to the troops, and about eight months after the termination of the Expedition, the Queen herself orders the distribution of a medal.

A very few Brevets and C.B.’s are given for the former two wars, but for the Abyssinian Expedition the shower of Brevets and C.B.’s is splendid!—Yours, &c.,

December 31, 1868.

STATION TALK.

THE VALLEY OF KANGRA (EAST).—The Gopalpore tea plantation enjoys the distinction of being the first established by private enterprise, at the same time that it is open to the unenviable notoriety of having been formed on anything but an equitable basis, as far as the native landholders are concerned. There is no necessity for ripping up old sores, the more especially as the system now pursued for obtaining land where required by teaplanters is now no longer open to the very serious objections raised against the proceedings of the founder of the Gopalpore plantation. It is very beautifully situated, commanding a view of the whole Palum Valley, of which it forms the north-western angle. The plants appear healthy, and I suppose the concern is doing well, though it is very difficult to give any decided opinion. “Anxious shareholders” have doubts on the subject, which a three months’ residence on the spot even does not effectually clear up; but I should say that proprietors themselves superintending their plantations are much more likely to succeed than companies whose affairs are transacted by “managers.” To judge by appearance, the couleur de rose prevails, but some authorities will have it that there is a canker within that is threatening danger to many concerns. I can only and most sincerely hope not, for the Kangra tea plantations are, with the exception perhaps of some in Kumaon, the only ones that have been able to hold their own. Tea is, I fear, irretrievably gone in the Dhoon of Dhera, and it will be next to a wonder if one or two of the concerns there escape the general crash. Dr. Jamieson is much blamed for the delusive prospects he held out to those who should embark in tea in that valley, and the sale of the Government plantation now is considered to have been anything but satisfactory. The tea question in Kangra is a large one, the interests involved are very considerable, and though it is undoubtedly unpopular amongst the local cultivators, who consider rice, alternated as it can be by wheat or flax (for seed), would be more profitable far than tea, there is no doubt that it recommends itself to other sections of the population, who for caste reasons will not drive a plough. The number of acres actually taken up in tea is estimated at 2,880 acres. On this quantity there are probably 1,000 plants per acre; of these two-thirds are probably young or cut down for regrowth, so that we may reasonably calculate on there being somewhere about nine hundred thousand tea-bearing plants in the valley. I was told by an experienced planter that there are here and there shrubs that could be made to yield, if cleanly plucked, one pound of tea; but I should say that one-quarter of a pound would be a fair average all round. This will give something over 200,000 pounds of tea for the whole valley, a matter of next to no consideration in the English market, and yet the planters complain of not being able to dispose of their crops. Great hopes were entertained that the traders who came lately from Yarkund would purchase tea, especially green, in large quantities; but I have it on very fair authority that the sales were by no means commensurate to the expectations of the planters, and the Central Asian traders, like prudent men, limited their purchases to samples with which to try their market. If the tea be approved of, and the selling price in Yarkund favourable to the transaction, it is probable that the year 1870 may bring with it orders to a considerable extent, but that is a long while to wait, and the planters should seek other and less “risky” outlets for their produce. I have always held, and still maintain, that if they would increase the proportion of green tea, and bring its price within the means of the Cashmeree inhabitants of Noorpoor, Soojanpoor, Loodiana, Umritsur, &c., they would find a large demand close at hand, with speedy returns. In Umritsur alone the Cashmerees consume under ordinary circumstances one hundred pounds of tea per day, or over 36,000 pounds in the year. Such a market is worth looking up; but the planters must work it steadily, and not be discouraged by a first or even a second year’s disappointment in their full expectations. The new road of sixty-eight miles in length that will soon be open throughout the length of the valley, from Pathankote to Bajinath, passing within four or five miles of Palumpoor, will materially facilitate the export of tea, as of all other produce, and reduce the cost of transport to Umritsur by at least one-half, while the possible continuation of the rail system, when the enemies to its extension are no longer at the end of Indian affairs, will go still further to lower the cost of carriage. I would therefore strongly recommend those who can do so—I believe there are some who are wavering in their faith—to hold on with one steady object in view, and that is, to secure a market within reach from which they can look for speedy returns, smaller may be than might be occasionally obtained elsewhere, but much more certain. One thing is certain, that larger capital must be thrown into the cultivation; that seems to be unavoidable, for if the concerns fall at any time into the background of borrowed means, they will have the greatest difficulty in recovering themselves from what may at first appear a temporary difficulty.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE PERSIAN ARMY.—The Friend of India states that the Shah of Persia has made proposals to the Government of India to lend him Indian officers to reorganise his army.

ASSISTANT-SURGEON G. M. NELL, in civil medical charge of Beawur, and in medical charge of the Mhairwarra Battalion, has, says the Pioneer, been removed from his appointment.

VOLUNTEER CAVALRY IN CALCUTTA.—The movement lately set on foot at Calcutta for the formation of a regiment of volunteer cavalry is said to gather strength rapidly. Lord Mayo is expected to be the colonel.

A DISGRACEFUL CHARGE.—Lieutenant Jordan, of H.M.’s 107th Regiment, has been committed to take his trial in the High Court at Allahabad, on a charge of lurking house trespass at night, in the house of one Mr. Elias, with intent to commit adultery.

MR. A. C. FOSTER.—We learn that Mr. A. C. Foster, late Controller of the Money Order Office in Calcutta, has been convicted of criminal breach of trust as a Government servant and criminal misappropriation, and sentenced to four years’ penal servitude.

THE BENGAL PRISONS.—A system of penal dietary has been introduced into the prisons in Bengal. The Government of India have directed that a report on the system is to be submitted at the end of the year, when the results will be laid before the Secretary of State.

IMPORTANT FOR LADIES.—The Viceroy held a levee at Calcutta on Wednesday, Jan. 26. His Excellency and the Countess Mayo are to hold a drawing room, also, on the evening of the 2nd Feb. We fear the Calcutta milliners must be dissatisfied with one circumstance in connection with the drawing room. “Ladies are requested to appear in full dress, but without trains.”

FEARS OF SCARCITY IN MALWAH.—We are sorry to hear from Malwah that apprehensions are entertained, should rain not fall, of a drought in that province, and of a scarcity of water for drinking purposes. Grain is at present plentiful, but large quantities are exported daily towards Rajpootana, where high prices are obtained.

THE BAYS.—We hear that Mr. Holloway, the quartermaster of the Bays, after a long service of many years, retires on his pension, being succeeded by Quartermaster-Sergeant Tuckett, who also, after a lengthened period of service in the 15th Hussars and Bays, gets the quartermastership.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—POINT DE GALLE, Jan. 26, 10.5 A.M.—Sir John Lawrence has arrived here. He will proceed to Colombo, where he will be the guest of his coffee agents, Messrs. Murray, Robertson, and Co. Sir John will probably make some stay in the island, as he purposes visiting some coffee estates, in which he is interested.

MILITARY HIGHWAYMEN.—A few nights ago a Mrs. H., who was returning home in a palkee gharry from a friend's house, was stopped by some soldiers, the coachman was assaulted, and Mrs. H. was robbed by the men of all her gold trinkets. This daring attempt at highway robbery has caused no little sensation.—Lucknow Times, Jan. 20.

ROYAL SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS OF INDIAN OFFICERS.—The first nomination to the Royal School for the daughters of officers of the Bengal cavalry and infantry, that has fallen to the Secretary of State for India, has been conferred, says the Indian Daily News, on the daughter of the late Major C. M. Fitzgerald, deputy commissary general.

SIR DINKUR RAO.—We hear from Indore that Col. Meade, C.S.I., is at present at Rewah, inquiring into the complaints made against Sir Dinkur Rao, who has resigned his duties as the Maharajah of Bewah's chief adviser. At the Maharajah's wish, Dr. Stratton, in charge of the Bundelcund agency, is to act in a similar capacity until affairs in Rewah are in a more settled state.

FIRE AT UMBALLA.—The Delhi Gazette hears from Umballa that on the night of the 15th January the house of Colonel Gott, in the Native Infantry lines there, was destroyed by fire. It was Colonel Gott's own property. His loss is estimated at 12,000 rupees. But little was saved, and that little by the exertions of certain gentlemen connected with the railway. The fire is said to have been the work of an incendiary.

FAMINE-RELIEF IN THE N.W.P.—Sir William Muir has (remarks the Indian Daily News) distilled the wisdom and the humanity of the measures prescribed by the Indian Government for the care of the famine-stricken, in his announcement as Lieut.-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, that he will "hold every district officer personally responsible that no death occurs from starvation, which could have been avoided by any exertion or arrangement on the part of the district officer or his staff."

LORD MAYO'S VISIT TO SIMLAH.—At the last meeting of the Executive Council in Calcutta, Lord Mayo apprised the members of his intention to spend the ensuing summer at Simlah. No date was mentioned by his lordship, but he will not leave Calcutta before Budget day, which may be any time in March. His lordship may visit Peshawur before the setting in of the hot weather should Shere Ali be in circumstances to permit of his presenting himself at that place for an interview.

LORD MAYO'S FRENCH COOK.—Indian Public Opinion is given to audacious joking. We do not know whether to set the following down to the same bad habit:—"The first telegram addressed by Lord Mayo to Calcutta, on his way to take up the Government of India, was 'secure a good interpreter for my French cook.' The fate of empires may be trembling in the balance; the political horizon may be black; but, with an accomplished chef de cuisine by his side, Lord Mayo may gaily defy the storm. The régime of good dinners has arrived, and we are delighted to believe it."

ARRIVAL OF THE EX-AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN AND SIRDAR ABDUL RAHMAN AT THE BRITISH FRONTIER.—CALCUTTA, Jan. 23, 7.30 P.M.—Government have received a telegram from the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab announcing the arrival at Daur (? Valley of Dour) of Mahomed Azim Khan, the ex-Ameer of Afghanistan, and Sirdar Abdol Rahman Khan, attended by two hundred sowars, and asking for an asylum in British territory. The Viceroy has intimated the willingness of Government to receive and support them, conditionally on their residing at a distance from the frontier and abstaining from political intrigues.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. Paul Whalley, B.C.S., Assistant-Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, is to be appointed Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. We learn that Colonel R. Strachey, and Messrs. H. Bell, H. Beverly, and R. B. Chapman have been appointed members of the Statistical Committee at Calcutta. Dr. F. W. Innes, Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals, will, it is expected, succeed Dr. Munro as president of the Committee to report on the subject of army hospital equipment in India. We learn from Bhopal that Colonel Willoughby Osborne, C.B., has obtained leave for three months; the political duties during his absence will devolve on Major Reginald Ouseley, commanding the Bhopal Contingent.

THE PESHAWUR DISTRICT.—In consequence of the changes which are gradually being made in the disposition of the troops in the Peshawur Valley and Cis-Indus at Sylun Bowlee, &c., the Government has, says the Englishman, decided that, from the 1st March next, the troops in the Peshawur district shall form a separate district command under the Brigadier-General at Peshawur, and that instead of the Peshawur division a new one shall be formed, to be called the Jhelum division, and to comprise the stations noted below, its headquarters being at Rawul Pindee:—Attock, Sylun Bowlee, Rawul Pindee, Murree, Jhelum, Sealkote, and a new station about to be formed in the Sind Saugor Doab.

THE STEAMER "NERBUDDA."—We learn from the Rangoon Times that the river steamer Nerbudda, the property of the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company, was wrecked near the village of Tow, in the Bassein Creek, on Thursday morning, the 14th Jan. She was on her downward voyage and during the previous day had grounded several times. On the night of the 13th she was anchored at the place above indicated, but it was not till about midnight that she was observed to be settling down. The specie and every moveable of value were at once conveyed to the flat which was alongside and all hands got safely out of the steamer before she finally sank at about one o'clock on the following morning.

PORT CANNING COMPROMISE.—The following may be said to be an authoritative statement of the Port Canning compromise:—1st. Mr. Schiller, possessing 500 shares, out of which he has paid second and third calls on 400, and the second, third, and fourth calls on 100, agrees to deliver up to be cancelled the same 500 shares, with all calls so paid thereon. The company agree, in consideration of the calls having been paid by him on the shares, to issue to him 100 shares with the first, second, third, and fourth calls paid. 2nd. That the deed of 13th February, 1866, be cancelled, if required, by the company's counsel, and any necessary deeds consequent on such cancellation to be executed. 3rd. That thereupon the suit against all the defendants to be withdrawn, each party bearing his own costs from the commencement of these proceedings. 4th. That all imputations be withdrawn.

LORD MAYO AT THE ALIPORE JAIL.—We notice from the Calcutta papers that Lord Mayo, accompanied by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and attended by his private Secretary and Captain Lockwood, paid a visit to the Alipore Jail on the 21st January. His lordship was received by Dr. Mouat, the Inspector-General of Jails, and Dr. Fawcus, the Superintendent of the Jail, and in company with these gentlemen he minutely inspected the dietary and other internal arrangements of the prison. After going through the prison, his lordship examined the Alipore jail press, and the recently fitted jute spinning machinery. On the morning of the 22nd he visited the Sailors' Home, and in the afternoon received an address from the Landholders' and Mercantile Association. We notice also that his lordship is to hold a levee on the 27th January, and the Countess Mayo a drawing room on the 2nd proximo.

MILITARY.—Staff-Surgeon Barnett, doing duty with H.M.'s 82nd Regiment at Aden, has been appointed Surgeon to his Excellency the Viceroy, and will proceed to join the personal staff at once. Dr. Barnett has seen considerable service in India with the 6th Dragoons, 12th Lancers, and 11th Hussars, and was at one time in charge of the depot at Kurrachee.—Pioneer.—The Government of India, we read in the Lahore paper, has sanctioned Tallagang as a military station, and the 20th P.I. have been ordered to march there at once. No orders have yet been received on the subject of the redistribution of the districts of the Rawul Pindee Division. Colonel W. E. Hughes, Commandant Central India Horse, and in charge of the Western Malwa agency, having been appointed to the command of the Punjab Frontier Force, will, it is said, be succeeded by an officer from the latter force.

DR. CAYLEY AT LEH.—We have authority for stating that one of the last acts of Sir John Lawrence, as Viceroy in Council, was to determine that Dr. Cayley should not be recalled from Leh, but continue at that place, vested with the same functions and authority as hitherto. The Maharajah of Cashmere did not regard the presence of a British agent on his far northern frontier with complacency, nor without apprehension. His Highness knows enough of the history of modern India to know that such interposition has hitherto generally been the prelude to active interference in the internal government of the country so "honoured," to be eventually followed, in all probability, by its annexation. His Highness accordingly sent his Prime Minister to Simla just before the descent to the plains from that place of the Government of India. This high envoy pleaded his master's wishes as well as could be, but no definite assurance was, or at the time, could be afforded him, though he returned to Cashmere to assure the Maharajah, that it was highly probable all he (the envoy) had, under the Maharajah's orders, asked for, would be conceded by the Government of India. At a subsequent meeting of the Executive Council at Calcutta the matter was taken up, and the Maharajah's request negatived. His Highness, however, has been assured that any apprehensions he may have been erroneously led to entertain as to the presence of Dr. Cayley being in any way prejudicial to the continued integrity of his dominions are wholly baseless—an assurance which is said to have completely set the Maharajah's mind at rest.—Times of India.

THE VICEROY'S STAFF.—Lord Mayo has finally arranged for his personal staff. Lieutenant-Colonel Seymour Blane will continue military secretary for some time longer, in order to complete five years' service as lieutenant-colonel on the staff, which, had he throughout that period held the substantive rank of major, would, according to the usage of the service, entitle him to promotion to full colonel. Lieut.-Colonel Blane, however, is a major of not more than two years' standing, and the permission to continue military secretary for the additional period indicated would, therefore, seem of no advantage to him. Not so, however, if, as is generally thought, Lieut.-Colonel Blane, on purchasing his majority received an assurance that should he be able to put in five years on the staff in that substantive rank, his case would be taken into consideration as a special one. The Hon. Major Bourke will meanwhile officiate as military secretary, that is, until Lieut.-Colonel Blane has embarked for England, which will not be until the close of next month. The arrangement is altogether a very liberal one, and speaks much for the good-heartedness and consideration of the new Viceroy. Major Burne has taken up the duties of his office of private secretary to the Viceroy. Dr. Fayrer is to officiate as surgeon to the Viceroy for the present; but the office is understood to be reserved for a medical officer of one of H.M.'s heavy cavalry regiments, who is at present at Aden. Captains Brooke and Lockwood, late of Sir John Lawrence's staff, are to remain aides-de-camp on the staff of Lord Mayo. Captain Kennedy has had his leave for England, and the remaining aide to the late Viceroy, Captain Foortea, is likely to be appointed brigade-major of the E.I.R. Volunteer Corps, now on point of organisation. The Hon. Captain Wood, of the Hussars, is to be first vice-regal aide-de-camp, and Captain Taylor, brother of the member of Council, will complete H.E.'s staff.

THE PENSION AND BONUS SCHEME.—In our issue of Wednesday last (writes the Pioneer of the 25th) we alluded to the probability of the pension and bonus scheme for the Indian army, which is now under consideration by the Secretary of State, being put into force at no distant date. We are now able to state, on good authority, that the proposed scheme is much as follows. Substantive Lieutenant-Colonels, within a limit of two hundred, who may be entitled to pension, and who may accept the terms within a year, shall have an additional pension of £150 a-year, and a bonus of £1,000, preference to be given to the senior applicants. In the year following, and thenceforward, the Lieutenant-Colonel's pension of £365 to be given after twenty-five years' service, including three years' furlough, instead of after twenty-eight years. The Colonel's pension to be raised to £500 a-year, and be attainable in thirty years' service, including four years' furlough, instead of in thirty-two. In the event of these concessions being made, there appears to be good reason to expect that they will be accompanied by some restrictions as to the length of time field officers will be permitted to remain unemployed, or in the performance merely of so-called general duty, without being placed on the retired or pension list.—We (Madras Mail of Jan. 18) are in a position to state, on the authority of a letter from one of the best informed members of the Indian Council, that up to the date of the despatch of the last mail from London no action had been taken by the Secretary of State with respect to the offering of a bonus and pension to the colonels and lieutenant-colonels of the Indian Army. Sir John Lawrence, in August last, strongly urged upon the Home Government the expediency, in an economical as well as political point of view, of offering some special inducement to unemployed senior officers to retire, and it is believed in some military circles, but on what authority we cannot state, that the chances are that a bonus of £2,000, and a pension of £500 per annum, will eventually be offered to colonels of thirty years' service, but that officers of any less service will not be treated with. The whole subject is still under consideration in Westminster, and it seems not improbable that no decision will be arrived at until the return of Sir John Lawrence from India. The folly of delay in a matter of this kind has been too frequently shown to need any further illustration just now.

THE LATE EARTHQUAKE.—Letters from Sylhet state that the steeple of the church is shattered, and the pinnacles thrown down. The Collector's and Sudder Ameen's Courts are cracked in a dangerous way, as is also the Circuit-house. At Pola, 58 miles east of Sylhet, the shocks were very violent, and are said to have lasted nearly five minutes. About 600 feet west of the Pola river, and 200 south of the Baruk, the earth was cracked in several places, and subsided to a depth of four feet. The shocks appeared to travel from south to north. The water in the river is said to have "boiled, shook, and roared." It ran with tremendous force against the current, i.e., northward, rising at the same time six feet over a sand-bank. On the north bank of the river the houses were tilted backwards and made to incline. The whole country between the Pola and Dhullesur rivers was rent into cracks of from three to nine inches wide. From these fissures hot water and soft and black sand were ejected with considerable force. In some places the deposit of sand was three feet thick. On the west bank of the Pola the road-level was four feet above the rest of the country; it has sunk to the general level from Pola to Huttia; the road was split into cracks in many places, from which hot water was rushing with great force, and a strong sulphurous smell was perceptible. The subsidence was also marked between Huttia and Dhullesur. The roadway, which was from six to seven feet above the level of the country, is now only two feet over the level. About three hundred feet north of the road a vast mass of sand to the height of fifteen feet was thrown out across the course of the Dhullesur, and quite blocked up the stream. The villages between the road and the river at Kallinugger have sunk so far "that little is to be seen of them." Again, at Siatic Bazaar some houses are reported to have sunk to a depth of forty to fifty feet below the surface. Nut trees, from forty to fifty feet high, have in some cases entirely disappeared, in others they are only two or three feet above the ground. The Baruk river has, at this part of its course, become so shallow that boats pass it with difficulty. But perhaps the most extraordinary evidence of the force of the earthquake is the fact that a boat laden with lime, which was sunk some years ago, has been thrown up by the river. The Kutta Khall has been blocked up, and is crossed dryshod. On the morning of the 14th there were two shocks, the second of which is said to have been a violent one.—Englishman.

A NEW BRANCH BANK.—The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, is about to establish an agency at Cocanada, under Mr. A. B. McKean, who left in the steamer Governor Higginson to take up his appointment and open the branch.

THE PIER.—After remaining so long a disgrace to Madras, our pier is going to be repaired; all the material for the repairs was brought by a vessel which arrived last week. In any other place than this the pier would never have been allowed to remain so long almost useless.—Madras Athenæum.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—Captain A. L. Playfair, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has we understand been appointed to officiate as 2nd in command of the 4th Infantry Hyderabad Contingent in room of Captain Jameson, who has been nominated to act as District Superintendent of Police in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts.

DEATH AT THAYETMYO.—We regret to hear of the death, at Thayetmyo, on the 9th January, of Capt. Edward Bromhead, of H.M.'s 76th Foot. Capt. Bromhead was the eldest son of Sir Edward de Gonville Bromhead, of Thurlby Hall, in the county of Lincoln, and was nearly thirty-seven years of age at the time of his death. He originally belonged to H.M.'s 4th Regiment, but exchanged into the 76th. Disease of the liver was the cause of death.

ROMOURED RELIEFS FOR NEW ZEALAND.—Rumours are still about, says the Bangalore Herald, to the effect that regiments are to be sent to New Zealand. A correspondent states that the 45th (Sherwood Foresters) volunteered for active service, but were told they had only too recently returned from Abyssinia to be allowed another chance of glory yet awhile. The 102nd (Neill's), now stationed at Lucknow, have also been mentioned, but until instructions from England have been received, of course nothing certain can be decided on.

THE JEYPORE AND BUSTAR BOUNDARIES.—As proposed by Colonel Saxton of the Topographical Survey, Mr. H. G. Turner, the Assistant Agent in charge of Jeypore, has been directed to assist in adjusting the boundaries between Jeypore, and the Bustar territories. In case of any difference of opinion arising between Mr. Turner and Captain Warner, it is left to Colonel Saxton to decide. The Government of India very dogmatically says: "Colonel Saxton might carefully take into consideration the views of either side." The said Government must be hard up for something to say.

THE SAUGOR BRIGADE.—Owing to the re-distribution of troops in several stations in the Punjab, the brigadier-general and staff from the Saugor brigade in the Central Provinces will be transferred to the Punjab, whilst the Saugor brigade is to be commanded by a general officer from the Madras army, with the usual staff. The stations in the Saugor brigade are now all garrisoned by Madras troops. Brigadier General Hodson, at present commanding at Cannanore, is likely to be transferred to Saugor, in place of Sir William Taverer, K.C.S.I., who will be transferred to Punjab command, until his tour on the staff expires.

COLONEL PRIMROSE.—The friends of Colonel Primrose, C.S.I., late Adjutant General of the Madras Army, will, says the Mail, be glad to hear that, owing doubtless to the high opinion entertained of him by Sir Hope Grant, G.C.B., Quartermaster-General of the Army, as well as by H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Strathnairn, and Sir Patrick Grant, there is every probability of his being appointed to succeed Colonel Mackenzie, whose term will shortly expire, as Adjutant General of the Army in Ireland. It is believed that as soon as Colonel Primrose is promoted to Major-General, he will be appointed to a Divisional Command in India.

A TIGER AT TIRVOOR, IN THE KISTNA DISTRICT.—All tigers are not man-eaters, but the steps in the education of a man-eater might be traced as pathetically as teetotallers trace the career of an habitual drunkard from a modest glass of wine to tumblers of ardent spirits, or tract writers the decadence of one "in the right path" from whistling profane tunes on the Sabbath to burglary with murder. A tiger at Tirvoor seems to have taken the left hand road which threatens ultimately to end in man-eating and mange unless it be saved from such a deplorable end by the hand of the shikarrie. It has been "actually within the town during the night," and there has been a destruction of a pony grazing in a field within a hundred yards of the town with which destruction we presume the tiger had something to do. The consequence is that Government, foreseeing the end to which such a course must lead the unfortunate tiger, has offered the magnificent sum of Rs. 50 for his carcase.

MEDICAL.—Assistant-surgeon J. Murray, M.D., assumed medical charge of the 4th District and Triplicane Dispensary from H. King, A.B. and M.B. Surgeon Henry King, A.B. and M.B., relinquished medical charge of the 4th District and Triplicane Dispensary to Assistant-surgeon J. Murray, M.D. Assistant Apothecary J. T. Gilles—now at Madras—under orders to join the company of Sappers and Miners at Port Blair, has been directed to assume medical charge of the convicts and guards proceeding by the ship Inverdine to Port Blair on the 23rd January.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR.—"His Excellency the Right Honorable the Governor in Council" of Madras has awoke to the fact that he is behind the other Governments in one thing—that he has not as yet made an annual flight to the hills. But this is to be rectified next hot season. The Athenæum says:—"We learn that, during the approaching hot season, the days of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council will be spent on the hills for the disposal of business. Although Madras can as yet furnish no precedent for this, we do not quite see why it should not be. When the Governor-General and the Governor of Bombay are permitted to hold their Councils away from their Presidency towns, why should Madras alone be denied the privilege?"

THE RECORDER OF MAULMAIN.—Mr. Coryton, the Recorder of Maulmain, was a short time ago rebuked by the Government of India for having closed his Court because the Commissioner of Burmah had not immediately refunded certain monies which he had paid for printing done for his Court, and the charge for which the chief Commissioner disallowed. The Government of India, however, on reference to it being made, ordered the money to be paid. Mr. Coryton resigned, and in his letter of resignation told the Supreme Government that he would not continue Recorder of Maulmain with Colonel Fytche claiming the degree of authority (and unproved) over his Court he seemed desirous to possess himself of, for the salary of the Vice-royalty itself. Mr. Coryton's resignation, we hear, has not as yet been accepted. In fact all the circumstances of the case have been referred by the Executive Council to the Bengal High Court, for opinion and recommendation with reference to the proper course to be taken.

CHOLERA IN HYDERABAD.—A Hyderabad correspondent, writing on the 10th January, says that cholera is reported to have broken out in the city of Hyderabad, and the adjacent military cantonment of Secunderabad. It is also said that the disease has made its appearance at Bolarum. The cavalry which marched from Bolarum to Hingooly had an outbreak of the disease while on the march. The principal loss was amongst the camp followers; altogether about fifty persons are said to have died. It is curious to note that the disease prevailed for a distance only covered by seven or eight stages, and that then it ceased as suddenly as it had made its appearance. It is hoped that the Viceroy will impress on the Nizam the necessity of appointing some clever medical officer to superintend the introduction of sanitary arrangements into the city. This is urged on the score of humanity, and as a necessary precaution for securing the health of the troops at Secunderabad. Cholera in the city is almost always followed by cholera in the cantonment.

VISIT OF SIR JOHN LAWRENCE TO MADRAS.—Sir John Lawrence arrived in Madras on Saturday morning 23rd Jan., at half-past ten o'clock. The Honourable R. S. Ellis, Mr. Garstin, Captain Gore, the Honourable Mr. Napier, and Captain Dyer proceeding on board, and on behalf of Lord Napier invited Sir John Lawrence to land. His Excellency then embarked in the Master Attendant's barge, which was fitted up for the occasion, accompanied by the members of Lord Napier's staff, and the Marquis of Blandford, Sir James Ferguson, Doctor Farquhar, and Colonel Lawrence (Resident at Nepal, who accompanies his brother to Ceylon). Sir John landed at the pier stairs, and was received by Colonel Fordyce and Mr. Dalrymple, who conducted him to the cradle, in which the party were rapidly pulled across the gap in the pier. On reaching the opposite end Sir John was met by Lord Napier, with whom he entered one of the saloon carriages and was pushed to the shore end of the pier. Here under a tent Lady Napier and a large assemblage of military and civil officers were assembled. Sir John Lawrence and Lord Napier drove off escorted by the Governor's body guard, via the Island, the Government House park, St. Thome and the Adyar to Guindy. Sir John left the next morning for Galle.

IRRIGATION IN MADRAS.—The Madras Government has at length adopted a measure from which great and immediate results may be expected. It has appointed a committee, consisting of the Board of Revenue, the Honourable V. Ramiangar, Mr. A. K. Puckle, Colonel Anderson, and Major Shaw Stewart, to inquire into the condition of the minor irrigation works of that Presidency. The committee is to report upon the repairs and extensions required, the agency that ought to be employed to carry out the works, and the manner in which the requisite funds should be obtained—whether by application to the Imperial treasury, or by local cess. The committee will shortly meet to take evidence. Much evidence should not be required, if only the proper witnesses are summoned. Attention to the minor irrigation works would be productive of infinitely more good to the country at large than can for many years be driven from more ambitious projects now indefinitely hung up "for want of estimates." The attention of the Madras Government was called to this subject two years ago by the Secretary of State, who expressed fear lest loss of revenue should accrue from neglect and delay in attending to the execution of all minor works of irrigation as well as of all minor roads, which the Public Works Department, being a limited establishment, were unable to attend to efficiently in consequence of their time being taken up in the execution of other larger works. Under these circumstances, the Secretary of State suggested that all minor works should be entrusted to Revenue Officers of Districts for execution. Finding his suggestion had not been acted upon, he has again drawn attention to the subject; hence the appointment of this committee.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT ON THE G.I.P. RAILWAY.—GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

A terrible accident, involving the loss of many lives, occurred on the G.I.P. Railway on the morning of January 26, about two o'clock. The through passenger train from Sholapore, comprising two saloon carriages, two second-class, six third-class, four incline brake vans, and one luggage van, left Poona on Monday night at eleven o'clock. All went well till the train reached Lanowlee, when the smaller engine was removed, and the ghaut engine attached. Between Lanowlee and Khandala the driver found he had not that control over his engine which he ought to have, and this was made the more noticeable by the dampness and slippiness of the rails, occasioned by a heavy dew. Khandala was reached without accident. The driver seems to have adopted every precaution before leaving this station to bring his engine under control; he had the wheels of two carriages "spragged," and pinned down the brakes of the engine, as well as the four incline brakes. Notwithstanding this, he had no sooner got the train in motion than he found himself powerless in any way to regulate its speed. Away it went, increasing to the rate, it is believed, of sixty miles an hour. The engine was reversed, but to no purpose; and about two o'clock the train dashed through the embankment at the end of the reversing station on the Bhore Ghaut. The engine, the four brake vans, four third-class carriages, and one second class, were forced over the embankment, and the end of one of the saloon carriages was smashed in. The third class carriages were filled with natives, of whom fourteen were killed on the spot, and thirty-six seriously injured, one of whom died soon afterwards. In one of the first-class carriages was Mr. Bodger, of Cutler, Palmer, and Co., who escaped with a wound on the head and a severe shaking; and in the other a Mr. Crisp, who escaped without injury. The engine driver and the guards jumped from the train, and were only slightly injured.

Information of the accident was at once telegraphed to Poona, Bombay, and to the agent of the company, who was at the time at Bhosawal. A special train, in which were Mr. Middleton, the District Traffic Superintendent, and Drs. Lorl, Asher, and Arnott, left Poona without a moment's delay, while in the meantime a large number of the locomotive staff from Lanowlee had set to work to extricate the dying and the dead. We believe the exertions made by No. 1 guard of the passenger train in this work, before Mr. Middleton's arrival, were most praiseworthy. The medical officer of Lanowlee was, as misfortune would have it, at Poona, having been detained there by an accident in the morning. A special train also started from Bombay as soon as practicable after the intelligence was received, conveying Dr. Eccles, the Company's medical officer, Dr. Smith, and two or three of the Company's staff.

Mr. Middleton arrived about a couple of hours after the accident occurred, and at once made arrangements for all who were seriously injured to be sent back to Poona by special train. Another train was also got in readiness to convey to Bombay all the passengers who were able to travel, and telegraphic instructions were sent for medical aid to be in readiness both at Byculia and Boree Bunder for all who might require it. The passengers reached their destination at nine o'clock in the morning—about five hours late.

Mr. Knox, who, with Col. Trevor, Consulting Engineer for Railways, had reached Bhosawal on a tour of inspection, returned by special train, and was expected to reach Lanowlee late last night.

It is due to the railway authorities to add that they have placed the fullest information at the disposal of the Press.

The accident (writes the Times of India Correspondent) is attributed entirely to the extraordinarily heavy fall of dew that night, which rendered the rails so greasy that the wheels slid along, notwithstanding all the brake power which was applied, which was in excess of what is required by the rules; for whereas they insist that there shall be one incline brake to three vehicles, there were, in this case, four incline brakes to eleven carriages, and, in addition, two wheels of one of the carriages were "spragged."

A person who has never seen a railway accident can form but little idea of the complete smash that is the result. In this instance the engine had half buried itself in the earth at least twenty-five feet from the top of the slope; the brake-vans were dashed literally to splinters, while the third-class carriage, in which most of those who were killed were riding, was turned wheels uppermost and the tops and sides smashed completely in, and the next third-class carriage on its side on the top of that; the second-class carriage, too, was broken to pieces.

No blame, it is anticipated, can be attached to any of the officials of the company, every precaution having been taken by those in charge of the train.

Miscellaneous.

GILCHRIST SCHOLARSHIP.—It is a fact worthy of notice that not a single candidate has presented himself at Bombay for examination for the Gilchrist scholarship, which enables the successful candidate to proceed to England, there to prosecute his studies. The result gives but little encouragement to philanthropic gentlemen to offer such bounties to the young men of the city.

THE HIGH COURT.—Mr. Balla Mungesh Wagle, B.A., LL.B., for some time acting Fourth Judge of the Small Cause Court at Bombay, has passed successfully the examination prescribed for an advocate of the High Court. Mr. Wagle, we believe, is the first who has become a barrister by passing an examination in India. Mr. Mahadew Govind Ranade, Assistant Professor of Literature in the Elphinstone College, is the second candidate for the same profession.

BELGAUM.—Lord Napier of Magdala and staff arrived at Belgaum on the afternoon of the 20th January. Captain Smith, mail superintendent on the Poona and Hurryhur line, had posted horses for the party at different stages on the road. His lordship visited the civil and military authorities on the 21st, and next morning the barracks and fort of Belgaum. The troops were reviewed on the evening of the 22nd; and on the 23rd his lordship left for Dharwar.

ZANZIBAR.—It will be remembered that the man Moosa, who deserted Dr. Livingstone and reported that he had been killed, was handed over to the Sultan of Johanna for such punishment as might be deemed necessary. Having undergone eight months' imprisonment in irons at Johanna, he was, in November last, sent down to Zanzibar, to Dr. Kirk, H.M.'s Acting Consul there, for further punishment or liberation. Dr. Kirk, writing to the Bombay Government, states that, in reply, he informed King Abdulla's agent that his Highness had, by the punishment inflicted on Moosa, anticipated the wish of her Majesty's Government, and that now it would be his duty to set Moosa free, but as one banished from his native land. Dr. Kirk assured the Sultan's Envoy that her Majesty's Government would receive with much satisfaction the assurance of friendship shown by his having made an example of one who had caused so much grief and anxiety through his cowardly flight and base lies. He set the prisoner Moosa at liberty, but cautioned him not to return to Johanna without the Sultan's permission.

LORD NAPIER'S VISIT TO SIND.—The Sindian has learned from a very reliable source that Lord Napier of Magdala will visit Sind towards the end of February, or very soon after the termination of his inspection of the troops in Belgaum and other adjacent stations.

AFFAIRS IN OMAN.—The change in the colour of the flag of Oman from red to white has not effected any perceptible change in the state of affairs at Muscat. The rule of the new Sultan, Azan Bin Ghes, is said to be oppressive and obnoxious to a large number of the people, who are already looking about for a successor. Syud Selim, the ex-Sultan, is said to be in Bunder Abbas, gradually collecting a following, with which he will attack Muscat when an opportunity presents itself. His followers are now said to number about three or four thousand men.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—The Deccan Herald gives currency to a rumour that Lord Napier of Magdala proceeds to England in April. He will, that paper says, be succeeded by Major-General the Hon. A. H. Gordon, C.B., Major-General Raines, C.B., being, as a matter of course, appointed to the command of the Poona division. We need scarcely state that a more popular officer, or a gentleman held in higher estimation, could scarcely have been selected for the appointment; he has served with distinction both at home and abroad, and we are sure that the Horse Guards will confirm a nomination which the army of Bombay, we might almost say, to a man has made. General Raines has won golden opinions from all ranks of men, and we are quite sure that should any emergency arise, he is the man to meet it.

A GOOD SPECULATION.—We observe it stated that an English company has received a concession from the Persian Government, conveying to them the sole right of making railways in Persia for the next twenty years. A contractor has, it is said, already left to commence at once the construction of a short line from Teheran to Rey, a fashionable suburb, where the wealthy Persians combine pleasure and devotion. Between that place and the capital a weekly passenger traffic of forty thousand souls is expected. The line is to be completed for less than £100,000, and will, it is estimated, yield a good dividend, exclusive of an 8 per cent. guarantee. We may next expect to hear of an undertaking to connect Teheran with Bussorah or some point on the route to Mecca. The enormous pilgrim and commercial traffic in that direction cannot be long overlooked.

"LORD GEORGE GORDON."—Mr. Emanuel Lord George Gordon is, we believe, a Madrassee Christian. Very possibly he may have a proportion of Eurasian blood in him. Anyway, he is what the religious organs at home would call a "reverend gentleman of colour." He has been tolerably educated, and, as many people know, has a powerful capacity for writing letters. He has been in the employ of a religious society, which is bent upon some scheme, based upon "the lion lying down with the lamb" principle, whereby, apparently, everybody is to be changed so completely that he will begin to love his neighbours, and to believe that other people's religious opinions may be as good as his own. Having, as we all know, met with conspicuous success at home, this unambitious society has extended its transactions to India, and Mr. Gordon has been employed as one of its apostles, with such success as may be. One of his three Christian names being Lord, it has, it appears, been made a feeble joke in these parts for some years to style him "Lord George Gordon.—Poona Observer.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

OFFICIAL RATES OF POSTAGE.

Referring to the regulations respecting the correspondence of commissioned officers of the army conveyed to or from the United Kingdom by British packet, published under dates Aug. 5 and Nov. 30, 1868, it is hereby notified that the definition of the term "civil employ," given in paragraph 4 of the notice of Aug. 5, has been superseded by a ruling of the Government of India, in the military department, whereby officers of the following classes are declared to be entitled to the privileged rates:—

(1.) Officers serving with regiments or corps, whether under the orders of the C. in C. or civil Governments, as well as officers on the staff of those forces.

(2.) Officers serving in departments under the C. in C., as well as those serving in the following departments, which are under the Government of India and the Governments of Madras and Bombay, viz.:—

Ordnance.	Stud.
Army commissariat.	Medical, except medical
Military account.	officers holding civil
Clothing.	charges.

(3.) Personal staff officers, whether of a military or civil functionary.

The following clause has been added to paragraph 3 of the same rules, viz.:—

"A commanding officer or head of a department, when sending a letter, is recommended to sign it twice—i.e., once as a sender, and again (cross-ways) as commanding officer or head of a department. Where it may be quite clear from the address that the officer who signs it is both the sender and the commanding officer or head of department, no surcharge will be made; but it is safer for the officer in all cases to sign it twice as above recommended, so as to leave nothing to conjecture."

PAY AND ALLOWANCES—MEDICAL SERVICE.

No. 52.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 437, dated Dec. 8 last, is published for general information:—

India-office, London, Dec. 8, 1868.

Sir,—I have received and considered in Council your Excellency's letter, No. 419, of Oct. 31, 1868.

I am still of opinion that officers of the India medical service, on first appointment, should only come into receipt of Indian pay and allowances from date of arrival within the limits of the Presidency to which they have been gazetted; but whenever they may be provided with passages on board her Majesty's Indian troop ships, they will be considered as entitled to Indian pay and allowances on landing at Bombay.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

RULES REGARDING APPLICATIONS FOR FURLOUGH.

Fort William, Jan. 11.—No. 34.—With the view of preventing the inconvenience which frequently results from the irregular manner in which applications for furlough to Europe from officers serving under the several local Governments and administrations are submitted for the sanction of the Government of India, and from their being unaccompanied by the statements of service and certificates required by the regulations, a series of rules and forms are published for the guidance of all concerned.

Care is to be taken that applications are accompanied by the prescribed documents in duplicate, as specified in the above notification, to which all the forms necessary to be used are appended.

As regards officers proceeding to England, on account of ill-health, the existing rules remain unaltered.

Preparatory leave in the case of officers proceeding on medical certificate will be granted, as hitherto, by local Governments and administrations in anticipation of the applicant appearing before the medical board of the presidency at which he may embark; and in the case of officers proceeding by Bombay or Madras, furlough on medical certificate will be granted by the Governments of those presidencies in the local Gazette, subject to confirmation by the Government of India.

Officers proceeding via Calcutta are required to submit their applications to the assistant adjutant-general, presidency division, for submission to the military department at Calcutta.

The following papers must be submitted with these applications, viz.:—Certificate of the presidency medical board; statement of service.

Officers employed in the public works department will have to submit certificate from the public works controller of the province in which they may be serving, that "so far as is known there is nothing objectionable in their accounts."

Officers arriving at Calcutta, on their way to England, either on furlough, on private affairs, or medical certificate, are required to report themselves to the assistant adjutant-general in Fort William, from whom they will obtain all necessary information for their guidance; and similar reports will, of course, be made to the proper functionaries at Madras and Bombay by officers embarking at those presidencies.

EMPLOYMENT OF STAFF CORPS OFFICERS.

Jan. 19.—The following order of the Government of India, in the military department, is published for general information:—

No. 1,079.—Minute of Council.

Military Department, Fort William, December 24, 1868.

Read—Communication from the home department, No. 4,856, dated Dec. 18, 1868, with enclosures, intimating that the services of Lieut. col. H. D. Manning, district superintendent of police, North-Western Provinces, who had desired to revert to military duty on his promotion to that rank, had been placed at the disposal of the military department.

Read also—Letter No. 1,078, of this date, to the Adj. gen., intimating the above to the C. in C., and inquiring whether H.E. can offer to Lieut. col. Manning military employment suitable to his rank.

Resolution.

The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council observes that the Right Hon. the Sec. of State has recently consented to the proposal that, instead of allowing officers of the staff corps the option of resigning their appointments in the civil department when their consolidated salary or total receipts in that department are less than the staff corps pay of their military rank, the difference between those amounts shall be passed to them, and charged to the military department; there is, therefore, no longer any reason for accepting such resignations of appointments in virtue of which, in many cases, the officers have been admitted into the staff corps.

Nor is it, in the opinion of H.E. in Council, expedient to encourage the resignations of their appointments by officers who may desire to revert to military duty, until it shall have been ascertained whether such employment is actually and at once available for them.

H.E. in Council, therefore, is pleased to modify the orders in this department, No. 1, dated Aug. 1, 1864, by deciding that, unless in cases of misconduct or unfitness for their work, no officers of the staff corps shall be allowed to resign an appointment in any department until the consent of the Government, in the military department, on whose hands the officer resigning must of course be thrown, shall have been obtained to such resignation.

A. EDEN, Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

FURLONGHS TO CIVIL SERVANTS.

Jan. 13.—The Governor General in Council having directed that whenever the total number of civil servants belonging to any province absent on furlough of any kind, or on special leave, reaches the limit of 20 per cent. on the total number employed in such province, a special report shall be submitted to the Government of India, and that the grant of further furloughs shall be stopped, except in cases of certified sickness, or in place of officers returning from furlough, it is notified that furloughs and special leave will be allotted as soon as possible after the first day of every half-year commencing with the 1st of January and 1st of July in each year.

2. Such allotment shall include all furloughs and special leave which may be actually available; and also those which may be expected to become available by the return of absentees during the first four months of the half-year.

3. In order to enable an officer to avail himself during any half-year of the preferential right allowed by Section XV. of the Furlough Rules of 1868, his application must be submitted to Government before the first day of the half-year in which he wishes to take the furlough; that is to say, before the 1st of January or the 1st of July, as the case may be.

4. If, after all the applications for furlough and special leave which may be received before such date shall have been complied with, or otherwise disposed of, any furloughs or leave remain available or become available within the half-year, they will be allotted on application made in the course of the half-year, on the condition that the applicants will avail themselves of such furloughs or leave, or of subsidiary leave preparatory thereto, before the close of the half-year.

5. The fact of an officer having applied for, and failed to obtain, a furlough or special leave in one half-year, will not give him a preferential claim for the next half-year, beyond that which he may have under Section XV. of the Rules.

6. An officer shall be bound to avail himself of the furlough or special leave assigned to him, or of leave preparatory to the same, within the half-year in which such furlough or special leave may be granted to him; failing which the assignment shall be cancelled, and the furlough or leave considered available for the applicants of the next half-year.

7. Should an officer to whom a furlough or leave has been assigned during any half-year fail to avail himself of it before the close of the half-year, and apply for the assignment to him of another furlough or leave to be taken by him during the next half-year, his name shall be placed last on the list of applicants, notwithstanding that under Rule XV. he would be entitled to preference over other applicants.

8. Applications for furlough or leave on medical certificate will be exceptionally treated.

9. Applications for furlough or special leave should contain the following particulars, viz.:—

I. Period for which furlough or special leave is required.

II. Date on which the officer applying wishes to be relieved and to take subsidiary leave.

III. The port from which he intends to embark.

IV. Whether the furlough applied for is on private affairs, or on medical certificate; in the latter case the application must be accompanied by a medical certificate, and a statement of case from the applicant's medical attendant, and a certificate from the standing medical committee at the Presidency.

10. All applications for furlough or special leave should be forwarded through the Accountant-general, Bengal, who should lose no time in transmitting them to the Government, with a certificate stating whether they can be granted, and if so, under what rule. He should also specify the amount of furlough which the applicant has to his credit under Section III. of the Rules. In reporting on applications for furlough, the Accountant-general should also state whether the applicant is entitled to retain a lien on his appointment in the event of a furlough being granted to him.

Additional Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

ARMY HOSPITAL EQUIPMENTS.

The Governor-general in Council is pleased to appoint the undermentioned officers to form a committee to consider and report on certain proposals connected with the subject of army hospital equipments for India, and of the best mode of conveying sick and wounded men on field service:—President: Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals W. #### ADVANCES FOR HOUSES.

Jan. 16.—No. 21.—The system of making State advances of money to officers of the army for the purpose of enabling them to purchase houses for their personal residence in military cantonments, not having been found in practice to work well or to the public advantage, the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council is pleased, in modification of G.O. of H.E. in Council No. 985 of Oct. 15, 1867, to restrict the issue of advances to those cases where officers, on the formation of new cantonments, or when suitable accommodation is not obtainable in existing military stations at reasonable rents, desire to erect houses for their own accommodation.

In all other respects the G.O. above mentioned remains unaltered.

ALLOWANCES ON LEAVE.

Jan. 6.—No. 122.—Read again—

Financial resolution No. 2,703, dated Sept. 29, 1868, ruling that uncovenanted officers absent on privilege leave may draw their full pay during such absence, the acting allowances due to their substitutes being paid out of the general revenue.

Read—

A letter from the Officiating Accountant General, British Burmah, No. 3,640, dated Oct. 31 last, inquiring whether the substitute of an uncovenanted ministerial officer absent on privilege leave shall be allowed full salary during the permanent incumbent's absence, in the event of a substitute not being obtainable on less pay, or only acting allowance under the rules applicable to officers of that class.

Resolution—The Governor General in Council observes that the existing rules for the grant of acting allowances to uncovenanted ministerial officers are clearly not applicable now to the cases of substitutes for officers of this class absent on privilege leave, seeing that under orders of Sept. 29 last, uncovenanted officers generally are allowed to draw full pay during privilege leave, leaving no portion of their salaries available for their substitutes. H.E. in Council is accordingly pleased, in supersession of all previous orders on the subject, to rule that an uncovenanted officer officiating for another uncovenanted officer shall be allowed, in addition to the full salary of his own appointment, a deputation allowance calculated at the following rates, viz., at the rate of 20 per cent. upon the monthly salary of the appointment officiated in, in all cases in which the salary of such appointment shall not exceed Rs. 2,000 per mensem, and in respect to all appointments of which the salary shall be more than Rs. 2,000 per mensem at the rate of 20 per cent. upon Rs. 2,000, and of 10 per cent. on the remainder.

2. When the officiating officer is one who holds no substantive appointment, the deputation allowance shall be at the rate of 50 per cent. on the salary of the appointment officiated in. These acting allowances will be granted only when it is found necessary formally to appoint a substitute for an absentee. It is not intended that any change of practice should be made in this respect.

Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the several departments, governments, and provincial accountants general and deputy accountants general in independent charge, and to the Comptroller General of Accounts, with an intimation to the Officiating Accountant General, British Burmah, that if, in the particular case referred to in his letter above quoted, the acting allowance sanctioned in this resolution is not sufficient to procure a substitute, the privilege leave applied for must be refused as incompatible with the exigencies of the public service.

PAY, &c., OF DEPARTMENTAL OFFICERS ON FURLOUGH.

Fort William, Jan. 6.—No. 6.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 405, dated Nov. 24 last, are published for general information:—

* Mr. A. Ambercrombie, for 1 year; Mr. E. C. Craster, for 1 year; Mr. E. Drummond, for 2 years; Mr. W. S. Wells, for 2 years; Mr. F. J. Alexander, for 1 year, 11 months, and 3 days; Mr. G. S. Park, for 2 years; Mr. L. B. B. King, for 2 years.

† Messrs. F. J. Cockburn, J. J. Grey, W. J. Herschel, H. B. Simson, E. D. Lockwood, W. J. Money, W. H. Henderson, V. T. Taylor, F. M. Halliday, and T. T. Allen.

"4. The concluding paragraphs of your despatch raised a question as to the amount of pay and allowances which should be drawn by departmental officers who may be permitted to proceed to England for the purpose of acquiring professional information. You question the advisability of continuing full regimental and staff allowances to such officers in addition to the other advantages which they enjoy; and you express an opinion that it would be a convenient and liberal arrangement to grant them the full Indian pay and allowances of their rank with half staff salary, the remaining moiety being issued to the officer officiating for them during their absence.

"5. I concur in this opinion; and the rule you suggest may be notified to the service, and made applicable to all officers who may in future proceed to this country on special duty. It must, however, be distinctly understood that in no case will permission be accorded to officers to visit England on duty, unless the exigencies of the public service imperatively require it."

No. 8.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify for general information that commissioned officers holding the appointment of barrack-masters will be required to vacate their appointments when proceeding on furlough to England, as these situations are not considered staff appointments tenable by an officer absent on leave out of India.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY. — A special general meeting of this company was held on Monday, at the office, Moorgate-street; Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair. The Chairman explained that the object of the meeting was to consider and, if approved, to confirm the resolution of the last meeting with reference to the arrangement entered into with the British India Telegraph Company. Since that meeting, at the request of the Board, he had been in communication with Sir James Anderson, who at once intimated the desire of his company to meet the views expressed, and the more readily as they were in entire accordance with the intentions of that company and with the spirit of the agreement. The chairman then read an official letter from Messrs. Baxter, Rose, and Norton, the solicitors of the British India Telegraph Company, from which it appeared that the purchase of the Telegraph to India line would be made so soon as the cable was laid to India. In acknowledging the improvement effected by the purchase being made absolute instead of conditional, he said that the suggestion had been met by the new company in the most fair and friendly spirit. (Hear, hear.) The communication from Messrs. Baxter, Rose, and Norton was ordered to be entered on the minutes; and resolutions were unanimously passed confirming the resolutions passed at the special meeting on the 5th inst. to the effect that the heads of agreement provisionally entered into by the Board with the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company be approved and adopted; and that £610, being the available surplus balance of the reserve fund after providing for current expenses to the 30th of June, 1870, be divided rateably among the shareholders.

THE GOLD DIGGINGS OF TIBET.—The plain is covered by a Tibetan standing camp, very large and very merry, for as the pundit approached he heard the singing of the diggers and their families at work. The vast camp is at the height of 16,330 feet above the sea, and is swept by an intensely cold wind. The people wear furs in winter, and their tents are raised in hollows dug in the earth to keep off the wind. The diggers, nevertheless, prefer to work in winter, when there are 600 tents, as the frozen soil does not then trouble them by falling in. There is no wood, dried dung only is used as fuel, and the water is so brackish that it is not drunk till it has been frozen and re-melted. All Tibetans sleep with their knees drawn to their heads, and resting on their knees and elbows, while all their clothing is on their backs, to economise heat. They live on yaks' flesh, barley cakes, buttermilk, and tea stewed with butter. The chief lived in a large circular tent, twenty-five feet in diameter, with two poles pitched in a pit eight feet below the ground. It was made of black yaks' hair. His ten servants lived in small tents around. He himself seemed to act as the Lama, and sat beside a box containing writing materials, and two wooden bowls for tea and chung, or whisky. The Tibetan word for gold is sar, and a sarpon, or gold commissioner, superintends the diggings, with an assistant supervising the outturn of each field. Anyone may dig on paying an annual tax of two-fifths of an ounce of gold. The diggers are chiefly of the Chung province round Shigatze. The price of gold was rather less than £3 an ounce. There were two goldsmiths in the place. The part being worked in August, 1867, was "a great excavation from 10 to 200 paces in width, and 26 feet in depth," and about a mile in length. The bottom, like the tents, is reached by steps and slopes. The digging is carried on by a long-handled kind of spade and sometimes an iron hoe; the iron is brought from Besahir and Ladakh, and there is one blacksmith to repair the tools. A stream runs through the bottom of the excavation, making it a quagmire; but it is dammed up by the diggers, who allow it to escape down a slope on to a cloth placed on an uneven bottom, which receives the gold. One man carries the gold earth to the channel, and another lets the water go down.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—LARGE EXPORTS OF SILVER TO BOMBAY.—Exports of bullion per the following P. and O. steamers have been effected:—From Southampton: Bombay, per Massilia, Feb. 6, gold £13,900, silver £82,000. Per Nyanza, Feb. 13, gold £47,200, silver £22,400. From Marseilles, per Bangalore, Feb. 7: To Bombay, silver £101,240. Per Tanjore, Feb. 14, silver £429,800. The exports to the other Presidencies, per the above vessels, were small. A very large export of silver to Bombay in the present month will be remarked, as it reached £635,000.

The "CALCUTTA."—The abandoned vessel, the Calcutta, found a few days ago ten miles south of the Eddystone, is at present lying in the basin at Keyham. She is in charge of the new captain appointed by the owners. She had on board 275 miles of cable, a large portion of which was thrown overboard to lighten the ship. From the time that the Calcutta was deserted until her arrival in the basin she was plundered of everything portable, and great complaints on the subject have been made. It will be remembered a lifeboat was washed ashore at Mullion; it had twenty-one occupants, and no information respecting their fate has yet been received; it is thought that they have been picked up. The headless body of a man, supposed to be that of the captain of the Calcutta, has been picked up at Mullion. The value of the ship and her cargo is said to be a quarter of a million sterling. The ship is insured at Lloyd's for a tenth of the sum; the cargo is uninsured. The total number of lives lost in consequence of the disasters to the Calcutta and the Emma were nineteen.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).—The report of the above Company has been issued. It states that the works for the construction of the line are being pressed forward with the utmost vigour and despatch, and that Messrs. Siemens are still sanguine of being able to open the line at the end of the present year. In consequence of the proceedings taken at the Vienna Convention, which resulted in the reduction of the telegraph charge to India by Constantinople from £5. 1s. to £2. 17s. 9d., the directors decided to enter into negotiations with the various Governments concerned. These negotiations so far have been successful, the British Government having agreed to admit the company to a share of its telegraphic receipts in Persia, to support the company's representative at Teheran in his arrangements with the Persian Government, and to improve the communication between Teheran and Bushire. The directors hope that the receipts which will accrue to the company from these arrangements will compensate any reduction in the total charge per message which it may be deemed expedient to make.

EASTERN TURKISTAN.—Of the present Russian proceedings in Eastern Turkistan we are not very well informed. Our latest authentic information states that in consequence of persistent demonstrations on the part of Russia against the Kashgar territory on the upper Karyn, undertaken, as asserted, merely in the interests of trade, Yacub Kushbegee has despatched his brother, Shadi Mirza, to Petersburg to negotiate a treaty with the Emperor somewhat in the spirit of those already concluded with Kokhan and Bokhara. As Russia has a right by the treaty of Peking to a factory at Kashgar, and is bent upon securing the exclusive control of the Central Asian market, there can be little doubt but that she will insist, as the price of her forbearance, on realising this right at once under the present independent Government, which, indeed, may be held to have inherited from China the obligations attaching to the territory it has conquered; and it is further highly probable that subordinate factories with Russian vice-consuls will ere long be established both in Yarkand and Ilchi (Khoten), the Kuen-luen range being thus the geographical point where British and Russian influence in Central Asia will first come into direct contact. In this position of affairs, and while so much uncertainty hangs over the future, it is satisfactory to know that two Englishmen are at present in Yarkand, in an unofficial capacity, but laying the foundation, as it may be hoped, of a future amicable intercourse with the country. One of these enterprising travellers is Mr. Shaw, a tea planter of Kangra, who can if permitted, supply the Yarkandis with their favourite beverage at half the price at which tea can be imported from China through Russia—the direct trade since the revolt of Turkistan being entirely put a stop to; and the other is Mr. Hayward, a retired officer, who is exploring the Pamir Steppe, the upper basin of the Oxus, and the valley of Chitral, under the auspices of the Royal Geographical Society. It is to be hoped that accurate and interesting intelligence of Eastern Turkistan will soon reach England from these gentlemen, and in the meantime it is a subject for congratulation that a native consular agent, called in Turkistan an Ak-sakal or "white-beard," has been appointed by the Government of India to reside at Yarkand for the purpose of encouraging commerce and protecting the interests of the Cashmere and Indian traders who frequent that city.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A SILK SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.—A meeting was held on Thursday, at 12, Gresham-street, City, convened by circular signed by Mr. David Chadwick, M.P., and Mr. F. Dickens, to consider the desirability of forming a Silk Supply Association similar in character to the Cotton Supply of Manchester. Among others present were Mr. W. C. Brocklehurst, M.P., Mr. Thomas Dickens, Sir Daniel Cooper, Dr. Campbell, Professor Leone Levi, Dr. Mann, Dr. Hyde Clarke, Mr. Vavasour, and a number of gentlemen interested in, or connected with the silk trade. Mr. Chadwick having been appointed chairman, explained that hearing of the scarcity of silk, he had proposed as a remedy the formation of an association like the Cotton Supply Association, as united action in getting an increased supply of silk was the only true remedy. Mr. Dickens and other gentlemen had kindly co-operated to call this meeting, and they would like to hear suggestions on the subject. If an association were formed it was proposed that its objects should be to stimulate the production of silk in every country where the mulberry tree is capable of giving food to silkworms; to encourage the introduction and exchange of the best kind of silkworms in the silk-producing districts; to offer practical suggestions and encouragement to the producers of silk for improving its quality, securing a better classification, and insuring greater care in reeling; to promote the cultivation of silk in the various silk-producing districts of India, where the supply has not recently increased, and in other parts of India where the cultivation of the silk-worm has almost ceased; to promote the exportation of cocoons from countries not well able to reel them; and to communicate with the Governmental departments, and to obtain the aid of the Consular agents in all foreign countries to promote and extend the cultivation of silk. Mr. Dickens cordially recommended the formation of a Silk Supply Association. Mr. Brocklehurst, M.P., said it was hardly necessary to put forward arguments in favour of an association the advantages of which were self-evident. He pointed out that the diminished imports were affected since 1860 by the French intercepting silk at Marseilles for Lyons, instead of sending to England for it; but, though the French could beat us at manufacturing the silk, they were obliged to come to the English "throwsters" for their material. Mr. Howell, representing a London silk house, concurred in the policy of increasing the supply of the raw material in every possible way. Sir D. Cooper gave an encouraging account of the silk-producing capabilities of the east coast of Australia. Dr. Campbell followed in a similar strain in reference to Nepal and the neighbouring districts in India. Several other gentlemen addressed the meeting, the result being the formation of a Silk Supply Society on the basis indicated, and the appointment of Mr. Thomas Dickens as president; Mr. Chadwick, M.P., hon. treasurer; Mr. P. L. Simmonds, hon. secretary; and a committee of management, including, besides merchants and manufacturers, the Lord Mayor of London, the mayors of Winchester, Macclesfield, and Congleton, and the representatives of commercial Chambers interested in the silk trade.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Thursday, Feb. 18.—THE ABYSSINIAN WAR AND THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.—Mr. FAWCETT asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it was true that India advanced £6,589,100 towards the expenses of the Abyssinian war; whether of this amount £3,089,100 was still due by England to India; whether it was true that India had to borrow a portion of the amount thus advanced from the Bank of Bengal; and, if so, whether her Majesty's Government intended that England or India should pay the interest due upon that loan.—The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER said, on the 17th December last the Government of India telegraphed that they had expended for the purposes of the Abyssinian expedition on behalf of her Majesty's Government the sum of seven millions. Since that time he had had no official communication with the Government of India. He did not know what the financial procedure of the Government of India had been, and therefore he could not speak of their being under an advance from the Bank of Bengal. The sum already paid to the Government of India was four millions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Friday, Feb. 19.—EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—Mr. G. DUFF obtained leave to bring in a Bill for the confirmation and execution of arrangements made between the Secretary of State in Council of India and the East India Irrigation and Canal Company, and for other purposes connected therewith.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Times, commenting on a letter from Mr. John Fowler, the engineer, upon the Suez Canal, observes that Mr. Fowler, looking at the matter professionally, shows that as a piece of engineering the Suez Canal was not only never an impossibility, but never even so much as a difficulty. The works themselves happen to be peculiarly simple, while the soil is favourable instead of unfavourable to their execution. The burden of the task consisted in its prodigious magnitude, aggravated by the effects of the climate, and, above all, by the want of fresh water; otherwise, far greater mechanical feats have been done in Egypt itself, to say nothing of other countries. The Suez Canal can be made, and before 1869 comes to an end M. de Lesseps will probably have made it. Much, however, yet remains to be proved. Granting that the mere channel will be duly excavated and the waterway rendered passable, can the navigation be permanently maintained, and will the tolls of the canal pay for the maintenance? The several points on which the answers to these questions turn are considered by Mr. Fowler in detail, and if his conclusions leave some doubt as to the result, they certainly do not represent the practical success of the enterprise as impossible or even unlikely. Mr. Fowler's general conclusion, then, is, that M. de Lesseps will actually make the Suez Canal, but the enterprise will cost more than was anticipated and produce less. With regard to the political bearings of the undertaking, the Times observes that if we in this country believed that the Suez Canal was "a sword to pierce the breastplate of England," it was because Frenchmen told us so. How this British breastplate was supposed to be worn, and how the French sword was to pierce it, were mysteries which we ourselves could never rightly fathom; but, at all events, the contingency, whether real or unreal, has been at length averted by the politic arrangements of the Viceroy, and the security thus accorded to all nationalities together would, we are assured, be satisfactory to Lord Palmerston himself were that jealous guardian of British interests still alive.

AN INDEPENDENT AFGHANISTAN.

The Times sees one position common to all the practical views that have been maintained on this difficult question. This position is the necessity of preserving the independence of Afghanistan. The extreme school of Anglo-Indian alarmists is prepared to secure this paramount object by "the forward game" of armed occupation; still even this school would not advocate such an occupation as a permanent measure, but only as a temporary safeguard. There are others who profess to regard the advance of Russia with gigantic strides towards our Indian frontier with supreme indifference, but it is on the assumption that Russia will accept the Oxus for her permanent frontier, as the Roman Empire remained circumscribed for centuries within the boundaries traced by Augustus. Between the war party and the party of persistent inaction there are, of course, many varieties of opinion, one of which is represented by the letter of "Blue Pamphlet," which we publish this morning, and another in that of Mr. Wyllie, which appeared in our columns on Wednesday last. Both of these gentlemen, though writing from different points of view, consider it the duty of the Indian Government to oppose by "wise precautions" of a pacific kind the entrance of Russia into Afghanistan. We have before adopted the same general conclusion, and we now add that, in our judgment, the settlement of the Central Asian question depends on the virtual neutralisation of this Asiatic Switzerland. To deny or disparage the military importance of a country which commands all the practicable approaches by land to India appears to us sheer infatuation. It is scarcely less impossible to doubt that what Alexander and a score of later conquerors have accomplished without the encumbrances, but also without the resources of a modern army, could be accomplished by Russian generals, unless confronted by a power superior to any which Asiatic races could bring into the field. There is little meaning in the assertion that at such a distance from the base of their operations, Russian troops would arrive "exhausted" on the plains of India to meet an easy defeat. Cabul is not so far, even in distance, from Russia as it was from Macedonia, yet the Macedonian phalanx was as invincible in the heart of Asia as it had been at the Granicus, and the modern has vast advantages over the ancient invader. Russia has not merely been erecting military posts at Turkestan; she has been founding an empire, and if she really contemplates another step in advance, she will take care to make the ground firm behind her. In short, Turkestan itself will be her base of operations, and she will organise a host of Asiatic levies, equipped with European arms, before venturing to challenge British supremacy in India. But we must not allow ourselves to dwell on possibilities so remote, and, if realised, so disastrous to civilisation. We have no reason to believe, and we do not believe, that Russia entertains aggressive designs against British India. The point, and the only point, on which it is proper to insist is, that Afghanistan would be worthless to her except for the purpose of executing such designs, as it would be worthless to us except for that of repelling them. The statesmanlike inference surely is, that at a crisis so favourable as the present England and Russia, instead of plotting against each other, should come to some common understanding respecting Afghanistan.

OFFICERS FOR FAMINE RELIEF WORKS.—The Lieutenant Governor of the N.W. Provinces having called for the services of a certain number of officers and men to supervise drainage and other works in the Meerut district, should the necessity arise for giving employment to large numbers of the distressed population, the Major-General commanding the division has invited officers doing general duty to come forward to undertake the management of famine relief works, under the advice and control of an experienced engineer staff. The qualifications are, says the Delhi Gazette, "energy, tact, and kindness towards the natives, and a very moderate knowledge of arithmetic." The officers approved of will be temporarily appointed 3rd grade assistant engineers, with a staff salary of Rs. 150 per mensem. Officers commanding British regiments in the division, including the Royal Artillery, are invited to recommend their own officers on the above terms, also picked soldiers, who have a sufficient knowledge of Hindustani to form a certain proportion of the supervising establishment. Sergeants will receive a staff salary of Rs. 50 per month, and corporals and privates Rs. 30, and be provided with tents.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FURLOUGH RULES.—The Pioneer regrets to learn that one of Sir Stafford Northcote's last acts was to refer the uncovenanted service leave rules to this country for re-consideration. Our contemporary presumes the report of the committee of revision had been found too liberal, trusts the Government of India will adhere firmly to its original views, and doubts not that the Duke of Argyll will understand that the prodigal generosity of the leave rules granted to the covenanted services has made stinginess in those for the uncovenanted absurd and impossible.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just ready, in Two Vols., 8vo., £1. 8s.

MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE OF FRANCIS ATTERBURY, D.D., BISHOP OF ROCHESTER. With his DISTINGUISHED CONTEMPORARIES, chiefly from the Atterbury and Stuart Papers. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, —Baronius, Ciconius, Aubrey, Spondanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Pauli, Xaender, Dollinger, Rank, Carlella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

In Two Vols., post 8vo., price £1. 1s.

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Second Edition. In 8vo., pp. xxiv, and 439, price 12s. 6d.

THE FIRST AGE OF CHRISTIANITY AND THE CHURCH. By JOHN IGNATIUS DOLLINGER, D.D., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Munich, &c., &c. Translated from the German by HENRY NUTCOMBE OXENHAM, M.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford.

"Every ray is collected, as it were, by a lens, and thrown upon the Sacred text. The work is so interesting, that it is no easy matter to lay it down. The translation is as easy to read as if it were an original book."—Weekly Register.

"This book abounds in wise and interesting teachings."—Examiner.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE, from the Death of Aurungzeb to the Overthrow of the Mahratta Power. By HENRY GEORGE KEENE, of the Bengal Civil Service.

This work fills up a blank between the ending of Elphinstone's and the commencement of Thornton's Histories.

Third Edition. One Volume, 8vo., with Map, price 12s.

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

In Two Vols., 8vo., price 16s. each.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains has been taken in its narration.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—
1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

In 8vo., price 7s. 6d.

THE HISTORY OF CHESS, from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.
